He saw her and stopped. There wasn't much of her but what there was had lovely brown hair and a small, happy mouth. She was sitting on one of the benches watching what were pigeons or doves, or perhaps both. Jud didn't know. All he knew was that he couldn't stand there watching her forever. Much as he would have liked to.

He hurried on, and after he passed her, he knew something else. Knew it as surely as he knew that he was Jud Draper and that he had a bum leg. He knew that no matter how far he went or how many lifetimes he spent going there, he would never see anyone half as lovely as she!

Which was, of course, ridiculous. You might, in the course of events, see a pretty girl, even an uncommonly pretty girl on a park bench. And you might, perhaps, decide that she'd be exceptionally swell company on a dance floor or around the festive bowl or on the afterdeck of a yacht. But a decision like that didn't throw dynamite into your heartbeat. It didn't make you want to pull up trees and push over buildings. And that was what Jud felt like doing. Game leg, cane and all.

He could, he knew, do the conventional thing. He could walk right up to the girl and mutter, "I beg your pardon, but didn't we meet at—" and he would garble the last word into an unrecognizable hash. To which, if Jud were any judge of women, the girl would say, "On your way, John Silver, on your way!"

And quite right, too. But that didn't butter any toast. And there would be no point in attempting to follow her, find out where she lived. The bum leg couldn't be depended on for that sort of effort. Suddenly he remembered the doctor and his counsel concerning "coo-rash, deeg-neety an' hu-more." He turned and went back towards the girl. This time he didn't stop and look at her. But apparently he didn't pay as much attention to his walking as he should have. For when he was just abreast of her, the heel of his cane slipped from the board and landed in a puddle, sending a fine spray of muddy water at the bench and at the girl.

"Oh!" she exclaimed, and covered her face with her hands. Instantly Jud's good knee was supporting him on the bench beside her and he was taking over the job of holding her head and tenderly demanding, "Where?"

The girl hesitated and then she said, "I think it's this one." And she pointed to her left eye.

Expertly Jud whipped a clean handkerchief from the pocket of his coat.

"Just a second," he promised her confidently, "and everything will be under control." But it took more than a second before Jud poked his handkerchief back into place and twisted into a more conventional position on the bench. She was lovelier than he had thought. "I'm glad," he told her. "I was worried. A thing like that," he informed her profoundly, "can be very serious."

The girl nodded. "I know," she agreed. "My grandmother caught a cinder in her eye on her first train trip. And sixty-four years later she died in bed."

When they had finished laughing, Jud said, "I'm Jud Draper."

"Not," the girl demanded, "Jud Draper of the U. S. A?"

Jud bowed. "The very same," he told her simply.

The girl held out her hand. "I'm Carolyn Hughes."

"Haryuh, Carolyn?" said Jud.

"Haryuh, Jud?" said Carolyn.

"A little worried," he admitted. "I'd thought of mentioning lunch."

"And," Carolyn inquired, "something stands in the way?"

"Yes," he confessed. He reached for his stick and stood up. "A guilty conscience," he informed her. "I've got a hunch—no, that isn't right—I've got a conviction that you and I are going to see a lot more of each other. And I don't want to start off on the wrong foot." He paused uneasily and then he blurted, "Carolyn, that wasn't any accident. I splashed that mud in your eye on purpose!"

Carolyn smiled and stood up. "I know," she told him as she linked her arm in his. "I know, Jud, but it missed me!"

DON'T LET YOUR $$ BECOME A 'TRAMP'

There is a big difference in Dollars.

There is the "Tramp" dollar--the dollar that is spent away from home. Then there is the "Home" dollar with its "home" circulation, "home" benefits and "home" profits.

Though both of these dollars are marked "One Hundred Cents" the "home" dollar continues to multiply itself--"at home"--for community interests are mutual. Not so with the "tramp dollar"--once spent it is gone forever.

The success of St. Hilaire and its surrounding territory contributes to the success of everybody in it. A prosperous town rests on the individual prosperity.

The advantage to you of spending your doll- in St. Hilaire is far greater than the "Tramp" dollar can buy--even if it bought a hundred cents worth--and which it cannot possibly do, because the other fellow in the out-of-town field must make a profit.

There is big truth in this, worthy of your serious thought. It pays to trade at home with your "home" dollar.

Lightning Kills Man Melts Chain On Watch

Dawson--Killed by lightning stroke while in a pasture after a cows, Lewis G. Larson, age 64 years, was found with his body badly burned, his clothes and shoes torn, and the heavy chain on his watch melted. Larson's wife became alarmed at his failure to return from the pasture, where he had gone to fetch his cows, and called her son, Lewis, to look for him. The boy found his father. His clothes and shoes were ripped in a number of places as though he had been in an accident. His watch was found the next day. It had stopped at the time he was struck by the lightning, and the heavy chain attached to it was completely melted.

Rye Stalks Cut Second Week In June Over 7 Feet

Hutchinson--Rye that stands more than 7 feet high the second week in June, has been brought into Hutchinson by Ed Chastek, farmer near Lamson. The stalks which he picked at random from his field ranged up to 7 feet and a half inches tall. That certainly is some tall rye, but it is not a tall story, as the rye is on display here for inspection by the skeptical. Chastek states that nearly all of his field is just as tall.

So Wet In Litchfield That Four Ducks Drown

Litchfield--If you don't think it has rained recently, this story should convince you. 4 young ducks at the L. J. Pankaka place here drowned in an early morning downpour recently. They were standing on high ground but with their heads up found too little air between sheets of rain and finally succumbed. Included among them was a freak four-legged duck hatched about a month ago. All were in the "down" stage.

Cafe Owner Knocks Out Set Peddler With Club

Worthington--A crew of itinerant photographic portrait salesmen aroused the ire of business men here recently, and their visit was climaxed when a restaurant proprietor took the law in his own hands and cracked one of the salesmen over the head with a log knocking him "cold". One of the crew of 14 men entered the small cafe of Everett Phillips, refusing to leave when requested, unless an order was secured for his photos. Returning again, he took a seat at the counter and again tired his selling methods on a waitress, and again flatly refusing to leave. Phillips picked up a stock and reaching over the counter, put him in an extremely unconscious condition and dragged him out. Later the crew came in and tried to bluff Phillips into making a settlement to avoid arrest, but finding their bluff fail, they left.

Discontent Made Progress

It has been man's discontent with his lot that has made all progress. Discontent alone leads to endeavor. The pioneers who settled the United States and Canada were those who rebelled against their home conditions and repression and struck out for freedom of body and mind. Scientific advances are made solely by minds that are impatient with our limited knowledge. There is, however, a vast difference between the discontents and the malcontents.—Detroit News.

Conscience

Conscience is the mental faculty which decides between right and wrong, and while generally regarded as giving decisions intuitively, many authorities believe that in all moral judgments there is implied reference to moral laws. Conscience may be relied upon if it is kept in active use, but as in the case with other things, if not used it becomes atrophied.

Chinese Dentists Strong

Until recently Chinese dentists were trained to extract any tooth from a patient's mouth without using instruments and solely by the strength in their fingers and were so trained for this by repeated extraction of wooden pegs driven into a board. The muscles of their hands and fingers were so developed that this was possible.

Old Dobbin Still Useful on Farm

Twenty Thousand Horses Will Be Needed in New York, This Year.

By Prof. M. W. Harper, New York State College of Agriculture—WNU Service.

Despite cogs, wheels, pulleys, and other evidences of the machine age, the demand for ol' Dobbin remains steady. In the spring of 1934, 20,000 work horses were in demand on New York farms. The demand promises to be greater, and the supply less next spring.

New York farmers now have about 300,000 horses. Since the average working life of a horse is about fifteen years, about 20,000 horses will pass the age of usefulness within one year and a like number will be needed as replacements. To meet this demand, less than 5,000 home-bred colts are coming into the working age, and farmers in the Empire state must look to other states to buy about 15,000 horses. The United States has about 17,000,000 horses and mules. Replacements call for more than 1,000,000 colts of working age, but only one-half of this number can be had.

Because of the small supply, prices are high and will be still higher before enough horses can be raised to meet the constant demand. Some farmers can raise horses needed for replacements.

Legumes Check Nitrogen Loss in the Corn Crops

Although Illinois' corn crop this year was the smallest in 61 years, it removed so much nitrogen from the soil that it would take more than 21 million dollars' worth of nitrate of soda to replace it, according to F. H. Crane, assistant chief in soil fertility at the college of agriculture, University of Illinois. For every 75 bushels of corn that are taken off the land, a quarter of a ton of nitrate of soda costing around $10 would be needed to put back the nitrogen that had been removed. The past year's corn crop is estimated at 160,816,000 bushels.

Fortunately, farmers do not have to buy this 21 million dollars' worth of nitrate of soda, for they can replace the lost nitrogen cheaply through the use of legumes for soil improvement or for feed crops, provided the manure is taken care of in the latter case, Mr. Crane pointed out.

In fact, the economic solution of many problems of soil management depends almost wholly on making full and proper use of the assistance plants can give, he explained.

Sorghum Seed Used as Feed With Other Grain

Sweet sorghum seed contains considerable tannin which makes it astringent. Its feeding value is only about two-thirds as much per pound as seed from the grain sorghums like kafir, milo maize and feterita. It can be fed to live stock as a part of other grain mixtures. In three trials at the Kansas experiment station, says a report, pigs fed ground sorghum seed with protein rich supplement gain 1.2 pounds daily, compared with 1.6 pounds for pigs fed ground corn in place of sorghum and 1.49 pounds for others fed on ground kafir. In these trials ground sorghum was worth only 63 per cent as much per 100 pounds as ground corn and only 70 per cent as much as ground kafir.

Making Concrete Block

A good quality concrete block can be made of a mixture of one part cement to two and a half parts of sand and three parts crushed stone or screened pebbles not over a three-quarter inch in diameter. To make a cubic yard of finished concrete of this mixture will take six and a half sacks of cement, three-fifths of a cubic yard of sand and a three-quarter cubic yard of crushed stone or pebbles. This amount of concrete will make somewhat over 60 blocks 8 by 16 inches with air spaces amounting to 33 per cent of the total volume. Bank run gravel should not be used for concrete blocks unless it is known to contain the correct proportions of sand and pebbles for concrete of maximum density.

Mexican Dog Once Large

The Mexican hairless dog of another age is said to have stood four feet high at the shoulder, in fact—larger than any existing breed of dog today. It was supposed to have had an elephant-like hide, great tusks and powerful jaws hung from a heavy long skull.

MAPS FEATURE NAME OF PONCE DE LEON

Famed Spanish Explorer Hero of Caribbean.

Washington.—Excavations beneath the Cust Blanca in San Juan, Puerto Rico, have revealed ancient foundations, once part of Ponce de Leon's palace. The present structure, though popularly known as his residence, was built a few years after his death.

"Modern biographers have neglected Juan Ponce de Leon," says the National Geographic society. "He is mentioned only occasionally in the documents and records of his day; but the events of his life are written deep in the geography of the New world he helped to create. His sturdy figure stands in sculpture in the city square in San Juan and again in St Augustine. His name appears on every map of the Caribbean. There is San Juan, capital of Puerto Rico; Ponce the second town of importance in the same island; and Ponce de Leon bay cut into the southern tip of Florida.

Port of Riches.

"Ponce de Leon probably sailed westward with Columbus on his second voyage in 1493. On their way to Hispaniola t(he island of Haiti) they coasted past the shores of Puerto Rico, giving the young soldier a first glimpse of his future home. Trained in the Moorish wars, John Ponce was successful in subduing the natives of Hispaniola, and was shortly made governor of Higuey, the island's eastern province. Frim his headquarters on the east coast he could look across the Mona channel to the blue peaks of Puerto Rico. Rumors of gold, hidden in those mountains, lured him across the channel. There he found rich lands, friendly Indians, and the promised gold. With this newly acquired wealth it was easy for him to secure appointment as governor of the island. To him it was truly 'Puerto Rico'—'Port of Riches'—and so he named it.

"By enslaving the Indians and exploiting the island's natural resources, John Ponce soon amassed a fortune. He built and fortified the town of San Juan, erected a magnificent palace overlooking the harbor, and ruled his lands sternly. His first ally in all campaigns was a remarkable dog named Bercerillo. This bloodhound was more feared by the Indians than was his master. It was a great blow to John Ponce when Bercedillo was killed in an encounter with the Caribs of Guadaloupe.

Sought Fountain of Youth.

"A change in political parties deprived the governor of office. New rumors had reached his ears, not of gold this time, but of a fountain of youth, which the Indians said was on the island of Bimini, to the north.

"So John Ponce fitted out three ships and sailed forth on his romantic search. He cruised past the Bahamas, found no spring, but discovered the Bahama channel, a route used thereafter by Spanish treasure ships. Steering north and west he reached the coast of Florida on Easter day, naming it for 'Pasqua de Flores.' Ponce de Leon had a lively imagination, and chose romantic names for the lands he discovered. He probably landed first near the St. Johns river, then coasted south around the peninsula and north, perhaps as far as Pensacola. When he sighted the Florida Keys, he christened them the 'Martyrs.' He also found and named the Dry Tortugas, where his men caught 170 turtles in one night! Nowhere did he find the spring that he sought, but the legend persisted, and before long there was scarcely a puddle or stream in Florida that had not been bathed in by optimistic Spaniards and Indians.

"When Ponce de Leon reported his discoveries to Ferdinand he was appointed governor of Florida, and commanded to found a colony. For seven years he was delayed by wars with the Caribs; but in 1521 he sailed out of San Juan harbor with two ships loaded with men and supplies for a permanent settlement. Good fortune had deserted him, however; hostile natives attacked the party as soon as they landed, and Ponce de Leon was wounded before they could regain their ships. He died soon after they reached Cuba, and was buried in San Juan."

Surviving Civilizations

Of the many civilizations that have existed in this world, only three have lived from the dawn of history to the present day. They are the Jews and the peasants of China and India who, by nature, are placid and pacific. Nearly all other great civilizations have been based on a military form of culture and eventually destroyed themselves.—Collier's Weekly.

Montevideo—With a $12,000 bond issue in prospect to finance a six-year program of street surfacing here, all streets and avenues of the city will be given a bituminous treatment, according to present plans.

Minneapolis—War-time recruiting methods will be put to the test in Minnesota for fourteen days, as seven reserve officers were called for active duty to assist with the enlisting of 756 men in the United States army.

St. Paul—The St. Paul internal revenue office mailed out 15,000 liquor tax stamp application blanks to Minnesota liquor and beer dealers. Hard liquor dealers were sent 3,000 and beer dealers, 12,000, to conform with federal laws.

Le Sueur—Minnesota canneries this year will pack approximately 36,000,000 cans of peas, an increase of 15 per cent over the pack of last year, it was estimated by the state department of agriculture. There are 23,235 acres to be harvested, and 15 canneries will employ 2,300 workers.

St. Cloud—This city dedicated its new airport, named the Whitney Memorial airport, as was the old one it replaces, in memory of Albert G. Whitney, pioneer central Minnesota utilities builder and operator. In 1929 Mrs. Alice Whitney gave the city the sum of $11,000 ot be used for a memorial airport in her husband's name.

Hutchinson—Perpetuation of the late Sam G. Anderson wild life refuge appeared as a project of Minnesota conservationists seeking to memorialize him and preserve his work. Anderson, who was buried here, left a huge estate for bird propogation, already a center of pride among state conservationists. Associates sought support to keep it that way.

St. Paul—Minnesota will receive federal old age pension money under the Social Security act, whether the bill passed by the last legislature is held valid or not. That is the opinion of Senater Robert F. Wagner of New York, chief sponsor of the federal bill. As far as the old age pension situation is concerned, therefore, Minnesota will not need a special session of the legislature.

Duluth—Minnesota forests will receive $349,820 of $13,827,800 approved by President Roosevelt for the forestry service from work-relief funds, according to Washington dispatches. Executive approval was given $40,043,272 in allotments from the fund, including $25,000,000 for a soil erosion control program. Some of the latter fund probably will be spent in Minnesota.

St. Paul—Special elections to fill three vacancies in the legislature caused by death can be deferred until the general election next year, unless there is a special session, Attorney General Harry H. Peterson informed the governor's office. There are three vacancies—the seats of Senators H. H. Bonniwell of Hutchinson, Patrick Morrison of Norwood, and Representative A. J. Samec of St. Paul.

Bemidji—Resort owners and business men in northwestern Minnesota voiced opposition to a proposal to construct tourists cabins on Lake Itasca in Itasca state park as contemplated by the National Park Service with the use of federal funds. The Bemidji Civic & Commerce association board of directors unanimously went on record as opposing the project at its last meeting and forwarded a copy of the resolution to E. V. Willard, state conservation commissioner.

Hewitt—C. J. Hancock, superintendent of Hewitt schools, who was shot when he surprised two burglars robbing a garage, died of his wounds. Hancock, it was reported, identified a photograph of his assailant during his conscious moments.

Mankato—Abandonning the insistence of innocence he maintained since his arrest May 6, Lyle Davis, 23, of Mason City, Iowa, and formerly of Mankato, pleaded guilty to a charge of the murder of John Williams, aged Mankato merchant, in December, 1932.

Chippendale Furniture

We constantly are hearing about Chippendale furniture. Our derivatives from the work of this great English cabinet maker are among the most popular in modern furniture stocks; but they really bear little resemblance to the documented work of Thomas Chippendale, according to house furnishing experts. The Chippendale style is not the original creation of any one man but the product of a school, according to a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. It was from the French and from a revival of interest in Chinese and Gothic motives that the Chippendale school drew inspiration. It was more a school of ornament than it was a school of style. Chippendale's name has become generic for all furniture produced in England and America betwen 1750 and 1780. This includes the pre-Chippendale period.

The First Waits

Waits did not come into existence in a haphazard manner. In ancient times they had a definite function to perform, and they were all stalwart minstrels attached to the court of the king. Their duties consisted of tramping the streets at night, keeping law and order, and proclaiming the time at certain intervals. Later they developed into wind-instrument players and until one hundred years ago had an official standing in London. It was the custom for swains to engage waits to serenade their lady-loves at night, on payment of a fee, but eventually they complained of loss of sleep and the practice was abolished. At one time the custom was so established that there was always music in one street or another from 1 to 4 a. m.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

SHEEP TAKE PLACE OF CATTLE IN WEST

Famous Old Trails Now Have Federal Sanction.

Phoenix, Ariz.—The western trail herd have not passed, but today they are sheep and not cattle, with numbers driven regularly exceeding the count of the most famous old trails.

It's a faux pas, of course, to mention sheep and cattle in one breath (to a cattleman), but the former still are featured in big drives—in fact the business of sheep driving has grown, while cattle are moved by rail.

It's largely a matter of very simple business.

Cattle lose weight when driven cross-country. Cows are valued not by the hoof, but by the beefsteak, with thick steaks bringing more money. The money crop of sheep is their wool, which can't be walked away.

So today some 300,000 complaining "woollies" are taking the long trek from southern pastures in and about the Salt river valley to northern Arizona, where they will wait out the summer at high altitudes whose ranges are not withered by the desert sun.

The business of trail driving has become a big industry. The government sets aside regular strips for sheep to follow as they go north and as they return south. Some make a round trip of 400 miles.

Trails followed are as old as the industry. They are picked originally because of advantages of feed and water, and once set by custom, received governmental saction. Homesteading or scrip purchase of land in the sheep "strips" is forbidden.

The oldest of them recently blossomed out with a shiny new suspension bridge, which sheep weekly cross to avoid wetness and possible quicksand of the Salt river below.

Following the drives demands alertness and sacrifice of herders. Mountain lions are not a myth, but are plentiful in parts of the sheep range. Wild dog packs are a menace in the Salt river valley, and may kill scores in a night's bloody orgy. Coyotes are present everywhere, vigilant to take stragglers.

Stove Designer Becomes a Cook to Learn Needs

Cleveland.—It takes more than a pencil and an artistic eye to design stoves, washing machines and pan-cake turners, young Henry Dreyfuss, New York industrial designer, made clear here.

Before he can turn out a pancake turner that women will cry for, he has to know first how to turn pancakes himself, Dreyfuss said. The same thing applies to machines that do the family wash, ironing and hold the refrigeration unit for the week's market.

When the young designer redesigned a washing machine, he spent nine months with his sleeves rolled up, washing everything a housewife does. He caught his fingers in the wringer, tore buttons off pajamas, tore lace into shreds.

Now he is going through a siege of baking, broiling and boiling everything from potatoes to cakes, in the interest of more beautiful and efficient stoves.

Only thirty now, Dreyfuss began his career as a scene designer. He was art consultant for a large theater chain and won recognition with his settings for several Broadway productions, including "Fine and Dandy," "Strike Me Pink," and "The Last Mile."

Police Short Wave Is Great Aid to Wreckers

Bridgeport, Conn.—The police short wave radio broadcasting station has proved a boon to automobile towing companies. Several concerns have equipped their wrecker trucks with radios. Many times a police car or ambulance has arrived at the scene of an accident to find several of the "wreckers" ahead of them and all ready to haul away the debris.

Nature Restores Sight of Woman Long Blind

San Francisco.—Nature has done what doctors could not do—restore Virginia Stranahan's sight.

Blinded nine years ago by the explosion of a dynamite cap, doctors decided not to operate because of the danger such an operation would mean of permanent loss of her sight.

At University of California hospital, where she was taken a few hours after the accident, it was found her right eye had been perforated by a copper fragment which formed a cataract. Other fragments were in her left eye. Through the years, the cataract gradually was absorbed and other foreign bodies were absorbed into her blood stream.

Student Hopes to Hunt Big Game With Arrows

Los Angeles.—An ambition which Don Carson, medical student, hopes soon to fulfill is to hunt big game in Africa with bow and arrow.

With Howard Hill of Los Angeles, nationally known archery expert, he hunted in the Florida Everglades recently with only a bow and quiver full of steel-tipped arrows, bagging alligators, wildcats, opossums and raccoons.

Shelter for Live Stock

With a shortage of feed facing farmers in many parts of the country the need to provide animals with shelter against the cold of winter becomes more necessary than usual. It is necessary not only because it will add to the thriftiness of all live stock and lessen the chances of loss, but also because it decreases the amount of feed necessary. Animals exposed to the wet and cold are forced to draw on their own body fat for energy and this fat must then be replaced by feed.

Detective, Then Cop; Now He Is a Hobo

Sandusky, Ohio.—A man who gave his name as James Murphy and who said he was a former member of the Cincinnati police force was among a number of wanderers rounded up by police in the "jungles," hobo hangout in a Sandusky suburb.

"Quite a flop, from policeman to tramp, wasn't it?" Inspector Schibley, chief of the department detective bureau, asked Murphy.

"Oh, no," Murphy replied coolly. "You see, I was a detective before I went on the police force."

Attend Celebration

Hundreds of people from this community celebrated the Fourth at Red Lake Falls last week. In keeping with its reputation for being a good entertainer, Red Lake Falls put on a real celebration. The St. Hilaire band led the big parade which started on north side of the city and wended its way thru the business section. There were many very fine floats and industrial exhibits in the parade. Afternoon a good program of races, contests, a ball game, etc., was given at the old fair grounds. Both the St. Hilaire and Red Lake Falls bands furnished music at the grounds, and the American Legion Auxilary Drum and Bugle Corps of Thief River gave a splendid exhibition drill. A wonderful display of fireworks was given at the fair grounds after nightfall.

On Monday and Tuesday, July 15 and 16, Mrs. Evelyn Sell, Canning Specialist of Home Economics Department of the State Emergency Relief Administration will hold a canning demonstration at the municipal auditorium at Thief River Falls at 1:45 p. m.

The whole subject of vegetable canning will be discused and different methods demonstrated.

An opportunity will be given to discuss your own canning and food preservation problems. Bulletins written by Inez M. Hobert, Extension Nutritionist, will be available.

An invitation is extended to all interested persons, and they are requested to bring their friends.

Storms Do Damage

Windstorms in this section of Minnesota and in central North Dakota did a vast amount of property damage last week. A farmer was instantly killed near Tilden, and another man injured in the same storm is reported to have died later.

At Mentor one corner of the brick school building was blown down and part of the main wall buckled. Several barns and other outbuildings thruout that same territory were blown down or badly damaged.

In central North Dakota reports state some fifty barns were demolished, and much crop damage was caused by hail.

Paul Roy and family, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson and daughter, Oscar Hauge and family, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Johnson, Miss Jewel Klevstad and Axel Johnson, all of St. Hilaire and Joe Hauge and family, J. Halin and family, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Phillips and daughter, Cora Helgoe and Tom Vigen of Bemidji met Sunday at Fosston and motored to Cross Lake and enjoyed a picnic dinner given in honor of Mrs. R. L. Hauge and Otto Johnson whose birthday anniversaries occured on that date.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon last week for the late Mrs. Marthe Torstveit. A large number of neighbors and friends were present to pay their last respects to one who was highly esteemed by everyone in the community.

Interment took place at the cemetery west of St. Pauli church.

Ardell Olsen, who has been assisting at the Journal office at Fertile, came home Saturday.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know.

Mrs. Christopher Kies came Sunday from Chicago to spend a few weeks at the home of her mother, Mrs. J. S. Roy.

The Norwegian Lutheran Ladies Aid will be entertained by Mesdames Carl Surmo, K. T. Kalager and Wm. Yonke, Friday July 12, at the church parlors. Everyone welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete A. Johnson of Crookston were here Saturday for a short visit at the home of Mrs. Johnson's aunt, Mrs. Anna Thompson.

James Andy Dahl, superintendent of the village school at Glyndon, is attending summer school at the University of North Dakota. He and family expect to visit here at close of the term.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lunde of Los Angeles, Calif., visited Friday at the home of his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Lars A. Loberg. The Lundes were formerly residents of Crookston some years ago.

Miss Margaret Jepson, who is taking a nurse's training course at a Minneapolis hospital, is spending her annual vacation at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Jepson.

Interior of Larson Bros new building is about completed and the proprietors are now busy at making new shelvings and arranging stock. A new circulating heating system is to be installed later on after the new hardware warehouse is built.

Ole R. Sande, director of rural education, was here last week from St. Paul for a short visit at the home of his, brother and sister, Henry Sande and Mrs. C. Schantzen and with his parents at their farm west of Thief River Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Carlson and daughter left Sunday for their home at Minneapolis after visiting here at the home of Mrs. Carlson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arne Vik. Mrs. Sig Vik and daughter, Helen, went with them to spend a short time in the Cities.

Alvin Konickson, who has been employed at interior decorating work at Portland, Ore., the past year, returned home Friday. A general strike in practically all industries, has been called in the coast country and business in all lines is virtually at a standstill. Chance for quick settlement of the labor dispute is very remote.

Ed J. Eide and family have been here the past ten days for a visit with relatives southeast of the village. They now reside at Duluth.

Village gardeners are enjoying new potatoes, peas, beans, radishes and other vegetables from their garden plots.

Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Amble were over this week from Grand Forks for a visit at the home of their daughter Mrs. Axel Jacobson.

Otto Johnson is building an addition to his granary and also making other improvements at his place southeast of the village.

Arlo Jacobson entertained twenty guests Tuesday evening at his home in honor of his cousins Norma Bucklen of Crookston and Beverly Skarsbo of Grand Forks.

Mrs. Hans Wilson has been quite ill the past few weeks. Her daughter, Mrs. Fred Hanson of Thief River, is staying with her.

Crystal tissue, 20 sheets size 20x 30 inches. Fine for packing picnic lunches and other home uses, 10 cents per roll at the Spectator office.

Mr. and Mrs. Mike Highland and daughter motored Sunday to Detroit Lakes and spent the day viewing some of the beauty spots to be found near that city.

Mrs. Harvey Aubol and children left Friday for their home at Crandon, Wis, after visiting here a month at the home of her father, Peter Simonson.

Some hail fell in this territory both Wednesday and Thursday last week. Reports from different parts of the community are that little or no damage was done to grain by the hail.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Johnson returned Sunday to their home at Juanita, N. D., after spending a few days here with relatives. They also visited relatives at Holt and Middle River while here.

Miss Lilly M. Johnson has returned home from her trip to Denver, Colo, where she attended the annual convention of the National Educational Association. She and friends also visited points of interest in Colorado before returning home.

Another Victory

The local ball team chalked up another victory last Sunday when they met the second team from Thief River Falls on local ground and defeated them by a score of 4 to 1. The visitors scored their first and only tally in the first inning. From that point on, the local played a superior brand of ball. The score was tied in second inning, and additional runs were pushed across as result of well placed hits and good base runing. Norman Holmes, on the mound, and Vernon Lindquist on receiving end for the locals both did excellent work.

Nelson-Medin

On Thursday afternoon, June 27, occured the marriage of Miss Gunhild Elizabeth Nelson, daughter of Mrs. A. F. Nelson of Flaxton, N. D., to Mr. Arnold G. Medin of Milwaukee, Wis. The wedding took place at the home of Miss Nelson's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Holmstrom at Cambridge, Minn., in the presence of only immediate families of the contracting parties. After a short wedding trip to northern part of the state, Mr. and Mrs. Medin left for Milwaukee, Wis, to make their home.

Mrs. Medin, who formerly resided in St. Hilaire, is a graduate of the local high school and of the Moorhead Teachers College. For the past six years she has taught in the public school at Mahnomen. She has a host of friends in this community who will join in wishing herself and husband much happiness.

Donald and Ann Patterson motored here Friday from Maple Lake and spent the day at the home of their sister, Mrs. O. Gunstad. They came to the lake Wednesday with their mother and sister, Mrs. Anna L. Patterson and Mabel Patterson who will spend the summer there. The first mentioned returned Sunday to their home at Minneapolis.

One of the heaviest rains seen here for many years past fell about noon on July Fourth in the village and vicinity. Drains were inadequate to handle the huge volume of water and streets remained in flooded condition some time after the storm. A heavy wind, together with some hail, accompanied the rain. Half of the glass front in Chas. Huff's place of business was blown in, and the streets were littered with broken branches from trees.

John Peterson Called

Death claimed another of the old pioneers of this community Tuesday morning when John P. Peterson, passed away at 4:30 at his home west of the village. His health had failed since last spring, but no real alarm was felt as he was up and around as usual. A sudden heart attack was the cause of his death.

John P. Peterson was born in Grangardis Soken, Falu Lan, Sweden on September 16, 1850 and was 84 years and 10 months of age at time of his death. He came to St. Paul, Minnesota, from Sweden June 10, 1879 and stayed there until fall of that year when he came to Crookston. In spring of 1883 he came to Polk Center township and homestaded the farm on which he resided at the time of his death.

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson retired from farming in 1918 moving to St. Hilaire to spend their declining years. His wife died October 20, 1920 and the following spring Mr. Peterson moved back to the farm.

Mr. Peterson was married in 1883 to Sophia Peterson and to this union six children were born, four of whom have preceded their father in death. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Oscar Peterson, who resides on the home farm, and Miss Theresa of Wylie, and by a sister, Mrs. V. Nyvall and a brother, Henning, both of Crookston, and by another sister, Mrs. Gustafson in Sweden.

Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at 1:30 at the home, and at 2 o'clock at the Black River Swedish Lutheran church, with Rev. Herman Larson officiating. Interment will take place at the cemetery adjoining the church.

Sympathy of many friends thruout the community, who have known and respected Mr. Peterson for many years, is extended to the surviving relatives.

School Election July 16,

Annual school meeting and election of directors for the local school district, as well as for other school districts thruout the state, will be held Tuesday, July 16th. Annual report of receipts and expenditures for the past year will be read, and the amount to be levied for the coming year for operation will be fixed, and two directors named for a three year team.

The terms of V. G: Brink and Ray Young expire at this meeting.

The Purpose of
Deposit Insurance

When Congress created the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation its primary objective was the protection of depositors. This Corporation began insuring deposits January 1, 1934. It is a permanent organization.

It now insures deposits in a great majority of the banks, including this institution. As a result, millions of depositors enjoy a degree of financial security heretofore unknown. When you have money on deposit here you know for a certainty that your deposits up to $5,000.00 are fully safeguarded against loss. Deposit insurance is for your protection.

Patronize this your home town bank. We take pride in being part of this community and therefore will do our best to create your pride in our institution.

PRESIDENT PLANS TO AID YOUTH —TAX-RICH BILL HELD OVER.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

YOUTH between sixteen and twenty-five will be served $50,000,000 for a nation-wide job hunt and further training of young men and women to hold jobs after they get them, through President Roosevelt's new "National Youth administration," itself administered under the works-relief program by Miss Josephine Roche, assistant secretary of the treasury, and Aubrey Williams, assistant to Harry L. Hopkins, works-progress administrator.

Aubrey Williams

The new organization will endeavor to:

1. Find employment in private industry for unemployed youth.
2. Train and retrain for industrial, technical and professional employment opportunities.
3. Provide for a continuing attendance at high school and college.
4. Provide works-relief projects designed to meet the needs of youth.

The average payment for youths on relief work will be $15 a month; those going to high school would be given $6 a month; college, $15 a month.

The problem of what to do with the youth who finishes school, supposedly equipped to make his real start in life, and finds, what few jobs there are are given to older and married men and women, as well as the youth who is unable to finish school because of poor circumstances, has been one of the most discouraging aspects of the entire depression. The NYA will attempt to remedy it by divisions set up to work with private industry and schools in each state, co-ordinated by national headquarters in Washington.

LEGISLATIVE administration leaders, for a while in a frenzy of anxiety to hitch the President's tax-the-rich program to the resolution extending the so-called "nuisance" excise taxes, thereby speeding it through the Washington legislative factory in four days, suddenly disclaimed any intention of such procedure, and let the $500,000,000 tax extension ride along unappended. Congress will consider the new taxation program during early July.

This program is expected to produce some $340,000,000 in new revenue, principally from inheritance and gift taxes, increased taxes on the highest income brackets, and corporation taxes graduated from 10 per cent to 17½ per cent.

The program has been held up as a sweetmeat to placate the sugar palate of Louisiana's Kingfish. Actually, a wealth of $340,000,000 shared among 120,000,000 Americans would amount to about $2.83 a head—all of which would be applied to a public debt of $29,000,000,000 and a budget of $8,500,000,000, anyway.

The net taxable worth of the 133 estates which paid taxes based on a valuation of $1,000,000 each in 1933 was $284,000,000. If the government had taxed these estates 100 per cent, seizing them entirely, they would have been worth only $2.37 a head to the American population. If the government confiscated all income of more than $1,000,000 in 1933, it would have taken an army of trucks loaded with small change to distribute it, for each American would get only 45 cents. And the general opinion of administration leaders in the senate was that the taxes obtained from the rich might possibly eliminate the necessity of the "nuisance" taxes after another year.

THE federal government began a new fiscal year with intentions of spending more money than in any previous year of peace. Mr. Roosevelt announced that he would spend $8,520,000,000, of which $4,582,000,000 will go for "recovery and relief." He expects the treasury to collect $3,991,000,000. No, it doesn't add up. The deficit for the new fiscal year will be $4,528,000,000, it is estimated.

The fiscal year just passed came to an end with the public debt at a new peace-time peak of $28,665,000,000, still some shy of the $31,000,000,000 the President estimated a year ago. To finance the new budget, he had counted in part upon the $500,000,000 extension of "nuisance" taxes just passed by congress, but not upon the tax-the-rich program which the New Dealers hope to jockey through some time in August. Estimates have it that this will net another $340,000,000.

The expenditure for the past year is only $7,258,000,000 instead of $8,571,000,000 forecast at the start of the year. The deficit was $3,472,347,000 instead of the proposed $4,869,000,000.

If the expenditures outlined in the 1936 budget reach the estimated total, the public debt on July 1 next year would stand at $34,239,000,000.

During the next year the President expects to spend $4,880,000,000 for relief and for the employment of 3,500,000 idle workers. A general upswing in business would improve the revenue expected by the treasury. The President counted on $3,711,000,000 coming in during the 1935 fiscal year. Receipts proved to be $3,785,000,000.

AFTER one of the bitterest legislative fights of recent years the house voted 216 to 146 against the "death clause" of the utilities bill, a provision put upon the measure when the senate passed it by one vote, to abolish in seven years all public utility holding companies which the securities commission deemed "unnecessary."

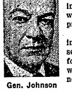
The interstate commerce committee of the house voted to give the commission immediate discretionary authority. After the final passage of the utilities bill it will go to a conference committee to have the differences between the two houses ironed out.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT asked congress to prevent holders of federal gold bonds from suing the government for damages they may have suffered because the New Deal went back on the gold payment pledge.

The Chief Executive asked that an appropriation be made for Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to pay off $8,000,000,000 in cash to bond holders who demanded immediate cash payment. Bond holders who plan to convert their bonds into cash and buy foreign gold, will be given 100 paper dollars for a $100 gold bond. They contend that because it takes $1.69 to buy what was $1 worth of gold before the New Deal, they should be paid $169 in cash.

The President's stand was that the privilege of suing was an "act of grace" bestowed by the government. He asked that the privilege be withdrawn from the holders of gold bonds to prevent the use of the courts "in aid of efforts to sabotage the operations of the government or in aid of private speculation."

GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON, once ambitious to direct the $3,000,000,000 public works program, was named to direct a comparatively small part of the President's now $4,000,000,000 works-relief schedule. As director of works-relief in New York city, he will co-ordinate the program in that area.



Gen. Johnson

With the famed fighting jaw determinedly set, he revealed the four conditions under which he accepted the new job:

He will get no pay, only $7,800 for a year's expenses. (He got $6,000 a year for this purpose during most of his time as keeper of the Blue Eagle.) His job will end October 1, unless he and the administration agree that it shall continue. He will devote a minimum of four days a week to his official duties. And he will consult with Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia as far as possible, but will be responsible to Harry L. Hopkins.

NEW YORK'S Harlem and its kindred negro populations throughout the land resounded in jubilation, with chicken an' ham in every fryin' pan and juniper juice flowing freely, as Joe Louis, the first great brown hope of pugilism since Jack Johnson, established himself as a real threat to the world's heavyweight boxing championship.

The Detroiter cut Primo Carnera, Italian human skyscraper, to ribbons for five rounds, knocked him down three times in the sixth, and was declared the winner by technical knockout in a bout at the Yankee stadium.

LIKE most Utopias, the new one in Alaska's Matanuska valley has been reported a nest of discontent; the disillusionment apparently was manifest even quicker than usual in this case. Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin farm families who made up a large share of the recent expedition to begin life anew in the North Pacific territory drafted a list of grievances for the FERA trouble shooter, Eugene Carr.

Many of them said the project was misrepresented, that the land is poor and that housing is not what they were led to believe it would be. Neither are medical service, school facilities, seeds disbursed for planting, the climate and prices for groceries measuring up to advance word-pictures. There is considerable jealousy existent over the distribution of farm land. And to top it all off, the Utopians want government pay for their work.

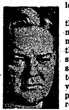
THE week's peak in crime was reached when Detroit police found Howard Carter Dickinson, prominent New York attorney and nephew of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, lying dead in a ditch beside a lonely Rouge park road with a bullet through his head and another through his chest.

Dickinson, a law associate of Charles Evans Hughes, Jr., had been in Detroit on business of the $40,000,000 estate of the late William H. Yawkey. Apparently, he had driven to Rouge park while on a drinking party after business hours. His companions on the ride, who were William Schweitzer, Detroit underworld character, and three burlesque-show girls, all of whom he had picked up at his hotel in the motor city, fled the scene and were traced to Fort Wayne, Ind., where they were arrested.

After several days of grilling by police, the four confessed they had plotted the murder to rob Dickinson. Sweitzer admitted firing the shots. Their loot was $134.

DETERMINED that what goes up must stay up, Fred and Al Key, endurance fliers, broke the world's time record for keeping a plane aloft, landing after 653½ hours in the air at Meridan, Miss. They passed the unofficial endurance record of 647 hours, 28 minutes and 30 seconds set in 1930 by Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brien at St. Louis. Days before they had soared over the official mark of 553 hours, 51 minutes and 30 seconds set at Chicago by John and Kenneth Hunter.

REPUBLICAN senators were advised that former President Herbert Hoover will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination in the Presidential race of 1936.



Herbert Hoover

They were advised that Mr. Hoover would make the formal announcement some time this summer. He is staying out, it was said, because he intends to remain in private life and has planned his future career along that line. For his active criticisms of administration policies the reason was given that, although he does not "choose to run," he thought the party needed some sort of direction; now that his candidacy is shelved, it is expected that his political utterances will be clothed in considerably less authority.

The informers, however, assured the senators that Mr. Hoover would get behind the party's candidate and enter the campaign for him, and that he thinks, with unification growing, the Republican prospects are looking brighter day by day.

CAPT. ANTHONY EDEN, England's journeyman trouble shooter, electrified the British Isles by announcing that Great Britain had offered to give Haile Selassie, emperor of Abyssinia, a generous strip of British Somaliland to replace territory acquired by Italy, if the Italian government would promise not to wage war against the domain of Africa's "Conquering Lion of Judah."

Nothing doing, said Premier Mussolini, who has turned a deaf ear to all Britain's proposals of an Italo-Ethiopian compromise. He was reported as intending to go right ahead with his plan of a four-years' war to effect the complete pacification of the African empire. He insists that there must be more room in Africa for over-populated Italy to expand.

Mussolini has threatened to "remember" the nations which have offered to furnish Abyssinia with arms, and they have withdrawn or modified their offers. The African emperor pleaded:

"If we are in the right and if civilized nations are unable to prevent this war, at least do not deny us the means of defending ourselves."

Captain Eden met with no more success in his efforts to explain to the Fascist dictator England's bilateral arms agreement with Germany. Mussolini sided with France in objecting to the pact.

SECRETARY of the Navy Swanson asked bids from private yards on 13 vessels and was prepared to negotiate for 11 more, launching the navy's 1935-36 construction program within 20 hours after receiving the required funds from congress. Included in the program are: Two new cruisers of 10,000 tons each, equipped with six-inch guns and at least four airplanes apiece; one aircraft carrier, three heavy destroyers, twelve light destroyers and six submarines.

CITIZENS everywhere were urged by Attorney General Cummings to assist the federal government in "cracking down" on bucket shops which are swindling the public out of millions of dollars. He declared that a nation-wide chain is operating. Most of their victims are doctors, lawyers, professors and business men, he said.

Atty. Gen. Cummings

"We know the names of the ringleaders," said Mr. Cummings, "but it will take co-operation of both the public and legitimate brokers to put them where they belong—behind the bars."

Most of the victims believe that they have lost their money legitimately, he said, and are afraid of complaining to federal officers because they are in debt after they have been "cleaned."

SOVIET Russia, through its ambassador in Tokyo, warned the Japanese government that Japanese Manchukuan boats must keep out of Soviet waters in the Far East, or the consequences will fall on the shoulders of the Japanese Manchukuan authorities. The ambassador listed a series of alleged violations of Soviet territory, adding that "these violations may bring serious consequences in the relations between the U. S. S. R. and Japan in the cause of peace in the Far East."

He spoke of attacks on the Soviet guard which were maneuvered to appear as if they had taken place on Manchukuan territory. It was alleged that four Soviet guards had been attacked and killed, that Japanese guns had played on Soviet settlements from the Manchukuan side of the Amur.

"The Soviet government expects the Japanese government to adopt urgent energetic measures to prevent further provocative action by local Japanese Manchukuan military authorities," said the ambassador.

HANK O'DAY, veteran National league baseball umpire, who has been calling 'em as he saw 'em as long as any player in the game today can remember and before that, died of pneumonia in Chicago. He had been player, manager and umpire in his long and memorable career. He will doubtless be remembered in sport until the end of time for calling the famous "bonehead" play in which Fred Merkle, in a world series game failed to touch first base, a play known to every fan in the country.

"QUOTES"

COMMENTS ON CURRENT TOPICS BY NATIONAL CHARACTERS

BRITISH NOT "ANTI"

By ANTHONY EDEN
Lord Privy Seal.

THE British are not "anti" any nation in Europe. They are not hostile to any people, nor do they regard any as antipathetic to them. The British people have never been good haters. Their inclinations have always been to forgive and forget at once. Sometimes, indeed, this readiness has even seemed a little incomprehensible to those who have been our comrades in arms, but it is an essential element of the British character.

As in the past, so today. We are not "anti" any nation, but we should be and must be "anti" any who might seek by force to break the peace. We shall always be found arrayed on the side of the collective system against any government or people who seek by a return to power politics to break up the peace which by that system we are seeking to create. And let us not forget that the covenant itself provides the machinery whereby a peaceful settlement of international disputes can be secured.

ADJUSTING TARIFFS

By CORDELL HULL
Secretary of State.

I WISH to call your attention particularly to the decline in this current year of our exports to many of our best consuming markets in Europe. Thus, our exports to Europe in January and February of this year declined 16 per cent in relation to that of January and February of a year ago. If we place embargoes upon our imports we shall, in the last analysis, witness inevitably the destruction of our export trade.

Seized with an unreasoning fear whenever a small driblet of imports of a competitive nature comes over our tariff wall, even when under purely temporary or accidental conditions, such as, for example, the drouth, action is urged which, if followed too frequently, may lead to retaliation by other countries, so that step by step such action may lead straight toward a complete embargo of imports all around, and since one country's imports are another country's exports, a like embargo of exports all around.

RURAL RELIEF

By REXFORD TUGWELL
Under-Secretary of Agriculture.

TO SAVE the land and the people who depend on it is an inspiration in which all of us, it seems to me, can join. It particularly transcends party, creed and class.

I should like to see the administration of the present program carried out in such ways that this common consent can be won and kept so that our names will be blessed rather than bitter in our children's mouths. And I am willing to take this kind of pledge. But I am not willing to say that if vested interests or partisan politicians begin a fight which involves this movement we shall not fight back.

We believe in this thing and we are determined to see it through.

BALANCING THE BUDGET

By ROBERT LA FOLLETTE
U. S. Senator From Wisconsin.

IF WE had had the courage to tax as heavily in this country as they have done in Great Britain, we would have had a balanced budget both in 1933 and 1934.

Those who are most anxious to balance our budget are most often those who protest vociferously against any attempt to increase taxes upon wealth and income, in accordance with ability to pay. The conservatives, therefore, who are arguing that this government should follow the example of Great Britain and attempt to balance its budget are in a completely inconsistent position until they are ready to accept the tax burden necessary to accomplish that end.

CURRENCY WAR

By SIR PERCY BATES
Chairman Cunard Line.

THERE is war today, universal war. The weapons are not navies, armies or airplanes, but tariffs, quotas and shifting currencies. There is no authorized standard of national money exchange, and each change in a tariff, quota or currency is nothing other than a hostile move in this war.

Worst of all, the situation is not officially recognized as a war, otherwise we might have had a peace conference with far better possibilities for the good of mankind than the disarmament talks in Geneva.

AAA PROGRAM

By HENRY A. WALLACE
Secretary of Agriculture.

THOSE who charge the AAA with inducing scarcity simply do not know the facts. The American farmer always has produced enough food for every man, woman and child in the United States, and I am sure he will continue to, given a chance to stay on his farm and in business. The adjustment programs have cut down production for an export market which no longer exists; they have not deprived the people of one ounce of necessary food.

Northfield—In memory of Robert Selden Strong, who met death last October in an airplane accident in California, a student loan fund of $10,000 will be established at Carleton college by his mother, Mrs. Edward A. Strong of San Marino, Calif., formerly of Minneapolis. Mrs. Strong alreay has established the fund in a gift

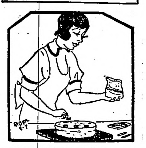
St. Paul—Two northwest conservation groups, the Midwest Conservation Alliance and the Association of Midwest Fish anl Game Commissioners, representing thousands of sportsmen and game commissioners, demanded an immediate one-year moratorium on hunting of waterfowl to prevent what they called a crisis threatening several species of birds.

Fairmont—Martin county farm organizations appealed to Secretary Henry Wallace for the AAA to arrange loans on sealed grain similar to last year's corn loans. A resolution making the request was adopted and sent to Secretary Wallace by the Martin County Farm Bureau, corn-hog allotment committee, wheat allotment committee and the county warehousing board.

Minneapolis—The board of park commissioners approved a budget request of $511,600 for operation of parks, playgrounds, street forestry and the municipal airport during 1936. This is an increase of $93,060 over the $418,600 budget allowance for 1935 and would call for a tax rate of 2 mills as compared to 1.7 mills this year. The request will go to the board of estimate and taxation for action late in the fall.

Minneapolis — Reinforcements of about 8,000 men are being recruited in Minnesota to the ranks of the CCC workers—mainly to work improvements in the state's vast forest empire. Restocking of about 7,000,000 acres of forest in Minnesota is one of the chores on which the men will engage. Added to the approximately 12,000 CCC workers in the state, the new recruits will raise the total to about 20,000. Some will engage in soil conservation and park work but nearly three-quarters of them will work in the woods.

Housewife's Idea Box



In Place of Candle Holders

If you wish to decorate a birthday cake with candles and have no candle holders, use this idea: While the cake icing is still soft, place a marshmallow or gumdrop on the cake as a holder. Stick your candles into these and they will hold them upright and catch any drip.

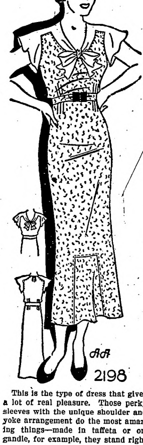
NEW IDEAS LEND CHARM TO FROCK

PATTERN 2198



This is the type of dress that gives a lot of real pleasure. Those perky sleeves with the unique shoulder and yoke arrangement do the most amazing things—made in taffeta or organdie, for example, they stand right out with a lot of "ginger." But do them in a soft crepe, voile or crinkly chiffon, and they fall caressingly upon the arm, which means, of course, that they're becoming to anyone. The frock is as easy to make as it is lovely—you'll like the motion that little skirt panel gives when you walk—the easy fit of those little tucks at the waist, with their ensuing softness. The skirt panel may be omitted if you prefer the skirt plain.

Pattern 2198 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 2⅞ yards 39-inch fabric and ¾ yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address, and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

NO SPARE ROOM

By LILLIAN MacDONALD

"ONE thing does make me happy," said little Mrs. Lane.

"That's fortunate," said Simon, her husband. "What is it?"

"That we simply can't entertain relatives from the country. We literally couldn't put them up."

Simon took his pipe out of his mouth, looked solemnly around the 20 by 14 living, davenport-sleeping, dining room and grinned.

"Might try 'em in the bathtub," he said. "It's large for its size."

"Never," said his wife who was nice but not overweighted with a sense of humor. "No—we're safe. You see, I have six aunts, four cousins, seven uncles, two perfectly nice but enormous grandmothers and grandfathers, a mother and father; they're all large eaters."

"Say no more. I understand," waved Simon, who was hanging a picture. "How does this look?"

"Nice, but crooked."

His wife gently tilted it and put her head to one side. "This unpacking is awful. I'm hungry again already."

Simon sighed, vanished into the kitchenette and produced a delicatessen chicken, radishes and a bottle of beer.

They ate.

The bell rang vociferously.

Simon rose, wiped off chickeny fingers and went to the door

"Simon," his wife heard (she'd had presence of mind to dash for the bathroom with the remnants of food, and hide).

"How you've grown! I simply never would have known you. And married? I must see your wife. I hope she is worthy of you for you were always such a good, sensible boy."

Rapturous hugging and audible kisses followed. Hilda washed her hands vigorously, removed a black spot from her nose and hastily powdered it. Then she tiptoed to the door, holding fast to the handle.

"Hilda!" shouted Simon.

She entered to find the room usurped by the largest person she'd ever seen in her life.

Hilda smiled and came forward with hand outstretched.

"I am Simon's great-aunt Matilda Warren," said the invader. "I heard you were in town and so I made an appointment with my dentist (I have to get a new plate) and I just know you'll love to have me for a few days—until he gets through."

Hilda strove to master a groan.

"I'm terribly sorry but we have only one room. You see Simon is not rich, yet. He and I just managed this little place, which is cunning for two. But we eat and sleep and live and work, all in this little room."

"Have you no kitchen?" said the great-aunt. Her tone sounded menacing, somehow, but it might have been imagination.

"Simon, come show Mrs. Warren the kitchen" in a stifled voice from poor Hilda.

"A closet that's all it is! Ridiculous to try and keep healthy in such an absurd way. Er, have you no bathroom?"

"You show her the bathroom," in anguished tones from Simon.

"H'm A nice big tub. Now, children, it seems to me I could make myself right comfortable in that bathtub for the few days Doctor Jones will take to fix my plate. Now, just don't say a word. I'll take my blankets I always take around with me, for one can never tell if hotels and boarding houses are really clean and sanitary. I always take two blankets and I've this nice steamer rug, used when poor Uncle Warren was alive, and we went to Europe (dear, how sick I was!) Well, we'll fix it fine. Here," she opened her suitcase and threw out the formidable but spotless blankets, a Navajo rug, the steamer rug and assorted pillows.

"No, you just get me a light dinner, a steak (only see it's thick) and a few potatoes and cauliflower and some nice oranges and cake (I only want a light dinner) will do fine! I'll help you with the rest of your unpacking and seems to me you might have done without a piano until you had a bigger apartment and then you could have had the stove outside that closet and been better able to keep house; but I guess you will be able to manage, Hilda. You might give me a tune, something lively; and I will fix that steak myself as soon as Simon brings it in. I'm never so happy as when I'm cooking a good dinner." She stopped breathless, while Hilda merely gasped.

"But Aunt Matilda, there really isn't room. You'd be most frightfully uncomfortable. You couldn't sleep in the bathtub, possibly. Really you couldn't. It might drip and give you rheumatism."

"Now just you leave everything to me. I'll fix everything and here is a nickel, for I must find the exact time from Doctor Jones about my plate." Somehow she swept the hapless couple aside, and found the telephone. "Where'd you put the nickel?" she cried.

"It's not a nickel telephone," said Hilda. "Call anyone you want."

"Telephone service goes with the rent, I suppose. I've heard of it. It's nice to feel you won't be out of pocket by my stay, anyway."

Simon looked at Hilda, speechless. Behind his great aunt's back he kicked at her blankets. "Sh! She'll kill you if you mark them! I don't believe fat people are always so good-natured and your great aunt is worse than all my poor relatives put together."

Great aunt beamed. "Doctor Jones says he'll fix it all within a couple of days," said she. "Now let's get busy. I don't like this dull brown paper and those pictures look awful queer to me. What are they?"

"Japanese prints," murmured Hilda.

"A good American picture is good enough for me. Heathenish, they look. Why not try and sell them for a few cents and get a good, cheerful landscape with a few nice cows, or a little girl's head."

"We like them, Mrs. Warren, and perhaps, as you are good enough to think you can rest comfortably for two nights in a bathtub, you won't mind our keeping our prints where they are."

"Keep what you like, my dear, only I think it makes people depressed and queer when they live with queer things, that's all."

"Where is she?" whispered Simon, entering with the ingredients for the "light" meal.

"In the bathroom making her bed. I simply won't make up beds in bathrooms, nor will I be responsible for barbarians." As Simon looked a trifle hurt, she flew to him and putting her arms around his neck whispered, "I'm sorry. But our scheme for no spare room scarcely seems a success."

"I forgot Aunt Matilda. She only comes to town for her plate about every four years, dear, that's all. Anyway, she will stay only one night. I'll see to that."

"But how, Simon? We can't murder her. Nothing else would get her out."

"Listen. When I was a kid I walked in my sleep."

"Well?"

"I might get up early and turn on the shower."

Hilda giggled. "Oh Simon, you mustn't. It might kill her."

"You don't know Great Aunt Matilda. I do."

Stones Reveal Viking Visit to Minnesota in Year 1362

Belief that a tribe of ancient Norsemen visited this territory in the Fourteenth century was voiced by F. T. Gustavson, Pequot, Minn., nationally known anthropologist, after a study of several stones at Cormorant lake, near Detroit Lakes, Minn., known as the "Norse Anchor Stones," write a Detroit Lakes United Press correspondent.

After viewing the relics, Gustavson declared that the runic inscription on the famous Kensington Runestone fits them entirely. The inscription reads:

"Eight Goths and 22 Norwegians on exploration—journey from Vineland westward. We had camp by two skerries one day—journey north from this stone. We fished one day. When we returned home we found ten men red with blood and dead. Ave Marie. Save from evil! Have ten of our party by the sea to look after our ships in 14 day journey from this island. Year 1362."

Gustavson explained that a day's journey meant at that time the distance traveled by boat along the coast of Norway, about eighty miles.

"The lake with the 'two skerries' is Cormorant lake," he added, "while the sea where the ships were left is probably Hudson bay. The party must have come down the Nelson river, Lake Winnipeg, and the Red river, and by this stream to Cormorant lake—where vestiges of the Norsemen still remain."

Tell-Tale Nails

An experienced doctor, when feeling the pulse of a patient, will often assist his diagnosis by a casual glance at the finger-nails. The healthy nail is renewed once in 110 days, but the rate of growth is retarded by disease. Nails are highly specialized portions of the skin, and as such are subject to bodily ailments, of which they always show signs. Serious illnesses always leave distinct transverse grooves in the nails, which gradually disappear with new growth; also, broken bones and fractures leave deep ridges which do not disappear for 18 months or more. People constitutionally strong have large, heaped-up nails, and thick nails usually denote a strong personality—though the converse does not hold good.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

Endearing Terms in Stones

The favorite engagement ring of the Nineteenth century was set with gems whose initial letters formed a word of endearment such as "dearest" made up of diamonds, emeralds, amethysts, rubies, sapphires and turquoises. The idea of a sentimental message conveyed by the stones of a betrothal ring especially appealed to the Victorians. In 1862, when the prince of Wales tendered his engagement ring to Princess Alexandra of Denmark, it was set with stones whose initial letters spelled "Bertie," the prince's pet name. There was no gem beginning with the letter I, but the court jewelers substituted the jacinth.

Masons and Presidents

Presidents Washington, Jackson, Polk, Fillmore, Buchanan, Johnson, Garfield, McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, Taft, Harding, Franklin Roosevelt were Masons. Fillmore is thought by some writers to have been initiated into the order at an early age but to have recanted during the anti-Masonic agitation. Claims of Masonic membership have been made for other Presidents, including Jefferson, John Adams, J. Q. Adams, Monroe, Tyler, Pierce, Lincoln and Grant, but without proof. In addition to these, Madison, Van Buren, W. H. Harrison, Taylor, Hayes, Arthur, Cleveland, B. Harrison, Wilson, Coolidge and Hoover were non-Masons.

POULTRY

POULTRY PROBLEMS DOUBLE IN SUMMER

Weather Checks Egg Supply; Brings Disease.

By Roy S. Dearstyne, Head of North Carolina State College Poultry Department.—WNU Service.

Summer brings a number of problems to the poultryman.

Hot weather tends to decrease egg production and to increase the spread of disease. The marketing of early moulters and other hens not laying regularly is the best plan. Cockerels not kept for breeders should be sold when they reach broiler size.

Nonlayers and unneeded cockerels increase the feed bill and crowd the laying birds. Only late moulters should be used for breeding purposes.

Portable range shelters are a help in providing adequate ventilation, and should be moved to new grazing sites when necessary. See that the birds have plenty of feed and fresh water.

Do not try to reduce costs by skimping on feed, as this will tend to keep the birds from developing large frames and building up the needed body reserve for future production.

Worms and parasites, internal and external, flourish in summer. When parasites are found, immediate treatment should be given. Poor development, leg weakness, and drawn face-parts are symptoms of worms. County agents or other agricultural advisers may be consulted in regard to parasite control. Vaccinating against fowl pox is an inexpensive form of insurance against this disease.

Weak or poorly developed birds are possible sources of disease and are seldom profitable. Remove them from the flock.

Shell Color Inherited; Uniformity Is Demanded

Egg shell color is an hereditary factor and is influenced only slightly by feed, states a writer in the Missouri Farmer. Breeders of white egg laying breeds have striven to eliminate the tinted colors by a process of selection, giving particular attention to the first few eggs a pullet lays, since the first eggs are more apt to be tinted than others and pullets whose eggs are tinted at first often clear up after production is well under way. Likewise breeders of brown egg laying breeds are striving for dark brown shells in the same manner.

The color of shells, as every farmer knows, has no influence on the taste of eggs or quality but city people have acquired preference that producers must cater to. A good uniform color of shells helps sell eggs because most goods in the line of food are sold on looks, women being the chief buyers.

When Duck Goes Broody

When a Muscovy duck goes broody she prefers to make her own nest, hollowing it out of the ground in some quiet corner, according to an authority in the Los Angeles Times. It takes 35 days for the eggs to hatch. During the long period of incubation the egg-shells tend to dry out and become unduly hard for the ducklings to crack open. Experienced incubator men sprinkle the eggs with water that seems warm, not hot, to the hand. The sprinkling may commence about the twentieth day and continue until about the thirty-second day. The downy little fellows are hardy and active. They should be provided with sand and moistened chick feed. In two weeks they should be given grit. Ducks eat heavily and always require plenty of sharp grit and water.

Protect Roosting Sheds

The use of light summer roosting sheds by chicken breeders is steadily increasing. While the advantage of these sheds are obvious, it is not advisable to use an extremely light one unless there is adequate insulation to guard against the hot midday sun, as well as against the occasional cold and windy days. Insulating board is invaluable for this purpose and can be applied very simply to the parts of the shed that need special protection.

In the Poultry Yard

Shade is essential for all chicks during the hot season.

* * *

Check every nest late at night, so that no eggs will be overlooked.

* * *

Late chicks need artificial heat but a short time and can be turned out early.

* * *

Late chicks have to compete with older stock for range and sometimes mash.

* * *

Direct sunshine is cheap insurance against rickets in young chicks.

* * *

A lot of chicks are lost because they do not learn to eat, consequently they starve to death.

* * *

Poultrymen say eggs laid in spring keep better in cold storage than those produced in winter.

* * *

Tape-worms and flies frequently come together, and late chicks have a harder time to meet the problem.

For That Mid-Meal "Snack"

Light Refreshments, Often Desirable, Especially for Children, Should Be of Simple Nature and Require Little Preparation.

Eating between meals may be a good thing, and it may not be. It depends upon the individual and the circumstances. There are countries and circumstances in which meals are so spaced that to eat between meals would be both foolish and unnecessary. For example, when, before rising, a cup of tea is brought and this is followed at a later hour by breakfast, then lunch, afternoon tea, a full course dinner, and a late supper (in America we give this last meal the name of theater supper), where in such a schedule is there need or desire for a mid-meal? The above schedule is not unusual.

Then there are other countries where a bit of food between meals is craved. In American homes we often find a mid-meal needed when there is a long stretch between an early breakfast and a luncheon, sometimes set late to accommodate students. If luncheon is early there is apt to be recourse to the pantry between four and five o'clock for a mid-meal, unless afternoon tea is served. Those in the business world not infrequently take time for a snack either in the mid-morning or mid-afternoon, according to whether their luncheon time is early or late. And if no time can be taken to go out for it, or to eat it should it be brought in, it is usually possible to be excused for a moment, when a cracker, a cooky, a bit of fruit or a glass of milk (from a vacuum bottle), can be quickly taken and prove reviving.

On shipboard mid-meals are served as regularly as other meals, increasing the number from three to five and six meals. About eleven a morning broth with or without crackers is brought around. An afternoon tea is served as part of the regular service, on certain lines, while a supper is obtainable during the evening. So do the steamship companies provide plenty of nourishment to gratify hungry appetites in the bracing sea air.

Those who are dieting may find it advisable to eat less at the regular meal and have the allotment divided, so that the craving for food between meals can be satisfied. Children are apt to require mid-meals. They are active little people, use up their vitality quickly, and need to have it restored by between-meals food. The important matter in all mid-meal eating is to have it come, as the name implies, mid-way between two consecutive meals, with the balance preferably a trifle away from the first and toward the second meal.

Lake Dynamited, Many Fish Killed

Elk River--Residents of the Twin Lakes are aroused over the dynamiting of the lake recently, resulting in the killing of many fish. Some unknown person used dynamite at various places in the lake, evidently with the intent of killing fish for his own use. He accomplished his purpose, but in doing so killed a large number of the remaining fish. Many were found floating on the surface after the evening in question when the dynamite was set. The lake has been very low for a number of years, due to the drouth and drainage, but there have always been some bass and pickeral remaining. The use of the dynamite seens to have pretty well "unstocked" the lake, and it looks as though there would be little fishing the rest of the season.

Kittens In Box Scare Birds From Berries

Mound--Something new in the way of a scare-crow is being used by George Plant, Mound, to keep birds away from his strawberry patch. Plant has two small kittens which he puts in a box with a screen over the opening. The box is turned on its side so the kittens won't be in the sun. and he puts in also a dish of cream and some food regularly. The kittens play around in the box, making the kind of sounds kittens usually do, and the birds stay away from the strawberries in the region of the box. Plant claims that two kittens can make enough noise to protect a big piece of ground. The idea is not patented!

The Welsh Terrier

The Welsh terrier is a small, wiry-coated black-and-tan dog, standing not more than 16 inches at the shoulder and weighing about 20 pounds. He has a long head, flat skull that is narrow between the ears, but not as narrow as the fox terrier, getting slightly narrower toward the eye. The foreface should not "dish" or fall away quickly between and below the eyes. Jaws should be strong and muscular, of good punishing power and depth. The ears are V-shaped, small, not too thin, set on fairly high, carried forward and close to the cheek. The eyes are small, dark, expressive and indicate abundant keenness. The neck is of moderate length; the back short, chest of moderate depth, legs straight and muscular, tail well set on, coat wiry, hard, close and abundant.

Bulbs as Food

Certain types of buds, modified as food storage organs, are items in our own diet. A cabbage head is but an overgrown bud, and the good part of cauliflower is a cluster of flower buds. Jerusalem artichokes and head lettuce are other examples. Cloves are buds used as seasoning. There are underground buds, called bulbs, whose scales thicken with stored up food for propagation and for continuing the life of the plant through the dormant period. Tulips and onions are such bulbs.

First Successful Airplane

The first successful airplane was produced by Professor Langley, secretary of Smithsonian institution, who designed and constructed a motor-driven airplane which flew in 1896, but that model did not carry a man, says the New York World-Telegram. The Wright brothers made four successful flights on December 17, 1903. In one of these the machine rose by its own power, and was in the air 59 seconds and traveled a distance of 852 feet. That was the first successful flight of a human being from the ground in a mechanically operated airplane.

Upanishads and Bhagavad Gita

The Upanishads are speculative writings dealing with man and the universe, and form a late part of the Vedic writings in India. The earliest of them dates from about the Eighth century B. C. The Bhagavad Gita is the supremely important scripture of India, and dates from the Second century B. C. It deals with the story of Krisna, and develops a pantheistic religion.

Gets $600 For Load Of Stolen Wool

Fergus Falls--A rather good haul for a day's work was netted by a stranger in Fergus Falls recently, who "borrowed" a truck, "borrowed" some wool, and sold his produce for $600, cash. The truck was stolen in Fargo. The man who stole it apparently drove from that city to Hankinson, N. D., during the night, broke into the warehouse of the Hankinson Wool Pool and stole 14 bags of wool. The next morning he drove to Fergus Falls, representing himself to be a farmer from near Detroit Lakes, and sold the wool to E. J. Ness, being given a check for a little over $600. The man said he represented some of his neighbors and that it was customary to pool the wool and sell it in one load. After cashing the check and unloading his cargo, the stranger drove into an alley where he left the truck, rubbed his hands together, and shook off the dust of Fergus Falls, well satisfied with the day's work.

Mrs. H. Wilson Dies

Mrs. Barbara Wilson, widow of the late Hans Wilson, long time resident of this village, died Sunday, July 14, at a Thief River hospital following an operation. She had been in poor health for several months, and the operation was performed as a last resort to alleviate her suffering.

Mrs. Wilson was born in Denmark, July 22, 1852 and was 82 years, 11 months and 22 days of age at time of her death.

She was united in marriage to Hans Wilson in Denmark on October 17, 1885 and they came to this country in 1888 locating at Crookston. In 1899 they moved to Wylie where they resided until they moved to St. Hilaire in 1909.

A family of six children, three daughters and three sons were born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson. The husband and three sons have all preceded their wife and mother in death. Surviving are three daughters: Mrs. Christine McAllister of Grand Forks, Mrs. Thomena La Plante of Crookston and Mrs. Lousie Hanson of Thief River Falls. Three grandchildren also survive.

One of the sons of Mrs. Wilson, the late James Ward who died a few years ago, gained considerable fame both during and before the World War as an aviator. He was of the pioneers in flying of heavier-than-air craft and at one time held the world's altitude record for such craft.

For many years after coming to this village, Mrs. Wilson operated a restaurant and she was well known to everyone thruout the community. A cheerful, pleasant woman, generous to a fault, Mrs. Wilson will be missed by her large circle of friends in this section.

Funeral services was conducted yesterday afternoon at the Wilson home with Rev. R. M. Fjelstad of Thief River officiating. Following the services here, the remains were taken to Crookston and interred beside those of Mr. Wilson in Oakdale cemetery. Sympathy of friends here is extended to the bereaved relatives.

The longest moon eclipse of half a century occured Monday night. Many local residents stayed up until midnight to see the phenomena. Shadow of the earth commenced crossing the moon about 9:30 and clearing about midnight. During the eclipse, the moon became yellow and later copper colored in appearance.

Peterson Rites Held

Funeral services for the late John P. Peterson were held Friday afternoon with Rev. H. A. Larson in charge. Misses Marie and Merriam Anderson sang several appropriate numbers during course of the service at the home and later at the Swedish Lutheran church of Black River where impressive services were held. Friends from far and near gathered at the church to pay their last respects to the departed. The bier was literally banked by the numerous floral tributes. Interment was made in the family plot in the cemetery adjoining the church.

Among the out-of-town people attending the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. V. Nyvall, Ellen, Hulda and Wm. Nyvall, Henning Peterson, Mrs. Carl Eidsvik and son, Vernon, Mrs. Martin Rude, Mrs. Hans Peterson and daughter, Lydia, Mrs. Palmer Hanson and son, Raymond and Rev. and Mrs. John Anderson all of Crookston, Mrs. C. D. Simpson of Ada, Mrs. John Cronkhite and daughter, Ruth, of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Gust Gustafson of River, Minn.

AAA Will Pay 33 Cents On Wheat Allotments

A telegram from the the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Washington, D. C., to Andrew Boss, University Farm, St. Paul, in charge of the Administration's work in Minnesota, announces that the 1935 wheat allotment payments to farmers co-operating in the wheat production control program will be at the rate of 33 cents a bushel. The first payment will be 20 cents a bushel, and the second will be at least 13 cents, less local costs. The processing tax for 1935 will remain unchanged.

This means that the farmers of Pennington county who co-operate will get 4 cents a bushel more than they received last year, when the payments were at 29 cents a bushel.

Visitors in St. Hilaire on Monday were Mr. and Mrs. Karl Krueger of Downey, Calif., and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Spillane of Minneapolis. They were visiting with relatives at their former home at Red Lake Falls. The former was at one time residents of this village when Mr. Krueger operated a harness shop. Mr. Spillane formerly had a confectionery store and job printing shop at Red Lake Falls and now has a job shop on Lake street at Minneapolis.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know.

O. Gunstad attended a meeting of the Oakland Park Sanatorium commission at the Sanatorium last Thursday evening.

Lillly and Eva Johnson, Mrs. Carl Johnson and Mrs. Geo. Bakko motored Sunday to Fosston and visited with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank West and daughter, Vivian, of Correll, Minn., were guests Sunday and Monday at the R. Kirkconnel home.

Walfred Walback, who is employed in a V. C. C. camp at Fort Sibley near New London was home this week on a combined business and pleasure trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Olness of Westby, Wis, are here for a visit at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Olness. Sterling is employed in a bank at Westby.

Miss Helga Kalland, operator at the phone exchange, begun her annual vacation this week. She and sister, Amanda, plan to take a trip to Baudette and other border towns.

Mrs. E. Thompson and granddaughter, Betty Thompson, came Thursday from Leonard, N. D., to spend a week at the home of Mrs. Thompson's daughter, Mrs. E. N. Reiersgord.

Guests Sunday at the A. V. Jacobson home were Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Skarsbo and family, J. A. Amble and family all of Grand Forks. Art Jacobson and Vick Walsburg and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Johnson, accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Ole Johnson, and his sister, Mrs. Iver Johnson and son, motored here from Evanston, Ill., fore part of the week for a visit with old friends. The Johnson family resided some years ago southeast of the village before they moved to Illinois.

The annual tour of the St. Hilaire 4-H Club will take place Thursday, July 25th. Members are requested to be present at Johnson's Cafe not later than 1:30 p. m. Route of the tour was not decided upon at the time of this notice. All members plan to be present.

Larson Brothers decorated their new store front recently by hanging a new 48 foot awning. Shelves for the grocery department have been finished and are ready to use. New shelvings for dry goods, shoes and hardware are to be installed next.

"Standard" separator oil 70 cents per gallon at Jackson's.

Ed Eide and family have returned to their home at Duluth after spending a couple weeks with their relatives east of the village.

Special meetings of the board of directors of the creamery were held both Thursday and Friday night to consider matters that had to be acted upon before next regular meeting.

Grain is heading out and looks wonderfully well in most places in this section. With favorable weather, early harvesting will be under way latter part of this month.

Miss Alice Skottem returned Tuesday evening from the St. Lukes hospital at Thief River where she had been a patient a week.

George Biskey, Sr., returned Sunday from the hospital at Thief River where he received treatment following a severe attack of asthma. He is showing gradual improvement.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Corbet are the happy parents of a son born Friday night at the hospital at Thief River. Mother and child are both doing well.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hanson, Valarie Olsen, the Jepson and Oscar Haugen families were among those from here who witnessed the historical pageant Sunday at Itasca State Park.

Leonard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Yonke, suffered a fractured arm and jaw in a runaway accident last Friday on a farm northwest of here where he was employed. He is now at a Thief River hospital and is reported to be improving at a satisfactory rate.

Rear part of the Spectator office and the corner lot has been sold to the creamery association which will install a filling station on the corner. The office building will be moved to another location.

Haying thruout this community has been done under handicap this year. Those who cut hay early had to turn it three or four times because of rain, and those who waited for fairer weather did not get the quality of hay they had expected. This is especially true of the alfalfa.

Band Ice Cream Social

The band will give another concert on this Saturday evening and will also serve ice cream and cake after the concert. The band is also planning on another social in August. The purpose of the socials is to raise money to send the band to the State Fair this fall. We invite you all to come and listen to our concerts and also patronize our socials.

Ball Game Sunday

The Plummer ball team will be here Sunday afternoon to cross bats with the local team. Plummer has a good team this year so an interesting contest can be looked forward to by ball fans. The Grygla team, which beat the locals in a very close game last Sunday, will play their return game here Sunday August 11th.

Attend Bible Camp

Misses Grace Dahle, Evelyn Gigstad, Laura Almquist, Vivian Lindquist, Carmen Highland and Dorothy Gunstad left Sunday to spend a week at the annual Bible Camp held at Wabanica Creek on shores of the Rainy river northwest of Baudette. Vernon Lindquist motored up with them Sunday morning and returned the same day.

Bureau Picnic, July 28

The Pennington County Farm Bureau will hold their annual picnic at the Smiley Community Hall in Smiley township Sunday July 28th. Every Farm Bureau member is urged to be present and bring any neighbors or friends that care to come with them.

A very good program of speeches, games, contests and other events will be staged. The St. Hilaire 4-H band will furnish music for the occasion. Among members of the entertainment committee are Mrs. L. E. Beebe and Mrs. V. G. Brink of St. Hilaire.

Miss Huldah Gigstad and her cousin, Miss Emma Narveson, motored here Thursday from Crookston for a short visit at the Mrs. Hilda Gigstad home. Miss Gigstad left this week with Crookston friends on a trip to Sturgeon Bay, Crandon and other points in Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. O. Gunstad spent Sunday at the summer home of her mother at Maple Lake.

Annual School Meeting

The annual meeting and election of directors for the local school district was held Tuesday night at the assembly room in the school building. Over sixty people, the largest number that had attended a school meeting for many years past, were present and voted. V. G. Brink, present clerk of the district, was re-elected for a three year term, and Mrs. N. E. Beebe was elected for a three year term as trustee to succeed R. A. Young.

Lose At Grygla

The local ball team motored Sunday to Grygla and took the short end of a 6 to 5 score in one of the most interesting ball games played in this section this season. With Bill Hallameck on the mound, St. Hilaire put up a whale of a game and looked like an easy winner until last half of the ninth frame when Grygla tied the score 3 to 3. In the extra inning played to break the tie St. Hilaire put across two runs making the score 5 to 3. The Grygla lads in their turn at bat, connected for three safe hits, and these, coupled with an error by St. Hilaire, gave them three runs making a total of 6 to 5 for St. Hilaire. Those who saw the game state it was the most interesting contest they had seen this season.

Will Oil T. H. No 32

A crew is now at work stripping at the Patton gravel pit west of town in preparation for hauling of gravel to be used in connection with semi-hard surfacing of T. H. No. 32. The road is to be re-treated from Marcoux north to Thief River Falls, according to reports. Some gravel trucks came yesterday to be employed on the project.

Appointed Appraiser

J. V. Patton was notified this week of his appointment as one of a board of three members to appraise lands for the state in the Mud Lake Migratory Waterfowl Refuge. The others are Tom Bjerke of this county, and Andrew Johnson of Clearwater. Appraisal work on the 52,000 acres of land included in the Refuge will start immediately and is to be completed in 90 days.

Mrs. N. E. Beebe returned this week after visiting a couple weeks with relatives at Rapidan and Mankato and also in the Twin Cities.

The Purpose of
Deposit Insurance

When Congress created the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation its primary objective was the protection of depositors. This Corporation began insuring deposits January 1, 1934. It is a permanent organization.

It now insures deposits in a great majority of the banks, including this institution. As a result, millions of depositors enjoy a degree of financial security heretofore unknown. When you have money on deposit here you know for a certainty that your deposits up to $5,000.00 are fully safeguarded against loss. Deposit insurance is for your protection.

MUSSOLINI CALLS WAR WITH ETHIOPIA UNAVOIDABLE—"REVOLT" IN HOUSE.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

W. P. George

STANDING atop a cannon, Benito Mussolini told 15,000 Black Shirt volunteers and the world as well that in the matter of Ethiopia "We have decided upon a struggle in which we as a government and a people will not turn back. The decision is irretrievable."

Unless Emperor Haile Selassie gets right down on his knees to Il Duce, the war in his dominion will begin in September when the rainy season ends. No one expects the "king of kings" to submit tamely, so other nations are advising their nationals in Ethiopia to get out of the country. William Perry George, the American charge d'affaires at Addis Ababa, was authorized by the State department to advise American citizens to leave, or take whatever other steps he deemed necessary to protect their safety. Nearly all these Americans are connected with Seventh Day Adventist and United Presbyterian missions.

Mr. George transmitted to the emperor the rather curt reply of the American government to his majesty's appeal for aid in stopping Italy. Secretary of State Hull, writing by authority of the President, told the emperor the United States was "loath to believe" the two countries actually will engage in warfare as they are both signatories of the Kellogg pact. The note also pointed out that the arbitration proceedings might arrive at a satisfactory decision.

The chances that war might be averted by the arbitrators seemed slight. Those gentlemen met again at Scheveningen and their session was disrupted by the Italian representatives when a spokesman for Ethiopia set forth the fact that Ualual, scene of the bloody clash last December, is well within the Ethiopian border.

Apparently the British have given up trying to check Mussolini and are now devoting their efforts to plans for getting British and British Indian subjects out of Addis Ababa on short notice. Troop-carrying planes at Cairo and cruisers, sloops and troop ships at various near east ports were being made ready for this service.

France evidently intends to let Italy go ahead with the Ethiopian adventure, and, like the United States, is not inclined to participate in an economic blockade of Italy such as was unofficially suggested by England.

Rep. Brewster

REVOLT in congress against alleged dictatorial attempts of the administration reached a climax when the house, by the decisive vote of 258 to 148, rejected the "death sentence" in the utility holding companies bill as passed by the senate and demanded by the President. The record vote came on a motion to substitute the house bill placing utility holding companies under regulation of the securities and exchange commission for the senate bill which prescribed the dissolution of the holding companies of more than first degree beginning in 1940.

The adoption of this motion killed the "death sentence." After substituting the house bill for the senate bill, the perfected measure was passed by a vote of 322 to 81.

Immediately after this action, the house voted unanimously for an investigation of alleged lobbying by both the supporters and the foes of the utility measure. During the debate on the bill it was frequently charged that the capitol was swarming with utility company lobbyists, and then came two serious accusations against the other side. Representative John H. Hoeppel of California, Democrat, asserted an unnamed administration lobbyist had offered to get California's relief allotment increased if Hoeppel would vote for the bill as the President wanted it. This didn't greatly impress the house, but later Representative Ralph O. Brewster of Maine, Republican, charged that Thomas G. Corcoran, a young brain truster who is co-author of the administration bill, had threatened cessation of construction of the $37,000,000 Passamaquoddy dam project in the congressman's district if Brewster should vote against the "death sentence."

Mr. Brewster said he did not believe the President was aware that such tactics were being used by his aids or would countenance them, and Rankin of Mississippi and Moran of Maine defended Mr. Roosevelt. But the President's contact man, Charles West, and Postmaster General Farley's lobbyist, Emil Hurja, had been so active among the house members that the resentment of the lawmakers was aroused and they glady directed that the lobbying charges be investigated.

CRITICS of the President's program have made up their minds that he is deliberately building up a "crisis" which will provide excuse for a demand for constitutional amendments in the campaign of 1936. Their conviction was strengthened by Mr. Roosevelt's letter to Congressman Samuel B. Hill, chairman of the interstate commerce subcommittee, urging the passage of the Guffey coal bill regardless of doubts as to its constitutionality.

President Roosevelt followed the suggestion of Attorney General Cummings that the legislation should be put through congress because "the situation is so urgent," and that the question of constitutionality should be left up to the courts.

The President, admitting that coal mining is in itself an intrastate transaction, nevertheless wrote that the final test of the validity of the Guffey bill would depend upon whether production conditions directly affect, promote, or obstruct interstate commerce. The Supreme court, in the Schechter NRA case, quoted a previous opinion that mining, manufacturing, and other forms of production were as local in their character as the production of crops, and hence beyond the reach of congress.

THE secretary of the treasury appeared before the house ways and means committee which was trying to formulate the new tax bill wanted by the administration, and declared that, depending on the rates of taxation adopted, the measure might bring in as much as $1,000,000,000 a year or as little as $118,000,000 annually. As the representative of the administration, the young secretary declined to advise as to the rates, though the Republican members of the committee tried to pin him down to details. The legislation outlined by the President includes taxation of inheritances and gifts, higher surtaxes on million dollar incomes and graduated income taxes on corporations. It is believed the committee's bill will not go outside these limits.

Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, Republican leader, predicted that congress either would recess and reconvene in the fall or would put off enactment of the tax bill until the session beginning January 3 next.

Sen. Glass

IN THE battle between Senator Carter Glass and Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the federal reserve board, the former has, at this writing, scored the most points. The astute Virginian extracted from the Eccles-Currie banking bill most of the radical provisions that would have led to government or public ownership of the federal reserve system, and, indeed, practically rewrote the measure. Then his subcommittee handed it on to the senate banking and currency committee, which promptly gave the bill its approval, without a record vote, and after making only two minor changes.

Governor Eccles and Secretary of the Treasury Morganthau expected to be called before the committee and were prepared to tell why the bill would not suit the administration, but the committee didn't give them a chance.

As passed by the house, the banking bill would give autocratic powers over the banking system to a politically dominated federal reserve board; and the party in power would have the authority to force the twelve reserve banks to lend unlimited amounts to the national treasury. Under the bill as rewritten by Glass, reserve board members are to be appointed for 14-year terms and are to be discharged only for cause; chief officers of the reserve banks are to be chosen by their directors, subject to reserve board approval, for five-year periods, and the reserve banks need not buy additional government bonds unless they choose to do so.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, was the scene of a second "grass roots" convention of Republicans, the six states participating being Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee. "To revitalize interest in the party" was declared the purpose of the meeting by George H. Bender of Ohio, permanent chairman. The attendance was large and enthusiastic and the resolutions adopted, like those of the Springfield conference, denounced the New Deal and called the voters to the defense of the country's Constitution and free institutions.

Under the surface there was a good deal of irritation, for the old timers in the party organization feared to lose their influence, perhaps with reason.

HUEY LONG'S conquest of Louisiana was completed when the legislature gave final approval to 25 bills designed to destroy local political patronage in the state and otherwise to strengthen the senator's dominance. He now has in hand all the weapons he needs for the elimination of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley of New Orleans and his followers.

OUR army lost an able and distinguished officer in the death of Maj. Gen. Stuart Heintzelman at the army and navy hospital in Hot Springs, Ark. The grandson and son of army officers, General Heintzelman was graduated from West Point in 1899. After service in the Philippines and China he was sent to France as an observer, and when America entered the war he held high staff assignments. He won the D. S. M. and was decorated by France and Italy. From the inception of the CCC General Heintzelman was in charge of federal reclamation projects in Missouri until last February, when he was given command of the Seventh corps area.

"AMERICAN COMMONWEALTH POLITICAL FEDERATION" is the high sounding title taken by the representatives of various radical organizations for the body which they organized at a conference in Chicago. The majority faction in the meeting issued a call for a national convention at which a new party shall be created, and until this is done the "A.C.P.F." will function. Its officers are Congressman Thomas R. Amlie of Wisconsin, chairman; John Bosch, Atwater, Minn., of the Farm Holiday association, vice chairman; Alfred Bingham of New York, son of former United States Senator Hiram Bingham, Connecticut Republican, executive secretary; and Prof. Paul H. Douglas, treasurer.

Production for use was the principal plank in the conference platform. Other planks declared for union wages for persons employed on relief projects and other labor objectives, for a "soak the rich" tax program, and against war.

The call for creation of a third party was opposed by Congressman Vito Marcantonio of New York city, and he withdrew from the conference together with several of his fellow townsmen. Communists were barred from the meeting, and this, too, caused loud protest. Senator Nye of North Dakota unexpectedly appeared and advised against formation of a new party for the 1936 campaign.

INVESTIGATION of the administration of the Virgin islands by a senate committee was certain to be lively. The very first witness heard, Charles H. Gibson, was threatened with jail by Secretary of the Interior Ickes for removing official documents from the files. Mr. Gibson, who was government attorney for the islands until Ickes ousted him, had testified rather vaguely against the regime of Gov. Paul M. Pearson.

Gibson testified that Governor Pearson had exceeded his authority under the law, was unpopular with a large section of the population of the islands, and was not frank in his administration. To support his testimony Gibson introduced several letters which were the documents to which Ickes alluded.

IF GEORGE, former king of Greece, returns to his lost throne it will be without Elizabeth of Hohenzollern who was his wife. This Rumanian princess has just been granted a divorce from George in Bucharest on the ground of desertion. There was no contest, for George, now living in London, paid no attention to the suit.

It was believed in Bucharest that Elizabeth will soon marry her secretary, Alauander Szanavy, a handsome forty-year-old Greek, and that they will run a model farm which Elizabeth bought recently for $3,500,000.

ALDERMANIC investigation of relief administration in New York city has brought a report from the committee recommending that relief workers be paid less than the wages in private industry, that "chiselers and parasites" receiving $24,000,000 a year of relief funds be prosecuted, and that "existence carpetbagging" by out of town relief executives be halted.

The typical weekly allowance to a single person to meet every need was reported as $7.30 a week, ranging upward for families to $19.50 for a family of nine. The number of persons on relief was reported as 1,400,000.

AGITATION in favor of a federal sales tax and for abolition of the "nuisance" taxes is the purpose of an organization called the Committee of Americans which is being formed by Charles H. Sabin, Jr., one of the organizers of the Crusaders. Mr. Sabin says the committee hopes to present to the President and congress a petition bearing a million names. He admits some of the wealthiest families in the country are represented on the committee but denies that it is to be regarded as a "wealth lobby" against the "tax wealth" program of the President.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER reached his ninety-sixth birthday and spent the day quietly on his estate near Lakewood, N. J., with his nearest relatives. There was no celebration of the anniversary, not even a birthday cake. According to his physician, Mr. Rockefeller is in better health than he has been for the past three years.

GEN. HUGH JOHNSON assumed his new office of federal works relief administrator for New York city. "Robbie," his ever present secretary, fended off the reporters for a day, but let them in then, and to them the general wailed:

"I hate this thing! It isn't helping anybody, anywhere. When the source of money is cut off we'll be right back where we started. It's disheartening to sit here, knowing that when the funds are gone, the jobs will be gone."

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE proclaimed the establishment of an AAA adjustment program for the 1935 rye crop which will include benefit payments of amounts not yet disclosed. Representatives from 16 rye growing states met in Washington to discuss the program and outline plans for its operation.

Farmers from the principal wheat producing states met with AAA officials and gave their approval to a tentative flexible plan for the payment of benefits to wheat growers.

JAPAN'S beautiful inland sea was the scene of a terrible disaster that cost 104 lives. The steamer Midori Maru, crowded with holiday passengers, collided with a freighter in the foggy night and sank almost immediately. Rescue boats picked up 91 of the 166 passengers and 56 of the crew. All the victims were Japanese.

NRA DECISION

By ALFRED SLOAN, JR.
Motor Magnate.

THE highest wage scale is the best wage scale, providing it is not out of balance with other factors in the national economy.

So far as the broader implications of the NRA decisions are concerned, I am satisfied that they will eventually be recognized as vital steps forward in promoting a sane industrial recovery. Sooner or later we are bound to recognize that regimentation and bureaucracy have no part in our national economy. They can only produce one result—lowered efficiency, increased costs and reduced standard of living.

We have also to recognize the fallacy of the "theory of scarcity" upon which many of our recovery programs are based. Recovery can be promoted only by increasing productivity. Arbitrary and uneconomic increases of the factors that make up prices penalize productivity and retard recovery. Employment is reduced as well.

FOOLHARDY PANACEAS

By HENRY H. HEIMANN
Of National Association of Credit Men.

IN THE broader field of endeavor that confronts us in these days we must eventually find a growing responsibility taken by each individual to do his bit for the betterment of mankind. Here is the field that presents tremendous opportunities, but in our endeavor to promote the happiness, health and the comfort of our people, care must be exercised to avoid these foolhardy panaceas which have taken such a toll from people throughout history.

We see the ranks of the unemployed and many accept them as a permanent condition. They do not realize that half of the people employed today are working in industries that did not exist 50 years ago. Fifty years hence half of our people gainfully employed in industry will probably be performing labor as yet undiscovered, perhaps not even within the minds of the present generation.

NATIONAL PROBLEMS

By HENRY A. WALLACE
Secretary of Agriculture.

TODAY, when farmers and laboring men ask for a delegation of federal power equivalent to the tariff or the corporate form of organization, or the federal banking structure, they are in danger of being met by some such statement as this:

"It is not the province of the court to consider the economic advantages or disadvantages of such a centralized system. It is sufficient that the federal Constitution does not provide for it."

I am reminded of that famous observation by Justice Holmes: "The life of the law is not logic; the life of the law is experience." Presumably if the experience of the American people suggests that the advantages of attacking national problems nationally outweigh the disadvantages, then sooner or later national problems will be attacked nationally. Necessity is the mother of social, as well as of mechanical, invention."

NEW DEAL AND COURTS

By CHARLES K. BURDICK
Dean of Cornell Law School.

IN VIEW of the emergency and the consequent recognition of the common importance of any national program adopted to meet general economic and social problems, it might be possible that the Supreme court would now uphold congressional legislation imposing as a condition of interstate shipment of goods compliance with rules as to quantity of production, wages, hours of work and collective bargaining.

If public opinion is strongly and persistently in favor of changes and developments in government, a way to accomplish the desires of the people will, of course, be found.

In the United States, where the organic law is the supreme law of the land, the courts may delay, they may to some extent direct, but they cannot, in the long run, withstand a defined and persistent public opinion.

THE TVA PROJECT

By JOUETT SHOUSE
President American Liberty League

THE TVA is a perfect example of irresponsible political and economic bureaucracy. Its declared objectives are, of course, commendable and proper, but in reality the whole authority is a federally sponsored experiment in state socialism. It is noteworthy that no matter how socialistic some of our recent experiments are, their sponsors have refused to present them under their proper labels.

SOCIAL SECURITY

By MISS FRANCES PERKINS
Secretary of Labor.

IN TWO years the United States has worked out a system of job insurance that took Europe 15 years to accomplish. The bill is subject to change, for it is a human instrument, with human imperfections, representing compromises among various factions. But I know that once it is in the laws of this land we shall not abandon it, but improve upon it from year to year.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Kimball—Magnus Johnson, former United States senator and representative, announced that he will be a candidate for governor next year

Waseca—The Waseca county board, because of tax delinquencies and resulting inability to liquidate its current indebtedness, has sold $75,000 in refunding bonds.

Ruthton—Some of the loot taken from the Ruthton postoffice safe was found hidden in a culvert near town. Money order books, four $1,000 bonds and other valuables were recovered.

Browns Valley—This community is preparing plans for the celebration of the centennial of its establishment by Joseph R. Brown who came from Fort Snelling where he had been a drummer boy in July, 1835.

St. James—The city council will ask for federal funds to finance extensive improvements to the water works system. Two new wells are to be sunk and a new stand pipe erected, if the loan is available.

St. Cloud—A headon collision between an automobile and a truck near Albany cost the life of Theodore (Ted) Schields, 32 Faribault attorney and former secretary to United States Senator Henrik Shipstead.

Morris — With home beautification and improvement in mind, women from this section of Minnesota, numbering about 200, gathered here for the annual homemakers' short course at West Central School of Agriculuret. Sessions continued three days.

St. Paul—President Roosevelt allotted $2,376,920 in work relief funds for control of black stem rust and eradication of certain types of barberry bushes in 17 states. Minnesota will receive $252,120; North Dakota $36,480; South Dakota $24,960 and Wisconsin $249,600.

Duluth—Juvenile ardor put a rag weed eradication campaign $1,296 in the red. Backers of the drive put up $500 for a penny bounty for each bundle of 50 weeds collected. The youths responded with such vigor that in two days the bounties aggregated $1,786. Now the campaign supporters are trying to determine how to make the payments.

St. Paul—Total indebtedness of all classes of governmental units in Minnesota was $332,297,201 as of January 1, 1935, according to a report issued by the Minnesota Taxpayers' association. Special emergencies have increased the amount this year, the report said, including the necessity of issuing certificates of indebtedness to meet relief needs and current deficit.

St. Paul—Seed loans totaling $763,015 have been made to farmers in 21 counties under the provisions of the $2,000,000 seed loan act of the 1935 legislature. State Audior Stafford King said that a few of the loans had already been repaid. The money, up to $300 per farmer, is advanced by the county boads and in case of losses, the counties are reimbursed by the state.

Minneapolis—With the SERA rapidly transferring its efforts to direct relief, the two federal work relief agencies in Minnesota laid down classifications of the type of projects to be submitted to each. The Public Works administration under W. N. Carey, will receive applications for construction projects involving estimated costs of more than $25,000. The Works Progress administration will receive projects involving costs of less than $25,000 and all projects not acted upon or rejected by the PWA within 30 days. Victor Christgau directs the PWA in Minnesota.

Minneapolis—A special audit of 125,000 cancelled pay roll checks was begun by state emergency relief administration headquarters in St. Paul to determine if any other forged checks had been passed, in addition to the 65 forgeries for $1,500 which came to the Minneapolis SERA finance division. In addition to the SERA forgeries, $2,500 in CCC pay roll forgeries also have been discovered by state and federal investigators. United Staes secret service agents are seeking a former disbursing agent while state crime bureau men are hunting a band passing SERA checks.

Owatonna—Open revolt from domination by the state emergency relief administration was voted by 29 southern Minnesota counties in face of a veiled ultimatum that by such action they might jeopardize their share of federal funds under the national works program. Through their commissioners and auditors, the counties voted not to sign any contracts with SERA guaranteeing to raise their allotments for relief during the year, pending outcome of a meeting with Victor Christgau of the works progress administration with headquarters in St. Paul. Simultaneously, the assembly of about 100 county officials went on record demanding right to administer at least 50 per cent of relief funds in their respective territories without dictation from SERA

Duluth—Plans to push electrification of rural districts in Minnesota were advanced when the power committee of the state planning board forwarded to Washington the results of a survey taken to determine the extent to which electric lines can be extended to serve farmers and small town communities. The committee is anxious to have the state get in line for its share of the $100,000,000 federal farm electrification fund and plans submitted call for the allotment of about $5,000,000.

BEES' "SWEET TOOTH"

Though they deal in nectar and honey all their lives, bees do not have as sensitive a "sweet tooth" as human beings, it has been discovered by Prof. Karl von Frisch of Munich.

Science Service reported that Professor Von Frisch had "trained" bees to expect supplies of ordinary cane sugar solution at a given place. When they became used to visiting it regularly, he cut down the strength of the solution. The lowest concentration the bees could detect as sweet was about 2 per cent sugar. Human beings get a sweet taste from sugar solutions only one-fifth that strong.—Literary Digest.

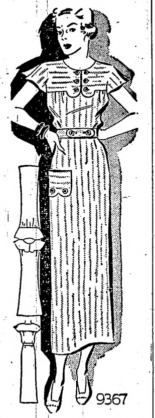
PATTERN 9367



The morning after you start this, you'll be wearing it. It's that quick to make up, so don't waste any time making up your mind to have this for your next "work-a-day" frock! You can't possibly find a simpler pattern—nor more becoming lines—nor "breezier" sleeves. And those are the things that count for something in a kitchen. The nice scallops on the yoke and pocket are the details that so aptly make this frock "different," and the slit sleeve is ready for action. The bosom and back fullness (so much in vogue) does nicely by your femininity. Wear nice bright buttons to match the cotton print you choose.

Pattern 9367 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3 yards 36 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth street, New York.

Public Debt Mounts

Washington.—Back in 1916 before the United States became involved in the World war our government had a national debt which was regarded as large at that time. It was only $1,200,000,000, but that was sufficient in those days to cause concern.

On the first of July, 1935, the treasury started a new set of books. This represented the beginning of a new financial year for the government. One of the items it had to enter on those books was a public debt of about $28,800,000,000. We of today think that is a huge debt and when it is compared with the outstanding obligations of the federal government a score of years ago its magnitude seems titanic.

When the treasury closed the fiscal year books on June 30 and counted the cost of the preceding 12 months of government it was found that there had been expended roughly $7,300,000,000. In the same period it had collected through income and other forms of taxes, including duties laid at the customs houses, a total of approximately $3,800,000,000. This means that in the last 12 months the government operated with a deficit of something over $3,500,000,000. In other words, its operating costs were virtually double the amount of revenue it received. This deficit together with the deficit that was created during the earlier months of the Roosevelt administration added something like $8,000,000,000 to the national debt. President Hoover while in office added about $4,000,000,000 to the national debt through deficits in the last two years of his administration. So there are two outstanding phases in the financial affairs of the federal government as it starts the fiscal year of 1936, which began July 1.

There is bred these questions: How long can the federal government continue to spend money like water and thus increase its public debt, and how long will the American people continue to permit expenditures by their government in excess of the revenues it collects?

They are related questions. Neither can happen without the other. But it seems to me that the time has come for taxpayers and voters generally to take note of the condition of the government's finances.

Mr. Roosevelt justifies these heavy outlays under the necessities of an emergency. He contends that when prosperity returns and business is normal, citizens will pay their taxes without complaint and that these taxes will be sufficiently large in their total production to whittle down the gigantic outstanding debt. Hence there is at this moment an urgent need for examination of the whole tax structure. This is necessary to maintain the credit of the United States. If people doubt or lose faith in government bonds, the credit of the government can be said to be impaired. No nation of self-respecting people desires that thing to happen. It has long been a recognized truism that if a United States government bond was not worth its face value, the money we have and the rights we exercise as citizens likewise become impaired in value and benefit.

Finances Analyzed

Careful analysis of government finances in the last 12 months shows that federal revenues were sufficient to cover what Mr. Roosevelt characterizes as ordinary government costs. He means by that the expenses of the regular establishments of government and excludes all of the so-called emergency agencies, of which there are now some sixty-odd. This condition reveals that federal taxes are about the only item in governmental affairs or in private business that have completely recovered from depression effects. Recovery has been sufficient to make the total revenues virtually the same as those received under the Hoover administration in the fiscal year of 1929-1930. It shows also that Mr. Roosevelt has not reduced the cost of ordinary running expenses of the government as he had planned when he became President.

I mentioned earlier a comparison of the public debt now and in 1916. Let us take another date, namely, 1919. At that time the outstanding debt was $26,594,000,000. The annual interest charge on that debt was just short of one billion dollars. Today with a much larger outstanding debt, the annual interest charge amounts to only $820,000,000 per year.

This seems almost paradoxical but the answer lies in the interest rate the government is paying. In 1921 the average rate of interest calculated on all different types of government securities outstanding was 4.34 per cent. At the present time it is less than 3 per cent. So credit must be accorded the treasury for its gradual reduction in interest rates. Ten years ago an effort was made to market securities at gradually lower interest rates. It did not succeed fully because private business was demanding capital and private business was paying higher interest rates. In the last five or six years private business has called for very little money. Government securities and the law of supply and demand operated to allow the treasury to sell its bonds and notes at much reduced interest.

On the one hand, therefore, the Roosevelt administration has run up the public debt by about $8,000,000,000 but has succeeded in actually reducing the carrying charge of this great debt structure by more than $100,000,000 per year. That is the situation as of today. Restoration of business activity and the resultant demand for capital may change the market for treasury bonds almost overnight but the prospects for such business activity are not immediate.

Starts Something

One of the interesting things that often occurs in government affairs is the explosive effect of a single incident or a single remark by an important official. It is a characteristic of changing conditions and it is a circumstance which causes Washington observers to be on their toes continuously because they never can tell when such an incident will occur. Thus it was the other day that Representative Brewster, Republican, of Maine, a former governor of that state, arose in his place in the house of representatives and charged that the Roosevelt administration was threatening individual members of the house who declined to support the administration view on a particular piece of legislation. Mr. Brewster named one Thomas Corcoran as the administration emissary and bearer of the threats. He told of details of the circumstance and informed the house that the legislation which the administration demanded he should support was the so-called "death sentence" provision in the bill to eliminate utility holding companies. Suffice it to say that Mr. Brewster did not yield.

The point of this incident, however, is that immediately there came from many quarters in the house a demand for an investigation of lobbying activities. There had been many charges theretofore that the public utility corporations were over-running the house with lobbyists in their effort to defeat the "death sentence" section. The real reason back of this sudden outburst, however, lies in dissatisfaction among many members of congress with tactics employed by the Roosevelt administration. They have taken orders constantly since March 4, 1933, but apparently they are no longer going to obey.

So the investigation of lobbying is to be started by a house committee and it will be broader than just the public utility lobbyist. If the undercurrent of information proves to be correct, administration representatives who have frequented the house chambers during consideration of the holding company bill will be placed on the witness stand to tell their story.

* * *

Look Into Lobbying

In the meantime and maybe as a result of the excitement over the Brewster charge, Senator Black, an Alabama Democrat, started fireworks in the senate. He is prepared to create investigating machinery in that end of the Capitol to determine what influence the utility lobbyists have exerted. That investigation also will go beyond the utility lobbyist phase. It is scheduled to dig up dirt on lobbyists for other legislation. Thus far there has been little mention of administration activities around the senate.

But, as in the case of the house investigation, it appears now that the senate investigation has a double purpose. It will be recalled that Senator Black fostered a bill requiring all lobbyists in Washington to register at the Capitol, to show their connection, to show what salaries or other compensation they receive and to make public certain types of correspondence passing between them and the people whom they represent. The gossip is that the senator's bill, although it passed the senate without difficulty, will have hard sledding in the house. Senator Black appears to be proceeding on the theory that the investigation will create additional atmosphere and public demand for passage of the lobbyist registration measure.

Actually, I believe that the investigation will do no more than ruin reputations of some few people. Such an inquiry will not stop lobbying. It will not even curb or reduce lobbying. As long as individuals have property the value of which may be affected one way or the other by federal legislation, just so long will individuals seek to influence their representatives and senators in congress. It seems to me to be a perfectly natural and normal thing, and without defending the slimy type of lobbying and the raw or crooked deals that may come from lobbying, the voters have a right to express their views to their representatives.

The irony of the present situation is that undoubtedly there will be no reference in either investigation to the tremendous activity carried on by the American Federation of Labor lobbyists or the lobbyists for the American Legion or the lobbyists for certain groups such as the pacifists or the radical supporters of Russian types of government. Nor is it likely that the correct picture of administration pressure upon the last two sessions of congress will be disclosed.

Scientist Claims That Noises Can Be Deadly

Do women make more noise than motor cars?

According to an American professor of physics, yes. Giving evidence in an action to restrain a factory from making an excessive amount of noise, he described experiments with a sound meter which he had carried out in the district. These showed that women talking in their homes made 40 times more noise than the factory, and 50 per cent more noise than passing cars.

Apparently women talk more loudly in America, for experiments in this country show "loud conversation" as only double the noise of a suburban street, and two-thirds that of a pneumatic drill at 20 feet distance.

But the worst noise of all, according to one distinguished scientist, is one we can't hear. A few months ago he showed the congress of radio biology how ultra-sound waves could burn the fingers of a man holding a glass tube, although the tube itself was not heated. He claimed that it was possible to be killed by these vibrations, which were really sounds, although they could not be perceived by the naked ear.—London Answers.

4-H Club Tours Start

The tours conducted each year by 4-H Clubs of the county started last week with tours by the Kratka, Smiley, Bray-Polk Center and Norden clubs. The tours provide an opportunity for 4-H members to see what their fellow club members are doing, that they may benefit by each others experience.

The Bray-Polk Center and Norden tours terminated at the Theo. Anderson and Victor Erickson farms where picnic lunches were served following games. About 120 people tour part in the tours, and projects were viewed at about 40 farms.

Control Of Cutworms, Is Gardener's Desire

This is the time of year when the gardener is mourning over the ravages of the cutworms and wishing he knew how to keep the pests under control. Well, H. L. Parten, entomologist-insect specialist of the extension division, University Farm St. Paul, advises the use of poison bait. This poison is made of the following: bran, 1 quart, Paris green 1 heaping teaspoonful, Molasses, one-fourth teacup, water to moisten.

If you need larger quantities, follow the same proportions.

The mixture should be broadcast in the garden or around the plants in the evening after sundown, as the cutworms come out at night to feed.

L. P. Thyren Called

Another of the early pioneer settlers of this community received his final summons Saturday evening when Lars P. Thyren of Gervais township, Red Lake county, passed away at a hospital at Thief River Falls. Mr. Thyren had been in poor health for more than a year, and death was not unexpected.

Mr. Thyren was born in Vester Gotland, Sweden on April 26th, 1953 and was 82 years, 2 months and 24 days of age at time of his death. He and Mrs. Thyren were married in the old country and lived there some years before coming to the United States in May 1890. Shortly after arrival here he homesteaded his present farm in Gervais and made his home there until his death.

Undaunted by hardships encountered, and encouraged by the thought that they were making a home of their own, Mr. and Mrs. Thyren took no small part in upbuilding of the community in which they lived, and their present fine farm in Gervais remains as a monument to their industry and frugality. The Thyren home was a gathering place in the community and a hearty welcome was assured by all who entered. A kindly man, highly esteemed by all who knew him, Mr. Thyren will be sadly missed by his family and large circle of old friends.

Deceased is survived by his widow two sons and one daughter. The children are Oscar at Kelliher, Minn, Paul, who resides in River township, and Mrs. Esther Peterson who resides on the home farm. Two other sons and one daughter preceded their father in death. He is also survived by eight grandchildren.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock at the family home, and at 2 o'clock at the local Swedish Mission church with Rev. Geo. Peterson of Thief River Falls officiating.

A large number of neighbors and old friends from all parts of the community were present to pay their last respects to the departed. Interment took place in the family plot in St. Hilaire cemetery where a son, Erick, is buried.

Sympathy of friends in St. Hilaire and vicinity is extended to the relatives in their time of sorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Carpenter motored up Tuesday from their home at Isle, Minn., to visit at the home of their son, Leo, and to look after their farm property southeast of the village.

County Fair Opens Monday July, 29th

The thirty-fourth Pennington County Fair, the fourth largest fair in this state, will open Monday, July 29 and continue for five days, ending Friday, August 2nd. New stock barns have been erected on the grounds to replace those destroyed by fire; the grand stand and bleachers are being put in shape, and the grounds are being put in condition to handle the record breaking crowd expected to attend this year.

Ernie Young's Revue, which put on such a fine program a few seasons ago, will be a feature of the Fair again this year. The exhibits of livestock, grains, vegetables, flowers, etc., are expected to be on par or better than those shown in previous seasons.

Merchants thruout the county are co-operating in giving away coupons good for chances on a number of free prizes to be awarded at the fair grounds each day during the exposition.

Win From Plummer

The local baseball team beat the Plummer aggregation on local diamond last Sunday afternoon by a score of 9 to 8. Vernon Lindquist was on the mound, and Bob Huff on receiving end for St. Hilaire. Both did excellent work.

Due to an error on part of St. Hilaire, the Plummer lads were allowed to run in two scores to which they were clearly not entitled. With the score tied 8 to 8 in the ninth inning, the local boys staged a slugfest and filled the bases. A safe drive between first and second base brot in the winning score and ending the game with the bases still loaded.

Auction Sale Monday

An auction, sale of household goods belonging to the late Mrs. Hans Wilson will take place on lawn of the Wilson place next Monday, July 29, starting at 1:00 p. m. Furniture from six rooms, garden tools and various other articles will be sold.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hanson, accompanied by Mrs. Marius Miller, and Mrs. D. McAllister of Grand Forks, motored here Thursday evening from Thief River to look after effects and property of Mrs. Hanson and Mrs. McAllister's mother, the late, Mrs. Hans Wilson.

Mrs. Louis Giese and daughter of Grand Forks, have visited this week at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Jackson.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Kirkconnel had as their guests during the week-end Mr. and Mrs. Henry West and daughter, Yvonne, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hicks of Holmen, Wis.

Mr. and Mrs. Gust Gunderson of Grand Forks, Mr. and Mrs. Arnie Gunderson of Bottineau, N. D., visited here Sunday at the home of their cousin, Mrs. Geo. Bakko.

L. E. Healy was up yesterday from Red Lake Falls, to attend to affairs of the closed bank. Mr. Healy has just returned after spending a ten day vacation at Crosby.

The local baseball team won a hard fought and very interesting game played with the gravel crew team Tuesday evening by a score of 4 to 3. Because of starting late, only seven innings were played.

Larson Bros moved their grocery department to rear part of their new store this week, and are now busy arranging and displaying other goods. More new shelving is to be installed soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hauge and children motored here Thursday from Bagley for a visit at the home of Mrs. Hauge's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Jackson. Mr. Hauge attended a district creamery meeting at Thief River during the day, and all returned to Bagley that evening.

The gravel hauling crew engaged in hauling gravel from Patton's pit, has a complete baseball team among its numbers. Some of the men play regularly with Grygla and others with the Middle River team.

Sheriff Arthur Rambeck has been working in this territory the past week serving notices of expiration of time of redemption on owners, occupants and renters of land and other property that has been bid in for the state at delinquent tax sales.

Co. Commissioner Paul Roy attended meetings of the county board of equalization at the court house first of this week.

A new roof coating has been laid lately on the school building. A contractor from Grand Forks had charge of the work.

The group of local girls who attended Bible camp last week at Wabanica Creek near Baudette, returned home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albin Dahl and Ardelle, of Grygla spent Saturday at the R. Kirkconnel home. They were accompanied here by Robert Kirkconnel, who had visited there.

Norman Olsen, manager of the creamery at Leonard, visited here with his parents Thursday while enroute home after attending a meeting at Thief River Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nelson motored up Sunday from Fargo and spent the day with relatives at Hazel and at the home of her mother, Mrs. Mary Sherva in this village.

Regular monthly meeting of the creamery board was held Friday at the creamery. Checks for cream delivered during month of June was issued that day and Monday.

Joe Patton, who is acting as appraiser of lands in the Mud Lake Migratory Waterfowl Refuge, came down Friday evening and spent the week-end at his home west of town.

Material has been received at the local Barzen elevator for installation of a new scale and air lift. Work is to be started soon so the elevator will be ready when grain starts to move.

Mrs. Albert Brink returned home Sunday after having spent a few weeks at the Brink ranch at Eight Point, Mont. Nearly all lands belonging to the Brink ranch will be flooded when the Fort Peck dam project is completed.

Gravel has been spread on T. H. No. 32 between here and Red Lake Falls, and the crew is now engaged in hauling between here and Thief River in preparation for semi hard surfacing of the road.

Mr. and Mrs. Thor P. Smidesang stopped here briefly Tuesday while enroute to their home at Eldred after a trip to Thief River. Mr. Smidesang, who managed the elevator at Wylie for several years has a similar position at Eldred.

L. Anderson Dies

Lars Anderson, commonly known as Lewie Anderson, an old resident of this community, died Tuesday at a Thief River hospital after a long illness. Mr. Anderson was born in Norway and came here while a young man. He followed his vocation as a woodsman, being employed in the woods during lumbering days. Later he worked as a laborer on different farms. Being a single man, he had no permanent home but stayed here occasionally with relatives when not employed. Lewie was a pleasant man to associate with, and he was well liked by all knew him.

He is survived by a sister and brother, Mrs. N. G. Stark and Andrew Anderson here and by another brother, Pete Anderson at Duluth.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 o'clock today at the Larson Funeral Home at Thief River Falls, and burial will take place in the Lutheran cemetery north of here.

Sunday School Picnic

The Norwegian Lutheran Sunday School will hold its annual picnic, Sunday, July 28, at St. Hilaire tourist park beginning with open-air services at 11:00 a. m.

Picnic dinner at noon and a short program by the Sunday School in the afternoon. Mr. Watman of Roseau, with his violin, has promised to be present.

All members and everyone interested are cordially invited to come and spend a pleasant day. In case of rain, the program will be held at the church parlors.

Crops Damaged

The yield of what looked like a bumper grain crop earlier in the season, may be cut considerably thruout the Northwest because of rust on grain. The sultry weather that has prevailed since beginning of this month has been far from ideal for grain raising. While it is still to early to estimate the amount of damage that will result from rust, it will reduce crop yields considerly.

W. Baker, for many years in charge of the Great Northern station at Thief River Falls, dropped dead Saturday evening while engaged at his duties at the station. A sudden heart attack is given as the cause of death. Mr. Baker was well known to many local people.

Farm-Labor Picnic At Redby July 28

One of the largest Farmer-Labor picnics ever to be held in Northern Minnesota will be staged, Sunday, July 28, at Redby, Minnesota.

Governor Floyd B. Olson will head the list of speakers with Emil L. Regnier, state campaign chairman of the Farmer-Labor party, Marian LeSueur, chairman of the Women's Farm-Labor Association, Representative Gustav Erickson and Senator H. A. Bridgeman being other speakers on the program.

A loud speaking system has been installed and a musical program provided for, insuring those attending a lively and interesting program. Redby, situated on Red Lake, the largest and most beautiful lake in Minnesota, provides an ideal setting for an occasion of this kind.

Everyone is invited to bring their picnic dinner and spend the entire day. The program will start at 10 o'clock.

A report submitted to the school board by Supt. E. N. Reiersgord Tuesday evening shows cost of operating the school has declined steadily since 1932. As total state aid now received, plus the local tax is more than sufficient to operate the school, a fund is being built up that will be used for retirement of bonds.

At this meeting, all present officers were re-elected to serve for the coming year.

25 Years Ago

Rev. E. E. Thompson was carrying the mail on Route 2 while Martin Hoff, the regular carrier was on a vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Hanson left for their former home at Hendrum where Mr. Hanson was to re-engage in business.

Contract for laying of concrete walks thruout the village, to replace the old wooden ones, was let by the council that week.

Harvest was well under way and it looked like the yield would be better than expected.

Mrs. Herman Adams returned to her home at St. Paul after spending six weeks with relatives and friends here.

A. A. Reed severed his connection with the Red Lake Falls Milling Company elevator here, and was succeeded by A. R. Jones.

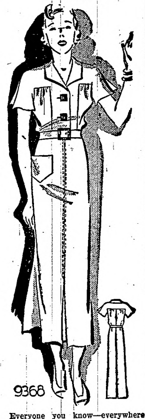
PATTERN 9368



Everyone you know—everywhere you go!—Action—Action—Action! The natural expression of youth and good health. Even our clothes are "built for action" these days and here's one that just can't wait to get going. You just know you're "going places" in the fashion world with the free stride the front and back skirt pleat give you. The simple yoke miraculously becomes an action pleated sleeve and anyone can see what subtle flattery is gathered into that bodice. A proper set-up for your summer wardrobe would be one of striped shirting, another in washable pastel sports silk. The frock is just as appropriate for street and office wear as for sports.

Pattern 9368 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards 36-inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth street, New York.

TRADE TREATY WITH RUSSIA STIRS SHARP ATTACK ON SECRETARY HULL.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

TWENTY months of apparently futile moves to revitalize the commercial relations between the United States and Russia, and then suddenly Washington announces that the two nations had concluded a one-year trade agreement under which the Soviet Republics agreed to increase their American imports by 150 per cent. In return for purchases of $30,000,000 worth of American goods Russia is to be granted wide tariff concessions by the United States.

Secretary Hull

Russia will buy railroad equipment, machinery for making new automobile models and other products of heavy industry. In addition the Soviets will buy cotton. The railroad equipment is needed badly for modernization of a weak transportation system.

In return Russia expects to sell sausage casings, certain grades of iron ore, manganese, furs and dairy products in large quantities to the United States.

The pact, concluded by the exchange of notes between Ambassador Bullitt in Moscow and Maxim Litvinov, commissar for foreign affairs, provides for no further loans to Russia and makes no mention of the more than $700,000,000 in debts contracted by former Russian governments. It is in line with Secretary Hull's policy of trade agreements. For these two reasons especially it is attacked by many Republicans and not a few Democrats in congress. Senator Pat McCarren of Nevada was one of the angriest of these gentlemen. He declared Secretary Hull was a "prize diplomatic dupe" and announced that he would demand an immediate modification of the reciprocal tariff act to rescind powers under which Hull is negotiating such treaties. Key Pittman, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, also is earnestly opposed to Hull's trade program.

WHEN one witness before the house ways and means committee, opposing the President's new tax program, called congress a "rubber stamp," Chairman Doughton and other Democrats declared they had been insulted and would hear no more from the witness. Nearly every one else they heard was as insistent in denouncing the proposed tax bill but more tactful. Most of them represented various sections of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Then the committee apparently decided that it really would be a rubber stamp, for it quit work on the tax measure for the time being and, according to report, left the writing of it to certain brain trustees of the Treasury department. The public hearings had been noisy, full of bickerings and probably of no use whatever.

Administration leaders then began planning for postponement of the proposed tax legislation until the winter session. It was said President Roosevelt had consented to this course provided a bill can be agreed upon before adjournment that shall be acceptable to all the groups whose objective is redistribution of wealth by taxation.

The prospect of an early adjournment was so pleasing to the house that one member, Deen of Georgia, was given a veritable ovation when he made a speech telling how tired the legislators were.

FIFTY thousand dollars was appropriated by the house for investigation by the rules committee of lobbying for and against bills affecting utilities interests. Representative Rankin of Mississippi declared that Representative O'Connor of New York, chairman of the committee, was unfit to conduct the inquiry because he was antagonistic to the administration. O'Connor, rising to reply, was given an ovation by the house, and promised the investigation would be thorough and impartial.

T. G. Corcoran

Already the committee has begun its work, the first witness being Representative Brewster of Maine, who declared Thomas G. Corcoran, New Deal lawyer, had tried to force him to vote for the "death sentence" provision in the utilities bill by threats of stopping work on the Passamaquoddy project. Corcoran was then put on the stand and denied the main features of Brewster's story, whereupon the Maine congressman shouted, "You're a liar." Corcoran explained with facility his activities in behalf of the utilities measure. He said he was assigned to help with the original drafting of the bill "through a direct request from the President." Senators Wheeler and Rayburn, he said, asked him to help bring about passage of the bill.

UNOFFICIALLY and informally, the general opinion seems to be that the Wagner labor disputes act is unconstitutional and will be so declared by the United States Supreme court when that tribunal is called on for a decision. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, urges labor leaders to pay no attention to claims that the law is invalid.

"Leading legal authorities of the nation are of the opinion that the act is Constitutional in every respect," he wrote, but added in a letter that he expects a court test and that the American Federation of Labor will get "the best legal talent."

Even if the Wagner law is knocked out by the Supreme court, the administration believes it has a plan that will avert at least 90 per cent of the usual number of strikes, walk-outs, lock-outs and other disorders. It is being launched in Toledo, Ohio, and has been called the "Toledo plan" because it was conceived by Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady when he was trying to settle a dispute in that Ohio city.

It has no sectional characteristics; carries no federal compulsion, and rests solely upon the willingness of workers and employers in every city that adopts the plan, to abandon the harsh economic weapons of old and substitute peaceful discussion for violence.

Mr. McGrady explained the plan this way:

A panel of business and labor leaders of equal number is chosen with a federal official to act as chairman. This official presumably would be one who has made a record in the regional labor service setup under the national labor relations board.

The employer would continue to bargain with his workers as usual. In event of a disagreement between them the workers agree not to strike and the employer agrees not to lock out or discriminate against the men as the issue is carried to the panel.

This group debates the problem and if it is unable to agree the heads of the business and labor representatives on the panel and the federal chairman continue seeking an avenue of settlement. If they are unable to agree then an appeal is made direct to the owner of the business involved and the head of the union controlling the workers.

SENATOR HUEY LONG has the political fate of his chief opponent, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley of New Orleans, in the palm of his hand. But he is forcing the people of the city to put the mayor out. A majority of Walmsley's followers, tired of the conflict, formally deserted him when the commission council adopted a resolution endorsing recent statements of two commissioners calling for the city to make peace with Long. The mayor, standing almost alone, declined to yield. He told the council he "would not deal with men who have been called 'crooks and thieves' by every member of the commission council."

T. Semmes Walmsley

In a caucus preceding the council session, 13 of Walmsley's 17 ward leaders voted for his resignation "for the good of the city." The mayor told them he was "going to stick from h—l to breakfast." Senator Long received a committee of the seceders and said he would call a session of the state legislature to force Walmsley out of office within 24 hours after the "old regulars" obtained approval of a majority of the city's voters for a petition requesting the mayor's removal.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT led various of his cabinet members, leaders of the majority in congress and captains of the New Deal on a weekend outing that was at once dubbed "the kiss and make up excursion." For a lot of these men had been snarling at one another in the physical and political heat of recent days in Washington and the Chief Executive evidently thought it time the quarreling was ended. The entire bunch went to Jefferson island in Chesapeake bay, Mr. Roosevelt on his yacht Sequoia and the others on a fleet of boats.

Cabinet members included were Vice President Garner, Postmaster General Farley, Attorney General Cummings, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, Secretary of War Dern, and Secretary of Commerce Roper. Speaker Byrns headed a congressional delegation including Senators Tydings, Pittman, Robinson, Copeland, Dieterich, Walsh, Gerry, Duffy, and Radcliffe.

Relief Director Hopkins, No. 1 Brain Truster Tugwell, and Treasury General Counsel Oliphant also were in the party.

NEWSPAPERS of northern Italy intimated that Premier Mussolini might abandon his projected war with Ethiopia if he could find a way of backing out without losing face. But the Roman public was quite sure the duce's aggressive policy would be unimpaired. This opinion was strengthened by the sending of more troops to East Africa.

Secretary of State Hull entered the picture again with a rather mild statement expressing America's abhorrence of war and confidence in the Kellogg pact. The Italians didn't like this at all.

WHEN Chinese rivers overflow they do the thing in a big way. The Han, which joins the Yangtse near Hankow, broke through the dikes and rushed through the densely populated land, drowning about 10,000 men, women and children. The city of Hankow was imperiled and soldiers and civilians were working desperately to keep the levees from breaking.

CONDEMNATION of private land for the purpose of clearing out slums and replacing them with low cost housing units does not come within the eminent domain powers of the government, according to United States Court of Appeals of the Sixth District, at Cincinnati. The ruling, upholding the opinion of a lower court, at least cripples one of the ambitious PWA schemes fostered by Administrator Ickes. However, Mr. Ickes announced they were not going to stop the work because of restrictions but would have to modify the form somewhat. The court's opinion was given by Judges Moorman and Hicks. Judge Florence Allen dissented.

ONE of the hottest scraps of the year developed between Secretary of the Interior Ickes and Senator Tydings of Maryland over the inquiry into the administration of Gov. Paul M. Pearson in the Virgin Islands. The secretary accused the senator of "whitewashing" a witness before the Tydings committee; and the senator retorted by advising the secretary to "confine yourself to the duties for which you have been appointed." Both of them were thoroughly angry and Tydings in a letter accused Ickes of seeking "cheap publicity."

Sec'y Ickes

Federal Judge T. Webber Wilson of the Virgin Islands had given testimony that exasperated Ickes and the secretary demanded that the judge be removed from office for "official misconduct." Then Ickes wrote to Tydings a letter carrying his charge of "whitewashing" and saying of the judge's testimony: "There was no cross-examination to test his truthfulness, and if any statement ever needed such a test, it was his."

Judge Wilson had told the committee that there had been "administrative interference" with his court and that Morris Ernst, counsel for the Civil Liberties union, while a guest of Governor Pearson, had threatened to put him "on the spot" in the press unless he granted a rehearing to a government employee accused of theft.

Tydings accused Secretary Ickes of "gross deceit upon the American people" by stating in an Interior department press release that Paul C. Yates, administrative assistant of Pearson, had been discharged, when "you know and I know that Mr. Yates had resigned five days before your press release was issued."

ELEVEN states of the Far West are to be represented in the next and third "grass roots" conference of Republicans. It will be held in the Yellowstone national park August 23-24, according to Mike Reynolds, state director of the Young Republican League of Montana. He said George Olmstead, Des Moines chairman of the young Republican committee, and Col. Theodore Roosevelt were planning to attend, and that among those invited to speak were Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, Representative Hamilton Fish of New York and Gov. Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey.

MOST notable of recent deaths was that of Lieut. Col. Alfred Dreyfus of France, central figure of the famous "Dreyfus case" of some 35 years ago which kept France in a turmoil for four years. Dreyfus, a Jew, was then a captain and was tried and convicted of selling military secrets to Germany. He was a prisoner on Devil's island for four years and then was pardoned because it had been established that he was the innocent victim of plotters and traitors. Dreyfus served his country again in the World war.

PERHAPS it was the summer heat in Washington; perhaps there was a lot of pressure from the direction of the White House. Anyhow, the backbones of the house Democrats, recently so stiff against "dictation" by the administration, weakened most noticeably when the house took up the redrafting of the Tennessee Valley authority act. Nearly all the recent "rebels" among the Democrats fell into line and the bill was shorn of every major provision that was objectionable to the President.

This victory greatly heartened the administration forces, and they pressed forward to try for another in the conference on the utilities bill. Also in the senate they carried on a determined fight for the amendments broadening the powers of the AAA. Senators Borah and Byrd were the chief opponents of the New Dealers in this latter battle.

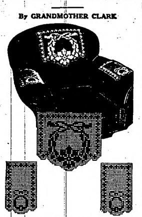
THOUGH the naval treaties of Washington and London have been abrogated by Japan, the American government still keeps its eye on the maximum permitted for our navy by 1942 and is making a determined effort to reach it, much to the delight of the "big navy" men and of citizens generally who believe in adequate preparedness.

Secretary of the Navy Claude Swanson has announced that a ship construction program has been decided upon which calls for the construction of 12 destroyers and six submarines. These are in addition to the 15 destroyers and six submarines for which bids have been advertised and will be opened next month.

The airplane building program calls for 555 new planes during the current fiscal year. Of these, 282 will be replacement planes for those now in service and 273 will be new craft. Two airplane carriers and six cruisers now under construction and scheduled for completion in 1937 are to house some of the new planes.

"WREATH DESIGN" FOR CHAIR BACK

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



Your grandmother crocheted chair backs, and now this generation is doing the same thing. Chair backs and arm rests are strictly modern. When you enter a room the chair with crocheted set attracts your attention first. It is distinctive and really looks good. The wreath shown above is made in the large filet stitch; shows up more lacy and the work is completed in less time. Other designs in chair backs have been shown in past editions, and judging from the response for directions how to make them we feel sure this design will bring equally large requests. The home needleworkers know what to make to improve home decorations.

Instructions and black and white diagram how to make this set will be mailed upon receipt of 10c. If you want the complete package No. 2505 containing sufficient cream Mountain Craft cotton, crochet hook, directions and diagram, send this department 40c and you will receive it by mail.

Figures Reveal Marked Decline in Birthrate

The United States is fast becoming a nation of oldsters, Dr. O. E. Baker of the bureau of agricultural economics reports.

With fewer births every year and immigration constantly lessened, "there are now about 10 per cent fewer young children in the country than there were five years ago and about 17 per cent more persons over sixty-five years of age," according to Doctor Baker.

Continuation of this trend will bring about a decreased population after the 10-year period ending in 1945, the doctor predicts.

"Decline in births has been from nearly 3,000,000 in 1921 to about 2,300,000 in 1934," Doctor Baker said, but added: "A temporary blossoming in 1933 of many marriages postponed because of the depression might have caused more than the average number of births in 1933."

However, he said, weddings in 1934 were back to pre-depression numbers and "births seem unlikely to increase after 1935."

The birth decline is greater in cities than in rural areas, the investigator found, because of the greater monetary outlay necessary to raise a child in the city.

The most backward group about having children is the "so-called middle and upper classes." Doctor Baker decides:

"Families of professional classes have 5 to 10 per cent fewer children than those of business men, business men about 25 per cent fewer than skilled workmen and skilled workmen 30 per cent fewer than unskilled laborers."

ADVERTISEMENTS

Are Your Guides to Value

● Experts can roughly estimate the value of a product by looking at it. More accurately, by handling and examining it. Its appearance, its texture, the "feel" and the balance of it, all mean something to their trained eyes and fingers.

● But no one person can be an expert on steel, brass, wood, leather, foodstuffs, fabrics, and all of the material that makes up a list of personal purchases. And even experts are fooled, sometimes, by concealed flaws and imperfections.

● There is a surer index of value than the senses of sight and touch . . . knowledge of the maker's name and for what it stands. Here is the most certain method, except that of actual use, for judging the value of any manufactured goods. Here is the only guarantee against careless workmanship, or use of shoddy materials.

● This is one important reason why it pays to read advertisements and to buy advertised goods. The advertised product is worthy of your confidence.

COMMENTS ON CURRENT TOPICS BY NATIONAL CHARACTERS

BANKING CONTROL

By LESLIE C. McDOUALL
New Jersey Banker.

A GRAVE problem today is whether the public or political parties shall control the banks of America. Do we want the credit of this country to be controlled and dispersed for whatever the administration of today or tomorrow considers desirable, through the political control contemplated in the banking act of 1935?

Silence and conciliation do not win restraint. The zeal for reform remains active. The idealists would dispense increasing charity with other people's money. The government still borrows tomorrow's savings for today's expenses. Continued long enough, this means inflation and further devaluation. We must fight for sound and constructive action in congress in hope of stabilizing our monetary system so that business may go forward. The great problem before the country is the unwillingness of governments, national, state and municipal, to live within their means. If necessary, leadership should be undertaken by the banks. Our present taxing and revenue system is surely leading to chaos and confiscation.

FILM PROPAGANDA

By JAMES W. GERARD
Chairman Finance Committee, Democratic Party.

THE motion picture is one of the most powerful instruments of propaganda in the world. At this moment when we face the perils of inflation, public opinion might be turned by pictures showing the Germany of 1923, when the mark was devalued and people with a million marks could not buy a sandwich.

They could show today that stabilization is the one thing needed to establish credit, and that the United States is anxious to stabilize currency, while it is England who refuses to stabilize it.

Then, when you hear talk of sharing wealth and destroying capitalism, bring your propaganda guns to bear. What is capitalism but the right to be thrifty and enjoy the savings of your thrift and your initiative?

Use the motion picture to show that the United States of America still is the land of boundless opportunity.

1936 AND 1937

By EDUARD BENES
Czechoslavakian Foreign Minister.

NINETEEN hundred and thirty-six and 1937 will be the critical years. If we pass safely through these next two years, peace in eastern Europe is guaranteed for a long period. . . .

New forces such as national socialism in Germany convinced me the Soviet union should be in the League, and I think Germany should have stayed in. The danger has been augmented recently by economic developments. . . .

It is my idea that the League of Nations is one of the greatest forces in maintaining equilibrium in Europe. I believe we must have collective security agreements either in the League of Nations or regionally with as many nations as possible participating.

SAFETY IN FLYING

By DONALD DOUGLAS
American Aircraft Maker.

STATISTICS show that the foremost cause of accidents is still the forced landing. The multi-engined airplane capable of flying with one or more engines not operating is the direct answer to the dangers of engine failure.

It is quite apparent that for an airplane incapable of flying with one engine dead the risk increases with the numbers of engines installed. Therefore it is not desirable that an airplane be multi-engined unless it can maintain altitude over any portion of the airline with at least one engine dead. Furthermore, the risk increases with the number of remaining engines needed to maintain the required altitude.

RESOURCES OF CANADA

By LORD TWEEDSMUIR
Governor-General Designate of Canada.

A COUNTRY may have immense and undeveloped resources, but they do not become wealth until and unless they are related to the demands and uses of the rest of the world. A fresh economic and social mechanism has to be created and new countries are in difficulty as compared with older ones—they have had less experience in this kind of creation and have to improvise in a brief time the machinery that old lands may have already constructed at leisure.

PIGS IS NOT PIGS

BY DR. JOHN ANDREW HOLMES
Clergyman, Writer, Lecturer.

IF YOU had the necessary capital, the government would pay you to not raise pigs, and if you had been on relief, you could be employed on public works, but if a young man graduates tomorrow with neither poverty nor riches, perhaps I can give him no better counsel than this: If you can find a girl with a steady job, kneel at her feet and tell her frankly and with real emotion that you cannot live without her.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Brainerd—The three-day pageant depicting the life of Paul Bunyan was held here with visitors attending from all pars of the nation.

Stephen—The Farmers State Bank here was robbed of approximately $376 by burglars who gained entrance to the building by breaking down a rear door.

Minneapolis — W. C. Robertson, postmaster, died suddenly at Columbus, Ohio, where he was attending the Elks convention. He was formerly managing editor of the Minneapolis Star.

Duluth—More than 15,000,000 seedings, mostly spruce and pines, will be planted in the Superior national forests by members of 25 CCC camps this fall and next spring, as a part of the U. S. forest service program.

St. Paul—State officials have taken preliminary steps to provide a $10,000,000 work program for Minnesota with jobs for 7,000 men to be financed by federal relief funds especially designated by President Roosevelt.

Pipestone—Hiccoughing 40 times a minute for four days and nigths without interruption, Thomas Chaney is now reported to be recovering. The hiccoghing has been stopped, and Chaney is gradually recovering strength.

Glencoe—A total of 1,108 pheasant eggs have been rescued from abandoned nests in McLeod county and sent to the state hatchery at Madelia this spring. There the eggs are hatched and the birds distributed to other sections of the state where pheasant are scarce.

Duluth—Sunday closing of 3.2 beer taverns in the city, to permit a more efficient operation of on-sale liquor establishments, as well as to provide for improved law enforcement, is to be recommended to Commissioner Len L. Culbertson, of the safety division, by a group of tavern operators.

St. Paul—Highway department officials are seeking federal funds for installation of flashing light rotating signals at grade crossings throughout the state under the federal grade crossing relief work program. The lights would cost from $3,000 to $5,000 for each crossing. Approximately 10 locations have been proposed. Such safety devices are necessary, department officials said, but no state funds are available.

Winnebago—Acres of land are ready for grain shocking in this vicinity, but farmers cannot find anyone who wants a job, J. W. Stevens, owner of a livestock and grain farm at Winnebago, and a member of the Minnesota Farm bureau's executive board, said. Canning companies have hired all the help in nearby towns, he said, and men from the cities won't work because relief is too easy. Farmers around Winnebago offer $2.50 a day and board for hands, but there are no takers, he said.

St. Paul—Loans to farmers from the emergency crop and feed loan fund of 1935 or summer fallowing and seeding will cease July 31. Help in meeting harvest and threshing expense will be given emergency borrowers by releasing portions of the proceeds from sale of the crop at a definite per bushel rate. J. C. Eaton, regional manager of the crop and feed loan office here, has fixed the following schedule: Wheat 12 cents; rye, 10; oats and barley, each 8; flax, 20. These are the maximum amounts that may be deducted from each bushel sold.

St. Paul—Cheered by the prospect that good crops will mean a new record attendance at this year's Minnesota State fair, the fair board created a new inducement for the opening-day August 31. The day will be designated as "Key-day". The "key" will be a 50-cent ticket, unlocking not only the admission gates, but many other events on the fair grounds. The 50-cent ticket will admit an automobile to the grounds or a person to the Indian village, admit a person to the afternoon automobile races and to two other attractions to be announced later. The plan was evolved by the State Fair Boosters committee.

Aitkin—A waterfowl sanctuary in Aitkin county, known as the Big Rice lake project, involving some 10,000 acres and a federal expenditure of some $150,000 may be dropped, it was intimated in Washington because of the activities if two Aitkin county individuals. The project was considered by federal migratory waterfowl officials as the best of its kind in the northwest and options for most of the property involved has already been taken. Government officials said the landowners were satisfied with agreed purchase prices but that two Aitkin county citizens interested in private duck shooting on Big Rice lake have sought to stalemate the whole project.

St. Peter—The official session of the sixteenth annual encampmnet of the Minnesota department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars was held with R. R. Barry, South St. Paul, department commander, presiding.

St. Paul—When the expansion program of the Civilian Conservation corps, now under way, is completed, Minnesota will be covered by 104 camps, of which 36 will be new. President Roosevelt approved $97,500,000 for continuation of this program. Enrollment of young men for the camps is now in progress.

SMALL NEED YET TO WORRY ABOUT ICE RECESSION

It appears that our refrigerating plant is breaking down. The matter of the receding polar ice cap has for a long time engaged the attention of scientists. Within recent times the recession of the cap has been of such proportions that evidence of it has been observed within the span of only a few decades.

For instance, the Russian Arctic expert, N. G. Datsky, in re-examining areas surveyed 40 years before, found that in Siberia, where his predecessor, Professor Shrenk, found eternal frost at the depth of two meters, there was now no frost at any depth, not even in the marshes. In other localities, where Professor Shrenk found only shrubless tundra, Mr. Datsky saw new growths of timber!

Only recently, Prof. R. T. Belknap of the University of Michigan came upon a pyramid of rocks and a note originally placed at the foot of the Cornell glacier by the late Professor Tarr. The note was dated 1896. In the time intervening, the glacier had moved back three-quarters of a mile from the marker.

R. F. Griggs of the University of Washington tells us that in the Alaskan tundra country the forest line is advancing at the rate of a mile a century. Trees are now growing on land which had been barren for 100,000 years.

If this keeps on, you say, Hudson bay will eventually become a subtropical body of water. Well, what of it? It has been several times before, and, if geological evidence is anything to draw conclusions from, it will be again.

According to W. J. Humphries of the United States weather bureau, if all the ice of the polar caps melted, the ocean levels would be raised 151 feet! And that's something else to try out on the slide rule.—Earl Chapin in Forum and Century.

Baby Burned Using Acid As Hair Tonic

Hastings--Treating himself to an application of hair tonic before breakfast without his parents's knowlege, Gerald Tallman, 2-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bural Tallman, Hastings, suffered painful burns about the face and body when the "tonic" turned out to be carbolic acid. The child awakened before his parents and scampered downstairs, climbing on a chair to get the bottle of acid from the table. Having tried other liquids as tonic and finding them satisfactory, he apparently thot this preparation should also suit the purpose. But the acid running down over his face and naked body, burned him severely. Gerald is still under considerable pain, but is recovering.

Picks Wrong Man For Automobile Spotlight

Little Falls--Manford Otterdahle of Dassel picked the wrong guy when he played his automobile spotlight on the road between Elmdale and Bowlus. Nearly blinded as the powerful light was held in his eyes, the victim wheeled around and chased the offender 4 miles. "You're having a lot of fun with that thing, aren't you he called out after he had over hauled the playful motorist. "Oh, there was a guy back there who wouldn't dim his lights, so I thought I would let him have it" was the rather timid reply. "Well I'm the guy, and my lights were dimmed all the time. I'm also the sheriff of Morrison county, and you're going to court." Judge Randell fined the offender $15 and costs.

THRONGS ATTEND PENNINGTON FAIR

The 34th annual Pennington county fair is now in full swing at Thief River Falls following its opening Tuesday, and will reach a climax Friday when a Ford coach will be awarded in the afternoon, followed in the evening by a public wedding in which two Pennington county young people will participate. Ernie Young's "Trip Around the World" revue will supply an impressive background for the spectacle.

Larger crowds than last year attended the fair the first two days, encouraged by the prevailing ideal weather, and they enjoyed the grandstand entertainment, Hennies Brothers shows on the midway, snappy horseraces, and a varied array of exhibits of Pennington county products.

Only in the dairy cattle exhibits was there a falling off in entries, the array of sheep, pigs poultry and agricultural exhibits being fully up to standard. More than 250 4-H club entries were on display. Four-H clubs represented by exhibit booths included the Bray-Polk Center, Silverton, Hazel, St. Hilaire, River Falls and Rocksbury clubs.

James King Dies at International Falls

James King, for many years a resident of this village, died Sunday in a hospital at International Falls from injuries sustained Friday in an auto accident near that city.

Mr. King, who operated a bread delivery route in and near International Falls, was returning home with his truck, accompanied by his twelve year old son, James, Jr. when the accident occured. Blinded by lights of an approaching car, he drove too close to the edge of a narrow grade and his truck went into the ditch, turning over and pinning both occupants underneath. Passing motorists helped extricate the two and took them to the hospital where Mr. King died Sunday afternoon. The boy escaped without serious injury.

Mr. King, who was 42 years of age, came to St. Hilaire from Wylie with his parents in 1903 and made his home here until he went to International Falls some years ago. His tragic death leaves his four children, ages from 4 to 13, orphans as the wife and mother died last year. His mother died here Feb. 25th, this year and his father preceded him in death some years ago.

Besides his four children, two sons and two daughters, Mr. King is survived by four sisters and three brothers. The sisters are Mrs. O. Nettland, Mrs. Sever Skotten and Agnes King of this place, and Mrs. Jane Regan of Monterey, Calif. The brothers are Robert of Boise, Idaho., Leo at Ironwood, Mich., and Joe of St. Hilaire.

All the relatives who reside here went to International Falls immediately upon learning of the accident, and remained there for the funeral which was held Tuesday morning. They returned here Tuesday night bringing the children with them.

Local Baseball Team Wins Two Contests

The St. Hilaire baseball team won two contests during the past week. Playing Tuesday the locals won from the gravel crew team by a score of 4 to 3, while Sunday St. Hilaire went to Garnes to win another victory 9 to 6.

Alfred Anderson and son, of Ashland, Wisc., was here this week for a visit with old friends. They visited also at the home of his brother, Edw. Anderson at Argyle. Mr. Anderson was raised in this community and lived here until he went to Ashland sixteen years ago. This was his first visit back during that period.

APPOINTED BOILER INSPECTOR

Paul Thyrén of River township in Red Lake county returned Wednesday from St. Paul where he went for instruction following his recent appointment as boiler inspector, in the 65th District which consists of Pennington, Red Lake and Clearwater counties. Mr. Thyren has had much experience with operation of steam boilers and engines and will, no doubt, make a very capable inspector. He succeeds Fred Richards of Red Lake Falls whose term expired July 1st.

FARM BUREAU HAS BIG PICNIC SUNDAY

Favored by ideal weather conditions, a gathering estimated to number 1,000 persons attended the annual picnic of the Pennington county farm bureau Sunday at the Smiley Community club hall. Speakers included Fred Luhe, A. G. Mereness, director of organization of the Minnesota farm bureau federation, E. L. Ferguson, farm bureau organizer, and W. E. Dahlquist of Thief River Falls. A series of three kittenball games was played, and a program of sports events was run off under the supervision of S. E. Hunt and James McCrum.

Shower Given for Mrs. Wendell Corbet Friday

A number of friends of Mrs. Wendel Corbet gathered at the Harry Allen home, Friday afternoon to honor her with a shower. The afternoon was spent in a social way and at 4 o'clock luncheon was served. The guest list included the following: Mrs. Wendel Corbet, Mrs. Harry Allen, Mrs. Adolph Satterberg, Mrs. Lee Beebe, Mrs. N. E. Beebe, Mrs. H. A. Olsen, Mrs. William Olson, Mrs. Milton Schantzen, Mrs. Raymond Young, Mrs. Henry Ness, Mrs. Edward Peterson, Mrs. Paul Ortloff, Mrs. Martin Gulseth, Mrs. Ira Carpenter, Mrs. Martin Bjerk, Mrs. T. Walseth, Mrs. John Lundberg, Mrs. Jens Almquist, Mrs. Wylie Ewing, Mrs. Amelia Dahl, Mrs. Mike Highland, Mrs. Ordean Olson, Mrs. Bakko and Mrs. Robert Collins.

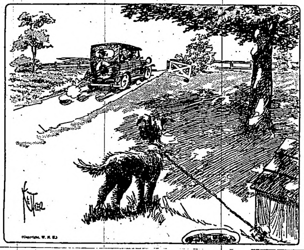
HEAVY RAIN FRIDAY

One of the heaviest rainfalls of this season occured here last Friday evening. Street drains were entirely inadequate to handle the volume of water which literally came down in sheets. For more than an hour following the downpour, water to depth of over a foot filled the gutters and flowed over walks. During the same hours, very little rain fell at Red Lake Falls and a few miles south of there only a few drops fell.

Miss Estelle Hanson of Thief River Falls called on friends here Saturday.

Dog Days



Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Visitors in the village Wednesday afternoon were Mr. and Mrs. Al Hesby of Fargo, N. D. and Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Peck of Hartford, Wash., and their daughter, Mrs. Hazel Peck McCuluom of Everett, Wash. Mrs. Hesby and Mrs. Peck will be recalled by local people as Marie and Mabel Hooper, daughters of the late Mr. and Mrs. Geo. W. Hooper who built and operated for many years the local telephone exchange.

St. Hilaire has been almost deserted this week because of heavy attendance of local people at the county fair.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan McAllister and daughter, Muriel, of Grand Forks stopped here for a short time Wednesday evening while enroute home after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hanson at Thief River Falls.

Nickie Drees, who is employed in an auto shop at Chicago, motored here this week for a visit with his family.

Dr. and Mrs. Haney and son, Thomas, of Thief River, Mr. and Mrs. John Allen and two daughters of Radium, Mr. and Mrs. W. Claney of Stephen, Mrs. W. Janda, Helga and Amanda Kalland of this village motored Saturday to Battle Lake and attended a picnic for turkey raisers. They returned Sunday.

Misses Helga and Amanda Kalland leave this week for a visit with friends at Baudette.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Just have as their guests this week Mr. and Mrs. Charles Evensizer and children, Charles and Shirley Ann and Gladys and Eva May Evensizer all of Cando, N. D., and Mrs. Grace Bobst of Du-Boise, Neb. The latter is a niece and Chas. Evensizer is a nephew of Mrs. Just. They plan to return home Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Roy of Huron, S. D., came Saturday and spent until Tuesday at the home of his mother, Mrs. J. S. Roy. Mr. Roy is superintendent of the city schools at Huron.

The Plummer ball team will meet the local team here next Sunday afternoon.

Because of dismantling and setting up again of the Spectator plant, which all takes much time, we have found it necessary to have our press work done in a neighboring shop until such time as the plant is again ready to operate. All advertising and news copy should therefor, be in this office at earliest possible time each week. Last minute copy cannot be handled under present arrangements.

A. Bilden has purchased the interest of R. A. Young in the service station operated in the former Odd Fellow block the past few years by Young & Olsen. Some improvements, such as painting, are now being made which will add to appearance of the property.

Harry Winter received a new honey extracting outfit Wednesday and is now busy setting it up. When in operating condition, the new outfit will eliminate a vast amount of work in handling supers, and necessity of keeping a big super supply on hand.

Due to inclement weather, and fact that most people were busy with harvesting and other work, only a small crowd attended the auction sale held Monday at the Wilson place. Most articles offered brot only a nominal price.

Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Roy and family left Tuesday for their home at Ironwood, Mich., after spending a week here at home of his mother, Mrs. J. S. Roy. Mr. Roy, who is a mining engineer, has been employed for many years at Ironwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Biskey and son, George, accompanied by Conrad Hovie of Thief River, motored Monday to Minneapolis to spend a few days attending to business matters.

The Luther League of the Norwegian Lutheran church will gather and give a program August 9 at the A. V. Jacobson farm home. The Luther League of the St. Hilaire Swedish Lutheran church will furnish the program.

The Spectator office was moved Saturday to its new location on lot north of the Jackson store. Concrete foundations for building and machinery will be put in later.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS

Bargain Sale of Back Taxes Opens August 12

Delinquent taxes will go on sale on a discount basis Monday, August 12, in accordance with the provisions of a law enacted in the last session of the legislature, County Auditor A. M. Senstad announced this week. The schedule of discounts, which is available at the auditor's office, ranges from 20 to 80 per cent, the latter rate being effective on certain taxes delinquent as far back as 1921 or prior years.

EXPLAIN WORKS PROGRESS PLANS

County Commissioner Paul Roy and other members of the county board attended a meeting of officials of four northwest counties in Thief River Falls Wednesday evening, at which Donald Whitmore, director of the Thief River Falls district of the federal Works Progress administration, and other officials invited the various county, city and village officials to submit proposals for projects to be carried out under the new setup. The aim of the WPA, Mr. Whitmore said, is to take all employable persons off the relief rolls within the next few months, so that the present ERA relief offices can be closed up.

NEW OIL COMPANY WILL ERECT TANKS ON G. N.

Permission for the erection of the wholesale oil tanks of the Farmers Union Oil Co., on the G. N. tracks was granted by the railroad company this week according to an announcement made this (Thursday) morning by incorporators of the new concern. The tanks will be erected on the siding just east of the Great Northern station. It is expected that the tanks will be here within the next two weeks. A stockholders meeting of the new company was held at the court house in this city Monday evening.

HARVESTING STARTS

Harvesting of early grains such as rye and certain varieties of oats has commenced thruout this community, and harvesting of other grain will become general in another week. Many fields of wheat are so damaged by rust that they will yield but little more than most of harvesting. Oats, barley, flax and corn appear to be doing well and will produce a normal crop.

RELIEF OFFICE CLOSED AUGUST 1

Following a conference with the Thief River Falls city council Friday evening, at which that body registered opposition to continuance of the SERA relief office in Pennington county, the county board, meeting later in the evening, voted not to appropriate $11,400 for this year and the same amount for next year for the continuance of the office.

As a result of the action relief clients in the county, effective August 1, must look to their township, village and city administrations for assistance, as was the case previous to the establishment of the SERA office in Thief River Falls.

Area SERA Supervisor Roach who was present at the conference Friday evening, expressed the opinion that it would be to the advantage of the county to make the requested appropriation of $11,400, pointing out that the county office had paid out a total of $29,008 for direct and work relief during the period from January 1 to June 1.

PLAN CLASS REUNION

When the graduating class of 1925 of the St. Hilaire high school parted that year they pledged themselves to gather for a re-union ten years later. Altho some will not be able to attend out of the ten girls and two boys who composed the class, all who can do so will meet here next Sunday.

25 Years Ago

Hon. John Lind was nominated at the state convention held at Minneapolis to lead Minnesota democrats in the coming state campaign.

The road betwen here and Red Lake Falls was in very poor condition, and steps were being taken to remedy the situation.

Practically all wooden walks in the village were taken up in preparation for replacing them with concrete walks.

Mike Anderson received his new grocery stock and was busy getting it on display.

Drought conditions prevailed that year. The river was at lowest stage it had been since this territory was settled.

Because of heavy attendance at the county fair at Thief River Falls by local people the village was almost deserted that week.

Parochial school at the Norwegian Lutheran church closed after a six weeks course.

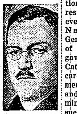
CURRENT EVENTS PASS IN REVIEW

NAZIS OF GERMANY RENEWING FIGHT ON THE CATHOLICS AND THE JEWS.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

©, Western Newspaper Union.



Franz Guertner

DETERMINATION of the Nazis to put an end to "political Catholicism" in Germany and their consequent drive against Catholic youth organizations may bring on results more serious even than has the Nazi anti-semitism. General Goering, head of the secret police, gave out a warning to Catholic priests to be careful in their comments from the pulpit, and Franz Guertner, minister of justice, issued a decree threatening prosecution for any priest violating Goering's injunction. Throughout the country generally the Catholic clergy was cautious, but in Freiburg, Baden, where the Goering order had not been published before Sunday, the priests read in their pulpits a letter from the episcopate calling the Nazi action a violation of the concordat with the Vatican. To this charge the Nazis reply that the Catholics were the first to violate the concordat by making attacks on the Hitler youth movement in their parish papers.

This new "purge" by the Nazis includes a renewed crusade against the Jews and dissolution of the Steel Helmets, veterans' organization, in various provinces. The Jews are helpless and, if Julius Streicher has his way, will be all driven out of Berlin or segregated in ghettos. But the Steel Helmets, whose chief is Minister of Labor Franz Seldte, are likely to cause the Hitler government a lot of trouble. The organization's weekly paper is using language that is not often heard in Germany these days, and Seldte is demanding the reason for suppression of the local divisions.

ANTI-CATHOLIC riots in Northern Ireland brought on fierce anti-Protestant reprisals in the Irish Free State, and it looked as if the entire island might be involved in a religious war. In Belfast a number of persons were killed by snipers, and many were injured by bombings, stone-throwings and incendiarism. At Clones the mobs destroyed a Masonic temple and set fire to a Protestant gospel hall and a recreation hall maintained by nonreligious bodies. In Limerick young men ran amuck, smashing windows of buildings owned by Protestants. The Free State troops were called out but didn't seem able or willing to stop the rioting in the cities. The trouble began with the Orangemen's celebration of the Battle of the Boyne.

FARMERS in the Middle West, ready to harvest their crops, found they couldn't get hands to do the work. The idle men ordinarily counted on for this were on the relief rolls and declined offers of farm labor for two reasons: The wages paid by the farmers were less than the sums received from the relief organization or for government works, and if the men once went off the dole they feared they would have trouble getting back there when the harvest was over. The situation was desperate and emergency relief commissions were urged to take action. This they did in the states affected and it was announced the "revolt" was under control.

The Illinois commission stopped all relief works in the rural areas until after harvest. In Kansas persons refusing any temporary employment were removed from the relief rolls. In Nebraska 26 counties were cut off from federal relief allotments and in 15 others the allotments were cut in half.

In nearly a score of Iowa counties officials denied relief and able-bodied men on relief rolls were admonished to accept employment in the harvest fields.

Relief workers in Redwood county, Minnesota, shut down works projects and officials in many other counties indicated they would follow the example.

In North Dakota all but specialized projects were halted and the state administrator announced that as soon as the harvest was over the new works progress administration would take care of unemployables.

THAT wholly un-American procedure, the general strike, was tried out by organized labor in Indiana and the 67,000 inhabitants of Terre Haute were deprived of all food supplies. The local authorities of Vigo county called on the governor for help and Mr. McNutt promptly ordered 14 companies of the National Guard to the scene. Brig. Gen. Wray De Prez, in command, promised the merchants who had been bullied into shutting their shops would be given protection, and said his first endeavor would be to restore the milk and ice service. This had been cut off even from hospitals and homes with sick children.

The general strike was called by 48 unions without warning, because labor leaders had been unable to reach an agreement with the Columbian Enameling and Stamping company. Some 600 of that concern's employees went on strike in March and the plant was closed down, but the union leaders thought it was about to be reopened by strikebreakers.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT spent the week-end cruising about on the government yacht Sequoia and had as his special guest Attorney General Cummings. It was assumed with reason that one of their chief topics of discussion was the administration's recent defeats in the federal courts and the chances of getting by with the New Deal legislation lately passed or now pending. The minority in congress and such anti-administration organizations as the Liberty league were aroused to new activities and attacks on the President's policies. It was said that the proposal was made to Mr. Roosevelt that the "death sentence" in the holding companies bill be dropped for the present and carried to the country in the 1936 campaign, but that the President vetoed the idea, insisting that the measure not be permitted to die in conference. So the conferees began the task of trying to reach an agreement. Those for the senate were four to one in favor of the death sentence; those for the house, three to two against it. The facts being brought out by the two inquiries into the activities of lobbyists, of course, were expected to have some influence on the result.

Philip H. Gadsden, chairman of the committee of public utility executives, gave out an appeal for fair play. He said:

"Millions of men and women who have invested their savings in utility securities are asking the question: Are these savings to be destroyed because a few minor utility officials have resorted to scandalous and even dishonest methods in opposing the public utilities bill? Is the small utility investor to be penalized and the industry to be crippled because of isolated incidents of this kind?"

REPORTING for the eleven months that ended June 1, 1935, the AAA showed that its expenditures totaled $767,195,306. The report added that for the eleven months funds available were $918,045,145, leaving a balance on hand June 1 of $150,849,829.

Expenditures were divided as follows: Rental and benefit payments to farmers, $535,547,698; removal and conservation of surplus agricultural commodities, $10,043,550; drouth relief, food conservation and disease eradication, $145,595,764; trust fund operations $11,746,526; administrative expenses, $34,401,654, disbursement expenses, $737,005, and tax refunds, $29,123,107.

Chester Davis

TWO to one against the New Deal was the week's score in Federal court decisions. The administration suffered severely. The Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati first held unconstitutional the condemnation of land by the PWA for slum clearance. Then the Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston dealt the AAA a terrific blow by declaring unconstitutional the processing and flour taxes. The one favorable decision was by the Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans and was that the sale of cheap electric power by the Tennessee Valley authority was constitutional.

Harold Ickes, who is PWA administrator, said the slum clearance work would be carried on, though necessarily in modified form. But Chester Davis, AAA administrator, openly admitted that "the end of the processing taxes would mean the end of the Agricultural Adjustment administration in all its important aspects." He would not confess that he believed for a minute the Supreme court would confirm the ruling of the court at Boston. He asserted he had expected that decision to be adverse, saying: "That section around Boston is a hotbed of resistance to the processing taxes. Why, it's right up there among all those cotton manufacturers." This was most extraordinary comment from a high government official, but the Appeals court in Boston has not yet cited Davis for contempt.

Most well informed and unbiased persons have never believed the processing taxes would stand up under court test. The Guffey coal bill has some similar features so that those who debate it should read these paragraphs in the Boston decision:

"The power of congress to regulate interstate commerce does not authorize it to do so by taxing products either of agriculture or industry before they enter interstate commerce, or otherwise to control their production merely because their production may indirectly affect interstate commerce.

"The issue is not, as the government contended, whether congress can appropriate funds for any purpose deemed by congress in furtherance of the 'general welfare,' but whether congress has any power to control or regulate matters left to the state and lay a special tax for that purpose."

GEORGE, ex-king of Greece, was planning a sudden hop to Athens to resume the throne. Emissaries from Greece were received in the exclusive London hotel where the former monarch resides; a big airplane was kept standing in readiness at Croydon, and at another airport a second plane was prepared to carry George's servants. But the news hounds found it out and gave it to the public, whereat George was exceedingly wroth and his contemplated coup was postponed. His secretary asked newspapers and news agencies to refrain from publishing anything about his movements and reporters were not allowed to enter the hotel.

DROPPING all their rebellious indignation, the Democrats of the house did everything the administration wished in considering the social security bill as altered by the senate. The conferees had settled all differences after two weeks of hard work, but one of the amendments they accepted was that permitting private pension systems to function under the measure. The majority members of the house were informed that President Roosevelt was opposed to this, so they refused to accept it. The senate would not permit the elimination of the amendment, so back to conference went the bill.

Senator Schall

THOMAS D. SCHALL, the blind senator from Minnesota, has been one of the sharpest tongued critics of the administration in the senate. Recently he described President Roosevelt as a "megalomaniac," and, though the word was subsequently eliminated from the Record, the Democratic senators were decidedly miffed. So a little later Senators Robinson, Black and Bone found opportunity to tell Schall what they think of him and to demand that he conform to the rules of "decency."

The argument started when Schall had read by a clerk an editorial from a Texas editor, and an address of his own—all critical of the administration.

Robinson protested. He asserted "when one whose moral obliquities are so great as are those of the senator from Minnesota, it becomes necessary for some one to object." He added Schall "cannot shield himself behind an unfortunate affliction."

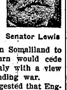
The Schall speech said President Roosevelt was imitating Mussolini, and that Ben Cohen, an administration aid and bill drafter, had "assumed the legislative functions usurped by the Executive.

Robinson called Schall the "misrepresentative from Minnesota" and expressed the opinion the senator had "employed" some one to write his speeches.

"It is small business and only could be done by a man of small mentality," said the Arkansas senator.

Replying, Schall said, "If the people knew what was behind this government they would not stand for it a minute."

SENDING floods of telegrams to senators or representatives for or against pending legislation will not be so effective in the future, as a result of the disclosures before the senate lobby investigators. They heard evidence to the effect that large numbers of telegrams against the utilities bill were sent from Warren, Pa., by an employee of the Associated Gas and Electric system, that the messages were signed with names taken from a city directory and that the originals were destroyed at Warren.



Senator Lewis

SENATOR J. HAMILTON LEWIS of Illinois, a member of the foreign relations committee, long has urged that Great Britain be persuaded to cede to the United States her island possessions in the Caribbean sea in payment of her war debt. The other day he was moved to bring the subject up again and delivered an interesting speech in the senate. This time he based his proposal upon the "peace offer" of England to cede a portion of her territory in Somaliland to Ethiopia, which in turn would cede certain territory to Italy with a view of averting the impending war.

The senator also suggested that England surrender all rights she claims to privileges of constructing a Nicaraguan canal, recalling, as a precedent, that England compelled France to yield all claims to territory adjacent to the Suez canal.

The British islands in the West Indies, the senator said, are both useful as defense and necessary as protection for the United States. They "could be seized in time of war between nations fighting among themselves to possess the Caribbean and Southern seas. They could be used as the backyard of the United States from which supplies could be stored to be used in assault on America."

EMPEROR HAILE SELASSIE appeared before the Ethiopian parliament and made an impassioned appeal to his countrymen to fight Italy to the death, declaring he had prepared himself to die in the contest if need be.

"Ethiopia knows how to fight to preserve its independence and its sovereignty," he said.

"Soldiers! Follow the example of your warrior ancestors. Soldiers! Traders! Peasants! Young and old, men and women: Unite to face the invader! Your sovereign will be among you and will not hesitate to give his blood for the independence of his country."

Though the League of Nations council was scheduled to meet for consideration of the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel between July 25 and August 2, there were indications that the European nations were about ready to abandon Ethiopia to its fate and that if "The Lion of Judah" doesn't give in completely, Mussolini will be permitted to have his way with him. That probably will mean a long guerrilla warfare the details of which will not be pleasant reading.

A Laugh Not Enough

Washington.—President Roosevelt knows and those close to him realize that sometimes something more than a laugh is required to kill off a rumor. That is one of the reasons why the President is planning if and when congress adjourns to make an extended tour of this country. He knows of rumors going about the land that his health is not up to par and he is taking this method of disclosing to the American people by action rather than word the answer that he is physically fit.

Whoever occupies the White House is continually subjected to whispered rumors as well as open assertions of one kind or another. Some, as in this instance, reflect on the health of the chief executive. Others, as happened within the last quarter of a century, reflected on the personal habits and practices of the President. Still others have related in times past to personal fortunes and financial dealings of the man in the White House. Usually these "whispering campaigns" are of a derogatory character. No one ever knows exactly how they start nor is it ever possible for observers to put a finger on the rumors as they float by. It is a condition that seems to be bred by prominence of the individual about whom the rumor mongers can operate because people are always interested in what a President of the United States is doing.

In the current instance the "whispering campaign" was largely unknown to Washington until summer resort residents began returning to the city. They brought back all sorts of stories that were being circulated in distant places concerning Mr. Roosevelt's health. The gossip, for that is what it appears to be, spread like wild-fire in Washington and became of so much concern that it crept into one of the White House press conferences.

"Mr. President," one of the 200 correspondents present asked, "are you in a little bad health?"

The chief executive's answer was the laugh which has endeared him to many people. He was just back from a short cruise aboard a yacht in Chesapeake bay. His face was sun-tanned. He leaned back in his chair and demanded to know what the correspondents thought about it. I think that the news dispatches from Washington that night indicated rather clearly what the correspondents thought about the state of the President's health, for surely none of these dispatches indicated any particular alarm.

Let People See for Themselves

Nevertheless, the rumors continued to go and a good many thousand people apparently believed that Mr. Roosevelt had broken under the strain of his New Deal presidency. So, before the summer is over millions of Americans probably will have an opportunity to see for themselves just as the correspondents saw at the press conference that the President still has his smile; that his hair is no more gray than when he took office in 1933, and that his countenance shows no earmarks of the strain which every President of the United States finds an inherent part of that job.

One trip upon which Mr. Roosevelt has set his heart is a tour to the Pacific coast and return. It will provide an opportunity for several millions of Americans to see him and a lesser number to hear him speak. It will carry him through territory which contains probably about half of the nation's population.

It is well recognized in Washington that no amount of denials by informed persons or any amount of second-hand testimony is sufficient to squelch malicious stories of the kind that have been circulated about the President. The eye witness is the only one who is prepared to discredit such stories and, unless present plans are revised, the eye witnesses will be many this summer. The President probably will make other trips during the late fall and early winter as well. Plans for these are still in the making and their length and number depends somewhat upon the date of congressional adjournment.

The program fits well into the Roosevelt methods. In the 28 months of his tenure the President has done a considerable amount of travel. He has made three cruises on the yacht owned by Vincent Astor, two of which lasted more than two weeks each. He traveled to the east coast of Canada in June, 1933, aboard the craft, Amberjack, and returned two weeks later aboard a navy ship. Last year, it will be remembered, he visited Haiti, Puerto Rico, the Virgin islands, Colombia, the Panama canal, Clipperton island, and Hawaii. On his return from that cruise he crossed the Northwest, making several speeches before reaching Washington.

In 1933 and in 1934 he visited Warm Springs, Georgia, the colony where victims of infantile paralysis are nursed back to health and with which the President, because of his own affliction, has had much personal connection. In returning from the 1934 visit to Warm Springs, Mr. Roosevelt stopped at Muscle Shoals, Norris dam, and Birmingham for personal visits to points and things which interested him. All of these trips have been in addition to periodical visits to his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., and, apparently, all that he needs to add to his mileage this summer is a period of comparative calmness in Washington.

To Reduce Deficit

If superficial appearances count for anything, the administration is actually making moves designed to reduce the federal treasury's deficit. It is yet too early to tell definitely what the plans are and administration spokesmen are strangely quiet about them but there are certain signs and portents which may be examined in the effort to determine which way the government is headed in respect of the gigantic expenditures for public works, relief, and general government costs.

While congressional committees continue to examine tax questions with a view to enactment of legislation that will increase federal revenue, the President and his advisers have taken steps to cut down the drain on the treasury.

The first and probably the most important of these moves is the announcement that on November 1 federal aid to those people unable to work will cease definitely. Relief Administrator Hopkins announced after a conference with the President that the relief policy will be changed on November 1 and that the various states, counties, and municipalities will be expected after that date to look after that segment of the population known as the unemployables. These are people who for one reason or another cannot earn their own living by work.

Previously Mr. Roosevelt had directed his fiscal advisers to make a thorough study of relief requirements for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1936. While this is almost 11 months away, the President told newspaper correspondents that he desired to know as early as possible what the burden of relief would be in the future. His announcement was interpreted as having a connection with budget requirements and prospective revenue under the proposed new tax legislation.

Earlier, Public Works Administrator Ickes had made known that the program of public works expenditures for improvement of the Mississippi valley and its rivers had been abandoned. It will be recalled that the National Resources board had recommended extensive improvements to be carried out from public works funds in the hands of the public works administrator. These involve vast sums. Now, it is made to appear that the PWA and the administration have in mind some restraint on expenditures of that character and that hereafter gigantic allotments of a public works or improvement character may be expected to be fewer in number.

The result of this will be, of course, to hold in the treasury some of the total of the $5,000,000,000 public works appropriation.

Reduction of the outgo for direct relief necessarily will be reflected in the remainder of the public works-relief fund and it is reported that other plans are in the making which will have as their prospective end a restoration to private employment of greater numbers of idle workers than heretofore have been contemplated.

Then, as another indication of administration intention to restore funds to the treasury and thus reduce the difference between income and expenses was an announcement by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation. Mr. Jones made known that hereafter the RFC will not make loans to banks. He declared that the banking structure was in an excellent condition and that further aid was not required.

The fact which Mr. Jones did not mention in his announcement is, however, that the banks are exhibiting no particular desire to borrow from the federal government. The RFC already holds preferred stock in almost half of the banks in the country and these banks, according to RFC records, are liquidating their obligations as rapidly as they can do so. This is significant.

Works-Relief Plans Drag

I have reported to you previously how slowly the administration plans for spending the $5,000,000,000 works relief fund were progressing. In connection with the Hopkins' announcement on relief and the President's relief survey order, it was disclosed that only approximately fifteen thousand persons have been given jobs since the money was made available. This figure does not include the additional list of recruits for the Civilian Conservation corps whose numbers have grown from 300,000 to 403,000. It will be recalled that provision was made in the $5,000,000,000 appropriation resolution for an increase of the CCC from 300,000 to 600,000. Thus, in two months, the CCC has had only about one-third of the total increase which was expected. Frankly, CCC enlistments have been so disappointing that the responsible authorities have changed the age limit in order to permit the maximum of entries into that service. Those in a position to know and who will speak candidly about conditions entertain some fear that the total ever will approach the 600,000 to which enlistments are restricted.

WITH AN EYE TO COOL SIMPLICITY

The smart girl has one eye on the budget and the other anticipating a rise in temperature—and makes a cool decision to include several summer sports in her wardrobe right now. It took a lot of ingenuity to design that clever yoke-cape-panel in one. It makes sewing so easy, and briefly, that cape is much cooler than a sleeve. Pattern 9354 sports an action pleat back and skirt just to help you "get places." If you find a simple flat neckline becoming, omit the dashing revers (but we like 'em). Very correct for spectator sports, office wear or week-end jaunts. Make it up in washable sport silk or shantung. Try a novel "cork" buckle and buttons.

Pattern 9354 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 4 yards 36 inch fabric.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send your order to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York.

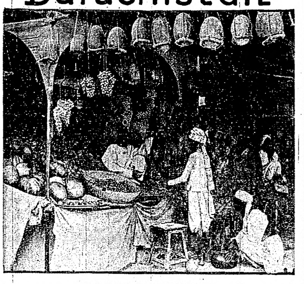
Baluchistan



Fruit Stall in Quetta, Baluchistan.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

THE Indian province of Baluchistan lost its most important city in the recent earthquake that destroyed Quetta.

Quetta, the capital of Baluchistan and the only municipality in the province, existed primarily for military purposes, but the Pax Britannica, substitute for the lawlessness and banditry of former days, had made an important civil community and trading center of it as well.

Baluchistan is India's fortress to the east, and Quetta was its donjon keep. The British have been in control of the place since 1877, and since 1883 have held it under perpetual lease from its old ruler, the picturesquely named Wali of Kalat.

When the British went in Quetta was only a little group of mud huts surrounded by unhealthy plains that were virtually swamps. Drainage and sanitation made the place over. The population increased to 60,000, and once swampy lowlands furnished a setting for villas and farm houses surrounded by orchards and planted groves.

The outstanding feature of Quetta was the cantonment where six or eight regiments of British and Indian troops were quartered. This extensive post was to the north on relatively high ground, while the civil town was to the south on a lower level. Mud, in the form of sun-dried brick was an important building material in the town, though not to the extent that it was two decades ago. Then mud-brick domes formed many of the roofs, and were considered safe because of Quetta's scant rainfall (about 10 inches annually). But there came an unusually wet spring, and most of the buildings melted away. Since then many iron roofs—less picturesque, but better insurance against weather vagaries—surmounted the mud walls of the town.

Western influence had permeated Quetta and the standard of living had risen accordingly. Tea, a little while ago a marked luxury, was becoming a common beverage. Leather footwear had displaced sandals to a noticeable degree.

Hot Days, Cold Nights.

Quetta is in the same latitude as Cairo, Jacksonville, Fla., and Shanghai, but because of its 6,000 feet of altitude and the physical aspect of the surrounding country, its climate is very different. Each day the mercury bobs up and down through a wide range. The difference between daily maximum and minimum has been known to reach 80 degrees; but such excessive changes are confined to certain short seasons. The hills and even the valleys of Baluchistan are largely treeless, and when the sun is down heat radiates away rapidly. As a consequence the nights are always cool, even when the sun blisters one by day.

The area devastated by the earthquake extends south of Quetta into the state of Kalat, a vast mountain-streaked region of Baluchistan, where modern progress has hardly penetrated.

There are no road maps in Kalat, for good roads are scarce. In recent years towns of the coastal region and of the extreme north have been linked with telegraph lines. The railroad from Karachi to eastern Persia runs across the state's northern extremity, but even in the shadows of the telegraph poles and along the railroad right-of-way the natives cling to their camels and horses. A network of animal paths forms the major communication system. Few people of the interior have seen an automobile, and to many coins are curiosities, for their wants are satisfied by barter.

Kalat is sparsely settled. The state is nearly as large as Nebraska but it has only twice as many inhabitants as the city of Omaha. Small villages are sprinkled on the plains and in the valleys and there are perhaps a dozen fair-sized towns, but no large cities in the American sense. Kalat, the capital, was a cluster of mud houses and matting huts climbing a hill topped with the mud-walled, fortresslike citadel of the Khan. Much of it was destroyed by the earthquake.

The inhabitants of Kalat are divided into tribes, each with a chief. Many tribes graze sheep and herd goats, following their animals wherever there is fresh pasturage. Some of them live the year round in matting or cloth-covered huts; others refuse to be burdened with cargo when on the move and build new brushwood huts at each stop.

Kalat farmers occupy the valleys. While some fruits, cotton and dates are exported, the farmers are scarcely able to produce enough food for domestic consumption. Normal rainfall is scanty and the soil is poor. In the northern part of the state, which is one of the hottest areas in India, the sun is relentless in its destruction of crops. Famine visited the state in 1830 and lasted for ten years.

Farming and Fishing.

Here and there farmers have built crude irrigation works that are fed by springs and small streams, but more often the native cultivators depend upon floods to water and fertilize their soil.

Along the coast hundreds of small, clumsy fishing boats operate in the Arabian sea fisheries. The fish are salted and form one of the leading articles of Kalat commerce.

There are no organized industries in the state. Every native woman is an expert with the needle and she makes all the family clothing. Wool and goat hair from domestic animals are her working materials and what she does not use finds its way to Pasni, the leading Kalat port, destined to foreign markets. A peep through the door of a native hut may also reveal a pottery factory, but only a small quantity of the homemade product is sold beyond the Kalat borders.

Just across the Baluchistan border, in the province of Sind, is the seaport of Karachi which has been crowded with refugees from the earthquake districts. Like Marseilles, near the mouth of the Rhone, and Alexandria, near the mouth of the Nile, Karachi is of a great river, but not on it. It is just off the delta of the Indus; but its importance is largely a gift from that stream, whose shifting alluvium has swallowed up its rivals.

Tatta, an old capital of Sind, as Karachi is today, was on a deep-water branch of the Indus a short distance above its mouth. It flourished until the river left it high and dry. Shahbandar, a more famous Sind port on another Indus branch, could, like New Orleans, be reached by deep-draught men-of-war. But about 1725 Shahbandar also became silted up and is now only an inland village. Common sense dictated the choice of a port outside the shifting delta, and Karachi, in a sheltered bay a short distance to the west, began to grow in importance.

Karachi Once a Slaving Center.

Karachi's chief "product" of import and export had been Abyssinian slaves brought by Arab boatmen from Masqat. Since British control came to northwestern India, Karachi's hinterland has been greatly developed through improved irrigation methods, and a swelling stream of agricultural and other products has flowed to the port. After a railway was built to tap the Punjab's wheat fields, Karachi became India's greatest grain port. In population the town has jumped from less than 20,000 before the British came, to about 263,000 today.

Though Karachi has a huge and rich land to draw from, its immediate surroundings are rather discouraging. Rocky peninsulas jut out to shelter its harbor. A dun-colored, dry plain surrounds the town. A few miles to the northwest lie the seamed, baked-clay hills of Baluchistan, "as strange a country as any in Asia."

Off along the coast and into Baluchistan strikes the amphibian telegraph line that gives Karachi its most direct connection with the West. A land line until it gets well into Baluchistan, it then dives into the sea to come up again on the Persian coast and strike overland through Persia and Turkey to Europe.

Gateway for Central Asia.

Karachi is not only a door for India, it is the gateway besides for much of central Asia. Numerous products that are freighted into Karachi harbor find their way up through the famous Khyber Pass and over Himalayan trails to Afghanistan, Turkistan and Tibet.

Many millions of dollars have been spent on the harbor of Karachi in the construction of moles, jetties and other port works. Keeping its waters deep enough is a never ending fight. A strong ocean current sweeps to the entrance part of the tremendous load of silt brought down by the Indus, and this must be continually dredged away that Karachi may not suffer a fate like that which overtook Tatta and Shahbandar.

Austin—A shipment of 401 well finished heavy butcher hogs brought $13,456.22 to J. T. Waite of Fenton, Iowa, at the George A. Hormel & Company.

Camp Ripley—Allotment of $96,176 for improvements at Camp Ripley, training grounds for the Minnesota National guard, has been approved by President Roosevelt.

Hibbing—Voters here defeated a bond issue to raise $128,000 for paving at an election. A direct grant of $106,000 from the federal government had been promised.

Luverne—The city council sliced Luverne's tax levy for 1935 to little more than one-half of the figure for the last two years, levying $10,200 as compared with $20,200 for 1933 and 1934.

Pine City—Henry Stephan, 96, a Civil war veteran who had the unusual experience of serving in both the Union and Confederate armies, died at his home at Beroun, near here, following a long illness.

Battle Lake—More than 5,000 men, women and children of Otter Tail county assembled on the shore of West Battle lake, near here, for the thirty-eighth annual Old Settlers picnic and reunion of Otter Tail.

Wadena—A bottle, buried as part of the Arbor day ceremony here in 1896, was unearthed by workmen repairing Wadena streets. In the bottle was a yellow, faded paper on which the writing was scarcely decipherable.

Willmar—Building permits totaling $60,000 have been issued here since January 1, Peter Hoglund, local building inspector, has announced. This total includes only new construction and does not include repairs or improvements.

St. Paul—In the most sensational tournament of golf ever played on a Minnesota course, "Lighthorse Harry" Cooper won the St. Paul open. His 72-hole card totaled 271, 17 under par. Horton Smith was second, four strokes behind.

Cass Lake—The seed extractory at the federal forest nurseries here has just completed the longest and largest run in the history of the plant, E D. Clifford, superintendent of the nurseries, said. During this time $7,500 pounds of seed was extracted from 17,492 bushels of cones.

Slayton—Slayton's bonded indebtedness will be refinanced under the law pased by the last legislative session. The state investment board will loan the village $60,000 at 3½ per cent. Companies holding the $1,200,000 in village bonds will reissue a series for the balance of $60,000.

Mendota—The "Mount Vernon" of Minnesota is 100 years old. Just a century it was since Henry H. Sibley, the prince of pioneers, completed the stately old Sibley House that was to stand as a monument to the life and achievements of the young fur trader who became Minnesota's first governor.

St. Paul—Minnesota farmers paid $363,799 on their land bank loans in June, bringing to more than $1,788,000 their total payments for the first half of 1935. It was the largest month's payments received this year and practically double the volume paid in June last year, the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul announced.

Buhl—At a meeting of the business men and residents of Buhl, a resolution was adopted selecting a site for the state hospital for the insane that has been ordered placed in some location in the northwestern part of the state. The Dupont site, which Hibbing and Chisholm have been working on, is situated five miles from Buhl, Chisholm and Hibbing.

Minneapolis—Basing their predictions on word from Washington, officers of the Minnesota Game Protective league, the Midwest Conservation alliance and the Minnesota Izaak Walton league voiced the belief that a 30-day national duck hunting season would be declared for this fall, despite efforts of Minnesota and other midwest groups on behalf of a closed season.

Owatonna—John Christgau of Owatonna, president of the state Elks, presided at the institution of an Elks lodge at International Falls.

Willmar—A set of resolutions condemning proposed flood control for the middle fork of Crow River was adopted here at a public meeting attended by E. V. Willard, state commissioner of conservation; L. P. Zimmerman, acting administrator of the SERA and Sven A. Norling, consulting hydraulic engineer for the SERA who explained the purpose of the flood control which would form a chain of lakes near here.

Natural That Children Should "Want to Know"

By MRS. NESTOR NOWELL,
National Kindergarten Association,
New York City.

The normal child is always asking questions unless he has been snubbed, time after time, for asking them. He comes into a wonderful world. Everything about him is new. Naturally be wants to know what is happening and why. He wants to "see the wheels go round."

"Bobby is always asking questions," says a tired mother. Perhaps if she were to take time to answer a few he would not bother her so much. As a rule, a child will ask a question until he gets an answer. Why should we not make up our minds to this from the start?

I should be alarmed if a child ceased to have an interest in all things around him. A normal, healthy child is bristling with questions. It is by asking them that he grows in understanding. No parent should discourage the question habit.

Of course you should let your child think out certain things for himself, but you must answer some of the questions which lead him toward the solution of his problem.

I cannot remember the time when I did not answer my little girl's questions. A girl can ask as many as a boy. Some of them were real puzzlers. I had to look up the answers in books. I did not pretend to be a goddess, knowing everything. I often said, "I think we shall find the answer to this question in one of our big books," meaning the dictionary or some volume of the encyclopedia.

Mothers must answer questions. It does not hurt any of us to search for the answers, and so continue our education. I consider we can still learn much. We can learn as long as we live.

Children may ask questions at inopportune moments. Generally they do! Then the mother, irritated, often says, "Don't bother me." I used to make it a point, when I could not answer at once, to say, "I will tell you at—" naming the time. I always kept my word. The intelligent child will remind the mother of her promise. She will say, as did my little girl, "Mother, is this the time to answer those questions I asked this morning?" One of us was pretty sure to remember it.

I generally wrote down my daughter's question, if I knew I should need a book to answer it. You will find that a child whose questions are answered thoughtfully at some definite time which the mother may choose will not overwhelm her with too many at once, because she will concentrate on the two or three, the answers to which have been promised.

I do not think it fair for a mother to ignore or to refuse to answer her child's questions. The father is generally away much of the time. The mother is nearly always near the young child, therefore it is she who must reply to questions, to the best of her ability. There are so many wonderful books for mothers nowadays that there is little excuse for not doing so. When one does not answer, perhaps it is sheer laziness. At any rate, a likely result will be that later on, when serious matters come to the child's mind, other persons instead of mother will be questioned, and how surprised and distressed that mother will be when she learns about it.

PENNINGTON COUNTY BOARD PROCEEDINGS

MINUTES OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE COUNTY BOARD, PENNINGTON COUNTY, SPECIAL MEETING JUNE 27TH, 1935

The County Board of Pennington County met in Special Meeting at the office of the County Auditor at the Court House in the City of Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota on June 27th, 1935 at 8 o'clock P. M. for the purpose of filling the vacancy caused by the resignation of H. L. Fowler as County Auditor. The special meeting was held pursuant to call and notice issued by Paul Roy, chairman of the County Board. The following commissioners were present: Roy, Mandt, Bredeson, Lee, Mulry. Absent, none. County Auditor, Fowler, absent. The written resignation of H. L. Fowler as County Auditor was then read to the board. The board then discussed the resignation for some time. After some discussion the board recessed until Friday morning, June 28, at 9 o'clock A. M. The Board then convened again at 9 o'clock A. M. on Friday June 28, 1935. All members of the County Board were present. After some further discussion and consideration of the resignation of H. L. Fowler, it was moved by Commissioner Bredeson and seconded by Commissioner Lee that this special meeting be adjourned to Monday, July 1st, 1935 at 9 o'clock A. M. at which time the Board would meet at the County Auditor's office and again take up the matter of the pending resignation, and vacancy.

There being no further business the special meeting thereupon adjourned until Monday, July 1st, 1935 as above stated.

PAUL ROY,
Chairman of County Board.
Attest: Mae Roberts, Clerk
For this meeting by order of the Board.

MINUTES OF THE ADJOURNED SPECIAL MEETING OF THE COUNTY BOARD OF PENNINGTON COUNTY HELD JULY 1ST, 1935

The County Board of Pennington County met in an adjourned special meeting on Monday, July 1st, 1935 at 9 o'clock A. M. at the office of the County Auditor in the Court House of Pennington County, Minnesota. This was an adjourned meeting of the special meeting held on June 27, 1935 for the purpose of considering the resignation of H. L. Fowler as County Auditor and filling the vacancy. Following commissioners were present at this meeting: Roy, Bredeson, Mandt, Mulry, Lee. Absent, none. County Auditor Fowler absent. The chairman of the board then again read the resignation of H. L. PENNINGTON FAIR ATTRACTS 44,000

The Pennington county fair came to a close at Thief River Falls Friday night after having entertained a total of 44,000 persons during its four-day run, according to an estimate made by Secretary Robert J. Lund of the fair board. Receipts were approximately $1,000 more than a year ago, while the number of entries in the various departments was approximately the same.

An assemblage of 2,500 persons crowded the grandstands Friday evening to witness the public wedding, which was performed by Probate Judge Andrew Bottelson with Ernie Young's revue furnishing the setting. The participants in the ceremony were Carl Frederickson of Thief River Falls and Pearl E. Hanson, formerly of Middle River.

The free Ford coach was presented Friday afternoon to Ralph Hunt, holder of the lucky ticket. Cash prizes were awarded Wednesday and Thursday to Paul Lundell, Dr. A. M. Smith, D. M. Conners, Mrs. Barney Davidson, M. Bothun and Sam Hanson.

SANDERS NEWS

NOTICE

Whereas a demand for a Special Stockholders' Meeting, signed by nine (9) stockholders of the St. Hilaire Co-operative Creamery Association has been served upon its Board of Directors, and whereas at a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the said St. Hilaire Co-operative Creamery Association held on August 5th, 1935, a resolution was passed to call a special meeting,

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a special meeting of the stockholders of the St. Hilaire Co-operative Creamery Association will be held in the Village of St. Hilaire on Saturday, the 24th day of August, 1935, at 8:30 o'clock P. M.

The object and purpose of this special meeting of the stockholders will be for the purpose of voting upon and deciding the following proposition:

Shall the Board of Directors of the St. Hilaire Co-operative Creamery Association be authorized to engage in a gasoline and oil business and for that purpose to acquire, erect, maintain and operate a co-operative gas and oil station in the Village of St. Hilaire, Pennington County, Minnesota.

All stockholders are urged to be present.

By resolution of the Board of Directors and by order of Emil Larson, President, as required by Section 4, Chapter 326, Session Laws of the State of Minnesota for the year 1923.

FRED S. ERDMANN, Secretary

Dated August 6th, 1935.

Only stockholders will be admitted.

TREATING T. H. NO. 32

Semi-hardsurface treatment is being applied to T. H. No. 32 from here to Red Lake Falls and north to Thief River Falls. The Jay Craig Company of Minneapolis has the contract for applying oil. The oil and gravel coating used this year is somewhat heavier than previously used. In addition to heavier coating, a V shaped trench is cut on both sides of the road and filled with gravel. Outlets are provided from these trenches to the ditches so water coming up from below the grade will find an outlet. Claim also is made for the trench system that it will keep outer edges of the grade from breaking.

Strathcona Man Shot From Ambush Wednesday While at Work on Farm

Lawrence Wolfgram of Strathcona, 27 years old, lay critically wounded in a Greenbush hospital Wednesday night, victim of a mysterious shot that pierced his body as he was mowing hay on his farm four miles northwest of Strathcona shortly before noon.

While Sheriff O. A. Rice of Roseau was conducting an investigation of the attack, surgeons removed a 22-calibre rifle bullet from Wolfgram's abdomen. The shot, entering his back just above the right hip, had peneterated his body and lodged in his left side near the outer skin.

The sheriff's investigation revealed that Wolfgram was riding a mower on a hayfield when he was shot by an assailant who was hidde in a thicket of bushes slightly more than 100 feet distant.

Wolfgram then unhitched his team and drove it to a field camp more than 200 yards away before he staggered and fell. Henry Ladd, working in the same field a quarter mile distant, went to help him, discovered his condition and rode horseback to a farm a mile away to call assistance.

WHEAT HARVEST POOR

With harvesting of small grains well under way all thruout the community, indications now point to a very poor wheat crop this season. Except for a few fields of durum wheat, only a small percentage of the wheat will pay for cost of harvesting.

Barley, flax and sweet clover promise fair to good yields. While oats were fine earlier in the season, much is lodged or blown down which will necessitate much extra work and equipment to harvest. Different farmers estimate the crop will be about fifty percent of what was anticipated earlier in the season.

Versatility Here, and Also Comfort

No one has ever designed anything to equal the chic and comfort of the "Wrap-around" for efficient performance of household duties. And in our crowded lives today, Efficiency plays an important part. Perhaps that's why a house frock that could "go to market" to prove its versatility has been conceived. Don't those big square buttons conform beautifully with the unique cut of the front?—and joys of joys, the wrap is deep enough to keep from popping out at the wrong time. Confidentially, freedom isn't the only virtue of those sleeves—they're so easy to make.

Pattern 2240 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 16 takes 4 yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department 243 West Seventeenth street, New York.

CURRENT EVENTS PASS IN REVIEW

DEMOCRATS ARE DETERMINED TO PUSH ROOSEVELT TAX PLAN TO PASSAGE.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

DEMOCRATIC congressmen started the week briskly determined to push through the President's "soak the rich" tax bill at this session. Opposing them with equal determination were a number of the hardest fighting Republicans who insist that consideration of taxation be postponed until next winter and that meantime the question be studied carefully in connection with the budget for the next fiscal year. These Republicans are urgently calling for an early adjournment of congress. Senator Hastings of Delaware has introduced a resolution setting August 10 as the day for quitting and was trying to have it brought up for consideration before passage of the tax measure. Senator Vandenberg of Michigan, often mentioned as a Presidential possibility, also demanded postponement of the tax legislation until January, and he gave out a statement denouncing the administration's plan as a "sterile political gesture" which would raise "only a little extra pocket change" and declared that "we chatter of taxes in millions to offset known deficits in billions."

Senator Vandenberg

"The pending tax bill, as it is being developed," said Senator Vandenberg, "will not produce appreciable revenue for Uncle Sam. It will not pay the President's deficit even for the period while the bill is under consideration. As a contribution to the public credit, it is as grim a hoax as was ever perpetrated on the country. As a 'distributor of wealth' it is a mere vagrant flirtation with this left wing idea."

Nevertheless, it appeared probable that the tax measure would be enacted before adjournment, for the administration leaders had promised this to Senator La Follette and other "liberals," and besides that, they have no desire to pass a taxation bill in a Presidential election year. As produced by the house ways and means committee after great travail the measure embodies an 87 per cent confiscation of large fortunes and increased levies on the rich which would produce perhaps $250,000,000 of additional annual revenue.

NEEDY teachers and students are to get financial help from the Works Progress administration according to plans being perfected by Dr. L. R. Alderman. The two chief points in his program are:

Establishment of summer schools for 1,200 teachers who were among those who taught reading and writing to 500,000 illiterates last year.

Jobs to be provided for 125,000 college students during the coming school year.

Twenty-five summer schools will be conducted, the sessions lasting six weeks, and the teachers attending them will be paid from $15 to $18 a week out of the work relief funds. These teachers will be taught to teach adults in the fall.

Alderman said he already had sent out field agents to aid in setting up courses at New York university, Ohio State university, Purdue university, Olivet college (Michigan), University of Wisconsin, University of Chicago and University of California. The other training schools have not been selected.

ALONG the line of providing help for white collar workers, Harry L. Hopkins appointed four technical assistants to direct the employment of painters, musicians, writers and actors. They are: Nikolai Sokoloff for music, Hallie Flanagan for the theater, Holger Cahill for painters and sculptors, and Henry G. Alseberg for writers.

With $300,000,000 available for the estimated 750,000 white collar people on relief, scores of surveys, censuses, traffic studies, and similar projects have been provided for those with no particular skill.

Some scholars will get jobs from the $20,000,000 worth of white collar projects already approved for New York city, but other projects have awaited appointment of the four directors.

Hopkins also announced that camps for unemployed women, initiated last year, would be revived this summer, with a suggested term of from six weeks to two months. State relief administrations will be in charge. Educational programs will be offered, but all but three of the camp staff must come from relief rolls themselves.

OPPONENTS of the AAA amendments designed to strengthen the powers of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace decided to let the basic act go up to the Supreme court, so the administration bill was passed by the senate with only 15 adverse votes.

Both Republican and conservative Democratic foes of the AAA are confident that the Supreme court will hold the basic act unconstitutional and an early test is assured by a senate amendment permitting suits to recover processing taxes that have not been passed on to producers or consumers. One of the major purposes of the amendments was to close the courts, but the senate rejected this scheme by a vote of 41 to 23. As a result, the Hoosack Mills case, in which the Boston Circuit Court of Appeals held the AAA unconstitutional, will not be thrown out and the highest tribunal will have a chance to pass upon it.

SENATOR GLASS scored perhaps the greatest victory in his long public career when the senate, without a record vote, passed his draft of the 1935 banking act, rejecting the central bank features urged by Gov. Marriner S. Eccles of the federal reserve board and favored by the administration. The doughty Virginian, who was once secretary of the treasury, had fought desperately against the Eccles scheme and his triumph was decisive. There was no demand for a roll call on the final vote, for the fate met by the proposers of various amendments showed this procedure would be futile. Senator La Follette sought to strike out a provision permitting commercial banks to underwrite securities and his proposal was beaten, 39 to 22. Senator Gerald Nye of North Dakota, another radical Republican, offered the central bank plan of Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, radio priest, which would set up a government owned and wholly dominated system. It was voted down, 59 to 10.

Senator Glass

Other amendments were offered and debated rather listlessly, for the record, and then were withdrawn. Even Senator Duncan U. Fletcher, of Florida, chairman of the banking and currency committee, who had sided rather with Eccles, declined to push his amendments designed to cripple Glass' plan.

The senate bill was sent to conference, for the house passed the measure drawn up on the advice of Eccles and Tugwell.

PARTIAL investigation of the milk industry by the federal trade commission was said to have revealed deplorable conditions and the administration asked for $200,000 to continue the inquiry. The senate committee in considering the deficiency appropriation bill cut out that item altogether, but when the measure came before the senate Duffy of Wisconsin moved an amendment adding the sum asked. After a hot debate this was approved by a vote of 51 to 18 and the bill was then passed. The numerous senate amendments had added a total of more than $80,000,000 to the house measure, so the $306,000,000 bill was sent to conference.

WHAT was in the cigar box wrapped in a newspaper? That is what Senator Hugo Black, chairman of the senate lobby committee, wanted to know. Before the committee for questioning was John W. Carpenter of Dallas, president of the Texas Power and Light company. He admitted freely that he and other utility men had hotel conferences, dinners and a trip down Chesapeake bay with congressmen during the fight over the Wheeler-Rayburn bill, and that he himself had centered his efforts on Texas congressmen. But of the mysterious box he could or would tell nothing. Black probed and probed, and finally asked:

Senator Black

"Do you still say that in the morning (of the day before the vote on the utilities bill 'death sentence') you didn't give a congressman a box wrapped up in a newspaper?"

Carpenter replied quietly: "I don't think I did, unless it was a few cigars."

Senate and house conferees met to consider the utility control bill, but there were small signs that they could get together, and one session ended abruptly in a real row. Two administration lobbyists, Benjamin Cohen and Dozier A. De Vane, were brought into the executive session by Senators Wheeler and Barkley and though Representative George Huddleston protested, their continued presence was insisted upon. Whereupon the fiery Alabama congressman and his fellows from the house walked out and broke up the meeting. Cohen is generally given credit for writing the measure and Wheeelr has said he knows all about it.

After leaving the committee room, Huddleston said flatly that the house conferees would not recede from the position that the "death sentence" must be eliminated.

GRAY SILVER, who throughout most of his life was active in the interests of agriculture, died quite suddenly at his home in Martinsburg, W. Va., at the age of sixty-five years. Among the offices he held at various times were president of the United States Grain Market corporation of Chicago; president of the Inwood Fruit Growers' co-operative corporation; president Berkeley Fruit Growers; head of the Eastern Credit association; director United Growers of America, head of the Federated Growers Credit association; member of the National Bureau of Economic Research, member of the commission appointed by President Taft to study tariff relations to the wool industry, member of the farm bureau federation visiting Europe in 1924, and a member of the commission investigating national unemployment.

IMMEDIATE convocation of the League of Nations council to deal with the Italo-Ethiopian question was demanded by Haile Selassie, emperor of Ethiopia. On his behalf the demand was telegraphed to the league secretariat at Geneva by Tacla Hawariat, Ethiopian minister to France and delegate to the league. He insisted that the council proceed to the examination of the situation under article XV of the league covenant, Ethiopia invoking this article because of the "threat to her independence from Italy."

Emperor Haile Selassie

British dispatches said Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin and leading members of his cabinet were believed to favor full league action, if other nations agreed, as a last resort to avert the threatened conflict. Diplomatic quarters in London heard that the British government probably would alter its policy and permit the export of arms to Ethiopia. The emperor's new minister there, W. C. Martin, had a conference at the foreign office and came out smiling happily but saying nothing.

Previously Mr. Martin had admitted that Ethiopia was short not only of arms but also of money.

MOST people believe that concerted action by Communists anywhere is directed from Moscow. There is good reason for the belief in the case of the riotous attack on the German Lloyd liner Bremen as she lay at her dock in New York. The reds, numbering about 2,000, forced their way on board the vessel, tore the German Nazi flag from the bow and tossed it into the Hudson river, after which they fought a lively battle with the police and the crew. The government in Washington forestalled any diplomatic protest from Berlin, expressing regret for the incident through Assistant Secretary of State Wilbur J. Carr. A New York organization calling itself the Anti-Nazi federation was said to be planning further demonstrations against German boats.

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor entered the situation by calling on the federal government to take action against the Hitler government to stop the "brutal, inhuman treatment" of the laboring class.

ACCORDING to the Daily Herald of London, the British admiralty intends to build an entire new battle fleet, to be finished by 1942 and to cost $750,000,000. This laborite newspaper asserted that the admiralty has developed a secret seven-year plan, calling for the construction of 12 new capital ships and 83 new cruisers. In addition, there would be 63 new flotilla leader destroyers, 21 new submarines and three new aircraft carriers.

This is said to be the "hush-hush plan" of the admiralty which Sir Bolton Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the admiralty, had declined to make public but which had already been communicated to the United States, France, Italy, Germany and Japan. Sir Bolton recently informed the house of commons that England was abandoning the principle of naval ratios in the Washington treaty, considering other means of accomplishing naval limitation under a system of programs providing adequate defensive navies.

Under the reported program, the comparative strength of the British fleet in "in date" ships as of 1935 and 1942, allowing for ships which would become outdated under the Washington and London treaty rules, would be:

In 1935, 15 capital ships, 50 cruisers, 84 flotilla leader-destroyers, 89 submarines, eight aircraft carriers; in 1942, 14 capital ships, 72 cruisers, 142 flotilla leader destroyers, 57 submarines and 10 aircraft carriers.

THAT row over the administration of the Virgin Islands was so unpleasant that President Roosevelt felt impelled to settle it himself. So he removed from office the two chief battlers, Gov. Paul M. Pearson and Judge T. Webber Wilson, had other jobs found for them, and nominated as Pearson's successor Lawrence W. Cramer, who was serving as lieutenant governor of St. Croix island. Confirmation of this appointment was not immediate. The senate committee investigating the islands affairs was slow in making up its mind about Cramer, and from St. Thomas came the news that the foes of the Pearson administration there, together with a delegation from St. Croix, were protesting vigorously against the President's selection of a new governor.

The disposal of Pearson and Wilson also aroused criticism in Washington. The former had been attacked steadily by Pat Harrison of Mississippi and other Democratic senators, but Secretary of the Interior Ickes had defended him warmly, so he was given a job under Ickes, being made assistant director of housing in the PWA at $8,000 a year, a place not previously filled.

In order to provide a job for Judge Wilson, a former congressman from Mississippi and a protege of Senator Harrison, a woman was forced off the federal parole board. Attorney General Cummings requested and obtained the resignation of Dr. Amy A. Stannard, a psychiatrist who has been in the government service 12 years with a civil service status and had been a member of the parole board since 1930. Wilson was sworn in as her successor.

Minneapolis—Minnesota's rapidly developing works progress program, for which $5,000,000 already has been sought from President Roosevelt's $4,000,000,000 work relief reservoir, will shift 120,000 clients from state emergency relief to private payrolls of the PWA at once, or transfer them to care of local charities.

International Falls—District Judge Albert Thwing sustained state objections to questions tending to classify the International Lumber Co.'s railway as a common carrier. Judge Twing upheld most of the state's objections in the trial of the company's fight against $1,783,000 in alleged back taxes on the railroad property.

Little Falls—"Charlie" Lindbergh came to town to spend a day looking over the scenes of his boyhood. Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh landed their plane at Fort Ripley on their way to the west coast. It was the first time Anne Lindbergh had visited here and the first return of the colonel since he flew the Atlantic.

St. Paul—Minnesota farmers in 21 counties this year were supplied with 1,425,952 bushels of seed at cost of $765,687, through 5,474 loans from the $2,000,000 relief fund appropriated by the 1935 legislature, Stafford King, state auditor, reported. Repayments will be in either cash or seed, he said. The maximum for loans was $300 and some were as small as $7.

St. Paul—A Minnesota couple, who have been wed 75 years or more, and eligible to celebrate their diamond wedding anniversary, is being sought by the Minnesota Territorial Pioneers association for the golden wedding reception at the Minnesota State fair on Pioneer day, Thursday, Sept. 5. Last year more than 100 couples who had been married 50 years attended.

Kelliher—Because he drove sharpened wooden pegs through the noses of three calves to wean them, W. J. Fields, 70 years old, itinerant evangelist living ten miles north of here, must serve 90 days in jail. Harry Klaus, humane agent, made the arrest and brought the case before Municipal Judge C. A. Frost. Fields' plea was that the calves were robbing him of milk.

Fergus Falls—Trustees and members of the board of missions of the Lutheran Brethern church and Lutheran Bible school of Grand Forks, N. D., voted at a meeting here to acquire Park Region Lutheran college building which has been closed for the past two years. The Bible school will be moved from Grand Forks to Fergus Falls and is expected to open September 17.

Fort Snelling—It required a good deal of food to satisfy the appetites of 1,350 citizens military training camp students at Fort Snelling during the 30-day training period, according to Lieutenant H. K. Johnson of the Third infantry, camp mess officer. Students returned home after consuming 121,500 meals. And in addition to half a million eggs, the group managed to do away with 32,447 pounds of meat, 46,880 pounds of potatoes, 40,330 half pint bottles of milk, 3,392 pies and 4,100 gallons of lemonade.

WHAT IS WEALTH?

A woman has said in court that with $200,000 to her name she would not call herself rich. In another court a bankrupt said that he did not feel wealthy on $16,000 a year and sometimes was very hard up. An actress who had more than $20,000 a year has told how she had to spend $30,000. These people have missed a lot of fun. A man who feels rich because he has a dollar in his pocket is fifty times as well off as any of them. His is a grand and glorious feeling.—Manchester (Eng.) Settle Controversy

Washington. — President Roosevelt has settled a controversy by the simple expedient of transferring two men from responsible positions in the Virgin islands to jobs in Washington. He has taken Paul M. Pearson from the post of civil governor of the Virgin islands and has made him assistant director of housing in the Interior department and has transferred Federal Director Judge T. Webber Wilson from his post in the islands to the federal parole board here in Washington. Each man has accepted his new appointment and in so far as a current controversy is concerned, the book is closed.

It will be recalled that Governor Pearson and Judge Wilson long have been at loggerheads over Virgin island affairs. The battle was bitter. It came to a head when Paul Yates, executive assistant to the governor and a former Washington correspondent, resigned his job and came back here with a bag full of charges against his former chief. The Yates allegations ranged all the way from minor charges of poor judgment to gross accusations. He succeeded in getting a senate committee investigation and it was at that time that the Pearson-Wilson feud flared so openly that administration officials here were dragged in and the whole scope of differences aired.

As a matter of fact there is every reason to believe that Governor Pearson was far from a successful executive in the islands. He frequently aroused the ire of natives and, according to testimony adduced by the senate investigation, had very little to show for the sums of money he expended in attempting to give the Virgin islands a new lease on life. All of the information tends to establish that the islands continue to be "an effectual poorhouse" just as President Hoover described them on the occasion of a visit during his term as Chief Executive.

But Governor Pearson had his supporters in the administration. Chief among these was Secretary Ickes whose department is responsible for administration of the islands. Just why Mr. Ickes has been so enthusiastic about Governor Pearson's regime is not fully disclosed in any evidence here except that the interior secretary has certain ideas about social reform that some unkind critics refer to as pure socialism which Governor Pearson had been attempting to impose upon the island inhabitants. Governor Pearson has expended vast sums of PWA funds in the islands in his efforts to carry out the Ickes program of reformation. It seems, however, that the schemes were not as practical as they might have been and so trouble started in a rather extensive fashion.

The President stayed outside of the row until in the course of the senate inquiry Senator Tydings, a Maryland Democrat and usually an anti-Roosevelt Democrat, received a letter from Mr. Ickes. Mr. Ickes accused the investigating chairman with having whitewashed a witness whose testimony was all anti-Ickes and anti-Pearson. The senator flared up in a big way at that letter. His reply is likely to become a classic in official correspondence. He did not mince his words. After voicing his general conception of the attitude exhibited by Mr. Ickes and accusing him of attempting to interfere in the investigation, Senator Tydings informed the interior secretary that he may as well attempt to run the Department of the Interior and let the senators run the senate. He used just about those words.

That was the signal for Mr. Roosevelt to take a hand. It was easy to see that a few outbursts of that kind and Mr. Ickes might have found himself in a splendid position to resign from the cabinet. So the President got the feudists into his office, singly of course, and when those conferences were over the senate investigation into the Virgin island situation was suspended for two weeks. The transfer of Governor Pearson and Judge Wilson resulted.

Why the Agitation?

One might properly inquire why all of this agitation has occurred about the Virgin islands. They are many hundreds of miles from Washington. They lie in the Caribbean sea, considerably out of the usual pathway of ships; they are populated by about 22,000 individuals, 95 per cent of whom are negroes and may generally be described as a "backward" place.

They may have some military and naval value. That has never been fully demonstrated. But the fact remains they are possessions of the United States and if our government is to be their protector, it is responsible for a sane administration of their affairs.

The Washington fight may have had its start in the Virgin islands, but it has progressed beyond that point and is a domestic battle now. It is safe to say that for 18 years, which is the time the islands have been under United States rule, there has been a dire need for a plan of government suited to those people. Each year congress has been appropriating thousands of dollars for the island government and each year there has been miserably little in the way of improvement to show for these funds.

Almost as frequently as congress has appropriated money it has made changes in the administration methods in use there. There has never been a long term program laid out and there has been nothing whatsoever done showing the sympathy of a so-called intellectual people as we claim to be for those downtrodden masses that populate the Virgin islands.

All of this, it seems to me, shows the woeful need for careful consideration of that situation. It seems to me equally apparent that as long as congress keeps meddling in and as long as politicians from the mainland are sent there purely on a political basis we will continue to have a pack of trouble bundled up in those Virgin islands.

Several attempts have been made to work out a governmental system worth while but the politicians are not among those who will let plums escape. It is certain, therefore, that the Pearson-Wilson-Ickes-Tydings battle royal is an outcropping of what amounts to a festering sore in American governmental policy.

Long Session Severe Strain

If congress continues in session past August 15, and it is now apparent that it may run to September 1, it will have been in session 225 days, some two weeks longer than the average of the so-called long sessions of congress. Prior to adoption of the "lame duck" amendment which did away with sessions of unequal length, the shorter sessions of congress averaged about 170 days. The longer terms were around 215 days before final adjournment was taken. Thus, the current session stands in a fair way to be among the list of hardy sessions.

All of which is by way of saying that the current session of congress has worn down its members both physically and mentally to an extent quite unusual. I was talking a few days ago with a veteran senator, a man who has served almost 25 years in the upper house of congress. He is known as a physically strong individual and usually lasts very well through the work that piles up before senators and represenatives. I inquired of him concerning the general health of congress and his reply was:

"I regret to say we are just a bunch of debilitated old men, incapable of doing the job that is expected of us and everyone is hoping against hope that we can live through this work and this heat."

As a result of that converstaion the thought came to me that here was an answer to the oft repeated declaration that members of congress fail to earn their salaries of $10,000 per year. I have observed congressional proceedings almost a score of years and it is my mature conviction that few times in that period has congress failed to earn its salt.

When Solons Are Tired

There is another reason why congressional sessions should not run so long and should not be carried on in the intense heat of a Washington summer. One condition nearly always has obtained near the close of a long session. As the days drag by, persons with axes to grind and individual interests to serve have a way of digging up questionable bills that theretofore had been side-tracked and assumed to be dead. With resistance low, the average senator or representative is unable to fight off legislation which he knows to be bad with the same spirit that accompanied his activities earlier in the session. Likewise, he is unable to battle as successfully as before for legislation which he knows to be good.

This condition opens the way for a revival of lobbies. They are back in Washington in numbers now despite the disclosures being made by the two congressional committees that are investigating the lobbies that operated to defeat, temporarily at least, the legislation killing utility holding companies. One would have assumed justly with the investigations under way after the utility legislation was passed that lobbyists and self-serving representatives would have been frightened away from Washington. Such was not the case. They are here in such numbers that some observers believe Mr. Roosevelt has made a mistake in demanding that congress stay until it has enacted the share-the-wealth-tax bill and the legislation which will prohibit lawsuits against the government for damages resulting from abrogation of the promise in government bonds to pay them in gold. Mr. Roosevelt is insisting on these laws. He will get them. But in the opinion of many authorities he stands a fair chance also of getting some other legislation which he may not want.

LET'S GO HOME

By BRASWELL DRUE DEEN
U. S. Representative from Georgia.

THERE are many reasons why the house and senate should quickly adjourn this session of the Seventy-fourth congress. Chief among the reasons is the fact that more than 20 of our colleagues—to be exact, 26—are now either in hospitals or at their homes suffering from heart trouble or a nervous breakdown. This congress has worked long, and faithfully, and well, and, personally, I insist that the senate bring its business quickly to an end so that we may agree on the matters that must be agreed upon between the house and the senate, and that all future hearings on house bills, many of which I am for, be extended until a session in the fall or the next session beginning in January. This share-the-wealth, soak-the-rich and save-the-poor legislation, some of which I am in favor of, can wait six months longer, because the rich will not get too rich in a few more months, and the wealth can then be shared and the poor are being taken care of now, and I am personally appealing to the membership of the house to let us adjourn this session immediately.

THE SANE LIFE

By DR. HAROLD WILLIS DODD
President, Princeton University.

THE devastation of the World war and its catastrophic aftermath have been interpreted by some as revealing the emptiness of accepted values and the need for newly fabricated loyalties if one is to be modern and free. But every man needs something to live by and to live for, and those who have jettisoned received standards perforce turn to strange gods most astonishingly bizarre and fanciful.

In the look ahead which today I urge you to take, be sure to find a place for intellectual and cultural interests outside your daily occupation. It is necessary that you do so if this business of living is not to turn to dust and ashes in your mouth. Moreover, do not overlook the claims of religion as the explanation of an otherwise unintelligible world.

It is not the fast tempo of modern life that kills but the boredom, a lack of strong interest and failure to grow that destroy. It is the feeling that nothing is worth while that makes men ill and unhappy.

BRITISH RECOVERY

By STANLEY BALDWIN
Prime Minister, Great Britain.

WE ARE being censured for not having any considered plan. I have never been a slave of a word. If there is a word that has been ridden to death today it is the word plan. I have seen nothing of planning in any foreign country that would lead me to think it is a universal panacea. I don't exactly know what plan is. For some kinds of plans there are books and pamphlets undertaking to cure unemployment.

I have never promised to cure unemployment. I have taken risks for unemployment. I threw away an office and an election because I was convinced that among things necessary to help check growing unemployment were tariffs. I never promised to cure unemployment and I shall never stand on a platform with anybody who does promise it. I think I can say of our action during the time we have been in office that we have made a considerable contribution toward it.

AMBITIOUS NATIONS

By NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER
Chairman, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

IT HAS become clear that treaties count for nothing in the face of national ambition and of what the ruling statesmen regard as national security. Therefore Japan is moving steadily toward the extension of her control over a vast portion of Asia. Therefore Italy is feeling her way toward the acquisition of new territory and new economic opportunity in Africa, while Germany is, so to speak, tossing in her bed, stirred with ambition to extend her authority toward the south and the southeast.

To deal with a complicated and very real situation such as this will tax the world's wisdom and the world's statesmanship to the utmost. These conditions, serious as they are, become more so when it is realized how closely they are bound up with the various revolutionary movements now actively going forward in the fields of economics, politics and the social order.

PREPARING FOR WAR

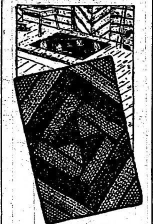
By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE
Former British Prime Minister.

THE situation from the viewpoint of peace is in many respects worse than before 1914.

I was in the business before 1914. Then every one as now was talking about peace, but every one just as now was preparing feverishly for war. The nations were maneuvering for war positions. Watch—for it is going on now. Each of them was as certain as now that their conduct was actuated by a sincere desire for peace and that their armaments were intended exclusively for defense.

Log Cabin Effect in Crocheted Rug

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



Log cabins are always picturesque, and the many antiques usually found about the place add much to complete the picture.

We can't all live in cabins, but we can satisfy our antique cravings by giving these ideas some space in our homes.

This "Log Cabin" crocheted rug was developed from the old "Log Cabin" quilt which is known to many of our readers. This model measures 28x42 inches and requires about 4 pounds of rag rug material.

The inner square of 4 triangles is made first. Four elongated pieces of same size form the first row around center, two short and two long pieces form the next or second row. Four pieces of same size from the third row. Four same size triangles fit in corners. Slip-stitch sections together in black and single crochet all around in black. Color scheme may be all brown in light and dark shades or mixed colors. Alternate panels in light and dark shades to give contrast to rows. Measure each section as the work progresses and fit sections into spaces. Rag rug material may vary in weights.

Grandmother Clark's Rug Book No. 24 contains full directions for making this rug, and many others that will interest you. All illustrations in colors. Postpaid, 15c.

Eskimos Unworried by Little Matter of Heat

Constable McGinnis, in charge of Royal Canadian Mounted Police Arctic detail at Pangnirtong, is seriously considering shipping Eskimos from his district to the South for work in tropical spots too hot for the natives to stand, says a newspaper dispatch from Toronto, Canada.

McGinnis was entertaining a group of a dozen or more Eskimos in his quarters last winter. He fed them on biscuits and tea and, after the customary talk, waited for them to leave. They didn't.

Not wanting to hurt their feelings, the constable commenced hinting for them to return to their igloos. They paid no attention to him, but, seated in a circle around the stove, continued to puff away stolidly on their pipes.

Finally the constable was seized with an inspiration. If they would not go voluntarily he would make it so uncomfortable for them that they would have to leave.

He went to the shed and returned with a big load of fuel which he piled into the stove. He then opened the drafts, closed all the doors and left the room. He waited 15 minutes for signs of the natives' departure, but in vain. He re-entered. The Eskimos had not stirred from their places despite the fact that the stove was red hot and perspiration ran in streams down their faces.

McGinnis thought of another plan to get rid of his unwelcome guests. Walking to a corner of the room, he picked up a cap, took a handful of the contents and cannily spread it on the stove. It was red pepper. The constable fled outside fully expecting the Eskimos to follow. They didn't, and the next morning when he returned to the post after spending the night in other quarters, found the guests snoring contentedly on the floor, unaffected by heat or pepper.

CHILDREN'S HOBBIES

It is wise to allow children to choose their own hobbies, as hobbies that are forced upon them often turn out failures. If the mother can arrange it, she should provide a definite place in which the children can exercise their hobbies. If the hobby is the rearing of animals or birds, the mother should impress on the children that their pets are not toys or playthings, and that they must be loved and cared for. There is a greater likelihood of a hobby turning out a success if the mother gives the child to understand that the success or failure of the hobby depends entirely upon the child.

Potato Insects Taking Heavy Toll from Fields, Say N. W. School Men

Potato insects are taking a heavy toll from the potato crop this season according to T. M. McCall, horticulturist at the Northwest School and Station, Crookston. Mr. McCall states that unless the potato flea bettle and potato leaf hoppers are controlled at once the leaves on many fields will be dead by August 15th. While potatoes in general have made luxuriant growth this year, the lack of reserve subsoil moisture in most sections make it imperative that the full crop of leaves be kept alive for the setting of the tubers.

In many fields the leaves are siddled with the tiny holes eaten by the flea bettle and some burning is now apparent from punctures of the potato leaf hopers. Insect traps in the Red River Valley are now catching large numbers of leaf hoppers Insect traps in the Red River Valley are now catching large numbers of leaf hoppers which indicate that a heavy infestation will appear soon.

Bordeaux mixture (either home made or commercially mixed) and other copper spray compounds repel and kill the flea beetle and leaf hopper and give added vigor to the plant. The leaves must remain covered with the spray and even though vines may be damaged slightly by the sprayer wheels, the gain in yield and the prevention of spread of virus diseases through insect control will make the effort required to spray the crop well worth while.

The bordeaux sprays may be applied in either liquid or dust form. The high pressure liquid sprayers and the power dusters uniformly coat and protect both sides of the leaves of the potato plants. Additional information on potato spraying may be secured from the Northwest School and Station or from the county agricultural extension agents.

CROOKSTON WILL START NIGHT BASEBALL MONDAY

Crookston is inaugurating its new 150,000 watt baseball floodlight system next Monday night, Aug, 12, at 9:15, when Danny Boone's Pirates of the Northern League will play the original House of David club of Benton Harbor, Mich. Crookston's new lighting system will be the largest installation of its kind in the Northwest, the total wattage exceeding in capacity that of any baseball park in this section of the country.

FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE STOPS FAILURE OF BANKS

Only 19 Insured Banks Are Liquidated in Past 18 Months

Cost-free insurance of $18 billion of deposits in 18 months; virtually stoppage of bank failures; reduced operating expenses and an income of $9 million are reflected in the report of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation to its insured banks, made public this week.

Only nineteen insured banks have had to be liquidated, the report implying that this is at least partially accounted for by the rigid FDIC examination program coupled with successful efforts to rehabilitate capital structures.

Over 26,000 depositors in the closed insured banks were 99% fully protected and the FDIC estimates that its payments will be conducted with a net loss of only $2,500,000. Total deposits in the banks amounted to $4,088,000.

Estimated operating expenditures for the current year will require $2,500,000, 14-1000 of one per cent of insured deposits, compared with expenses of $2,832,000 in the year just closed and with $2,845,000 for the first ten months of deposit insurance. Drastic reductions in personnel from 2,622 on December 31, 1933, to 955 on June 30, 1934, and to 742 this year are contributing factors in the successive cuts in operating expenses.

FDIC's total income for the year ended June 30, 1935, was $9,057,195. It had cash on deposit with the U. S. Treasury amounting to $17,407,381 and a net of $315,080,009 invested in Government securities on the same date.

Corporate Excess Tax Law Enforcement Hit by State Organization

Hundreds of small business firms as well as large companies will be subjected to a staggering new tax burden if the long obsolete Minnesota corporate excess tax law is resurrected and enforced, officials of the Minnesota Association of Commercial Organizations pointed out in a statement today warning of the perils that await any attempt to apply such a tax in Minnesota.

The organization is composed of commercial clubs and chambers of commerce throughout the state. F. H. Klemer of Faribault is president.

The statement declared that efforts of the tax commission to impose this tax on Minnesota firms not only will force many of the larger companies doing a nationwide business to move out of the state or curtail their activities but will place a confiscatory tax burden upon innumerable smaller firms in all parts of the state.

"The belief has been general that only the larger companies are concerned in the attempts to apply this old law," the statement said. "This is not true. It applies to the smaller companies as well."

Ten marriage licenses were issued to county residents in July, Clerk of Court Adolf Eklund announced this week. The number compares with nine issued in the same month of last year.

DUCK HUNTING TO BE PERMITTED 30 DAYS NEXT FALL

Hunters Will be Subjected to Drastic Regulations During Season

Thirty days of wild duck shooting from Monday, October 21, to Tuesday, November 19, is in prospect for Minnesota hunters, according to regulations of the U. S. bureau of biological survey adopted last week. Season's regulations are the "most drastic in the history of American wildfowling" including:

Shooting over baited water or land is prohibited.

Use of live decoys at any time or place is banned.

Shooting hours daily will be from 7 a. m. to 4 a. m.

Daily bag limit was reduced from 12 to 10 birds with possession limit of one day's bag.

Three-shell limit placed on automatic and repeating shotguns.

Nation divided into two zones for shooting purposes.

Included in the northern zone are the following states which will have uniform opening and closing dates with Minnesota, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri, North and South Dakota, Nebraska and Montana.

"Although I have held out for an absolute closed season this year, the new regulations are a big improvement over those of the past few years," Erling Swenson, director of the division of game and fish, commented.

"The stopping of the baiting evil, banning of the use of live decoys, continuous shooting each day rather than the staggered seasons of last year, and reduced bag and possession limits are commendable rulings to save our diminishing wild migratory waterfowl. It is hoped that the new regulations will save at least 50 per cent of the increase in wild ducks as planned."

Wind Driven Apparatus for Farm Power Plants Exhibited at State Fair

Eight different methods of producing electricity for the farm through the use of wind-driven apparatus will be featured in the machinery show at the Minnesota State Fair, August 31 to September 7, it was announced today by Lee M. Shell, superintendent.

An entire section of machinery will be devoted to farm electric plants, all of which derive their power from the wind. All of the exhibits will be in actual operation so that visitors will be able to see and obtain first hand information about the newest developments in power. In addition, there will be a number of other types of power-producing units displayed.

The largest windmill ever built will be shown. A wheel 22 feet in diameter will be erected on a 60-foot tower and introduces a new type of roller bearing for the first time.

Of special interest to visitors wil be the twine-making display to be installed by one of the nation's leading farm equipment concerns. Every operation in the manufacture of twine will be shown.

TWO COUNTY 4-H GIRLS LEAVE SOON FOR STATE FAIR

Ethel Parnow Today Enters Cake Baking Contest in Stephen

Florence Hanson and Marian Green of the Rocksbury 4-H Club are winners of trips to the Minnesota State Fair and Ethel Parnow of the Erie Club was selected to represent this county in the sub-district cake baking contest at Stephen today, as a result of the annual 4-H club cake and clothing Achievement Day and Style Revue held at the Lincoln High School, Wednesday, July 24. Florence Hanson submitted the champion clothing exhibit, consisting of a swagger suit for fall wear with matching accessories. Budrun Tveit of the Northfield club was named alternate. About sixty exhibits were entered in the competition marking the completion of the clothing project.

Marion Green was selected as the winner of the Style Revue in which twenty-three girls competed, and Hazel Melin of the Bray-Polk Centre club is alternate. Each girl modeled in a costume made by herself and wore accessories to match.

Ethel Parnow was the winner of the talking-working cake baking demonstration in which about ten girls competed.

This contest was supervised by Mrs. Verna Becker Purcell. Mrs. John Hanson of St. Hilaire and Mrs. R. H. McDonald of Goodridge judged the clothing exhibits and Style Revue. The Cake Baking was judged by Mrs. B. T. Johnson of Hazel.

Materials for the cake baking event were furnished by Land O'Lakes Creameries, and the Farm Bureau. Furniture for the Style Revue was furnished by Montgomery Ward & Co. The cooperation of the various firms in helping with events of this kind help to make them more successful and the County 4-H council has greatly appreciated this cooperation.

Experienced Teachers to Present Courses at Northwest School

Three thoroughly trained and experienced agriculturalists will present the class and laboratory work in horticulture, agronomy, and beekeeping at the Northwest School of Agriculture during the coming year.

T. M. McCall, who joined the school and station staff in 1911, is now rounding out a quarter of a century of service to the students and farmers and townspeople of the Red River Valley. A few years ago Professor McCall returned to the Iowa State College where he was granted a Masters degree. He will present the work in horticulture, forestry, shrubs and flowers, garden vegetables, potatoes, sugar beets, and beekeeping.

For more than a decade R. S. Dunham agronomist and E. R. Clark, pure seed specialist, have had charge of the work in crops and soils. Mr. Dunham is a graduate of the University of Illinois and earned the degree of Master of Science following a year's study at the University of Minnesota. E. R. Clark graduated from the University of Wisconsin and also took his Masters degree at the University of Minnesota. As a result of their long service with the school and station both Professor Dunham and Professor Clark are recognized as authorities in their respective fields.

Students interested in attending this fall should write the Northwest School, Crookston, for further information.

FISH TURNS ON WOMAN INFLICTS CUTS ON TOES

Baudette—A fish which is evidently getting tired of having pesky humans try to snare him with a sharp hook was found in Baudette recently, and this particular fish isn't the kind to take things lying down. In fact, it did a little rough work on its own part. Mrs. Percy Williams sat on the dock at Coutts Camp at Saboscong Bay, fishing, her bare feet hanging in the water below. Along came a big fish which had decided objections to anyone with Mrs. Williams' intentions, and took several bites at her toes, inflicting nasty cuts. The fish, probably a big jackfish, not only bit her toes, but inflicted a cut farther up on the foot. Others laughed at Mrs. Williams when she said she had been bitten by a fish, but changed their minds when they saw the cuts on her foot.

MOTHER CAT FEEDS TWO BLACK FOX PUPS

Winnebago City.— Confronted with the necessity of raising two black fox pups on bottles or find a better substitute not long ago, Floyd Bogenreif, owner of a fox farm near Winnebago City, tossed the two pups into a pen with a mother cat which had lost two of her three kittens the day before. If the mother cat knew the difference, she was too lady-like to show it and a place was made at the family table for the foxes. The mixed family thrived so much that the foxes outgrew the kittens, and one fox had to be removed. The one which remained is now larger than the mother cat, and apparenty has no sense of gratitude to the foster mother or her little yellow kitten. In fact, it hogs the feed and keeps the mother cat sitting on top the shelter house most of the time.

Army Sergeant in City Wednesday to Recruit Men for Regular Army

Sergeant Chester G. Wise of the army recruiting service was in town Wednesday in the interest of recruiting for the regular army. A permanent recruiting station has been established in the national guard armory at Bemidji with Sergeant Herman F. Hoffmann in charge.

Enlistments are open for Fort Snelling near St. Paul and Minneapolis. Single men without any dependents between the ages of 18 and 35 years with at least an eighth grade school education and of good character are eligible. The regular army has been increased in strength and to those entering now it will offer an excellent opportunity for advancement.

Anyone desiring further information should write, or apply in person, to the army recruiting office at Bemidji, for an application blank and full details. Sergeant Hoffman will be at the Armory in Crookston the first Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of each month to accept any men that desire to apply from that vicinity.

CATCHER BREAKS JAW ON FIRST BASEMAN'S HEAD

Mountain Lake—Two kittenball players, with a single purpose, came to grief at Comfrey in a game between teams from Mountain Lake and that village. Fritz Anderson, catching for the Mountain Lake team, went after a foul fly between home plate and first base, as did also Bruce Johnson, first baseman and manager of the team. The two players collided with terrific force just as they were about to catch the ball. Anderson went down, and it took several minutes to revive him. An X-ray examination showed that his jaw was broken in two places. Who named this game called "kitten" ball?

H. L. FOWLER HELD IN FUNDS SHORTAGE PLACED AT $13,755

Former Official Charged With Embezzlement of Large Sum

Harry L. Fowler, who resigned as county auditor of Pennington county a few weeks ago after discovery was made that he had issued an unauthorized county warrant for $1,487.50 and appropriated the proceeds for his own use, was arrested Sunday and is now in jail while investigation is being made of reported embezzlement of more than $13,000.

Following Mr. Fowler's resignation, a complete audit of books and accounts in his office was made under direction of Edward J. Pearlove, state comptroller. Mr. Pearlove's report, released this week to County Attorney H. O. Berve, reveals shortages of $8,499.65 in attached rents from delinquent lands and other property; $3,419.02 realized from tax certificates, besides the unauthorized warrant and interest on it to date, making a total of $13,755.79.

Mr. Fowler, a married man with a family of five children, came to this county from Spooner in 1929 to serve as assistant auditor. He was elected auditor in fall of 1930, and last fall was re-elected by one of the largest vote sever given an official in this county.

Brought before District Judge M. A. Brattland Tuesday noon, Mr. Fowler waived a preliminary examination, and his bonds were set at $3,000, which was expected to be furnished by a group of Thief River Falls citizens Thursday. His trial is scheduled for the October term of Pennington county district court.

LOSE AT GRYGLA

The local ball team motored Sunday to Grygla and dropped a hard-fought game to the club of that village by a score of 3 to 2.

Because of errors on part of St. Hilaire players, the Grygla lads were enabled to cross the pan three times in the opening frame, but were held scoreless for balance of the game. Bill Hallameck was on the mound for St. Hilaire and did splendid work. The boys are all unanimous in stating this game was the most interesting of any contest in which they have taken part in this season.

JUDGE J. M. BISHOP DIES

Attorney J. M. Bishop, long prominent in professional and business circles at Thief River Falls, died Sunday at his home in that city. He had not been in best of health for over a year, but death was unexpected at this time. Mr. Bishop and family came to Thief River some over thirty years ago. Besides engaging in practice of law, he was interested at different times in banks and in other enterprises and took an active part in civic affairs. Following death of the late Nick Tarrant, Mr. Bishop was appointed judge of the municipal court at Thief River which position he held at time of his death. He was well known all thruout northwestern Minnesota, and he had many friends thruout this section who mourn his departure.

Mr. Bishop is survived by his widow and two children, Morlan and Merriam. Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at the city auditorium at Thief River. Interment took place at Minneapolis where the children reside.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

The Aid of the Norwegian Lutheran church, which was to be held at the tourist park, will be held at 8:00 P. M., Friday, Aug. 16, on the parsonage lawn. A group of ladies will entertain.

The fire department was called out Friday to the Rosendahl cream station to extinguish a blaze caused by a heater under the can sterilizer. Aside from coating walls with oil smoke, the fire did no damage.

The village council met in special session Monday night to consider making application for some projects under the new WPA setup.

Co. Commissioner Paul Roy went Tuesday morning to Thief River Falls to preside at regular monthly meeting of the county board.

The re-union of members of the class of 1925 of the St. Hilaire high school, which was scheduled to be held here a week ago last Sunday, failed to materialize because only a few of the members could be present.

This office has a copy of the Halstad paper containing a number of press comments on the Concordia College Band which is now touring Norway. These comments, from Norwegian papers, are interesting, and may be read at this office by anyone interested.

Nine people were killed and many more seriously injured in auto accidents thruout the state during last week-end. Speed and careless driving were responsible for most of the accidents.

Albert Nelson is back home after being employed a short time near Eldred at rebuilding some barns damaged by wind storms a month ago. Three more similar jobs between Mentor and Erskine are to be done later in the season.

Harry Winter has his honey extracting outfit set up and has already extracted several hundred gallons of honey for himself and others.

The road oiling outfit which was located here while work was in progress south to the county line and north to midway to Thief River, was moved Saturday to Thief River Falls. Oil for part of T. H. No. 32 and some for the Warren road will be heated and distributed from that point.

Mrs. Gulseth was pleasantly surprised at her home by a number of neighbors and friends last Thursday afternoon, the occasion being her birthday anniversary. A very pleasant afternoon was spent and lunch was served by the guests.

The village dads are considering a plan to secure a community hall for the village the coming fall and winter. Under the WPA and other divisions of the "made work" program, the government pays 45 per cent of cost of a community hall. Unless this opportunity is grasped now, it is likely the village will be unable to get a hall for many years to come.

Mrs. Geo. Peterson and Mrs. Paul Thyren will entertain the Ladies Aid of the Evang. Mission church at home of the latter on Thursday afternoon, Aug. 22.

Dr. D. S. Horn, the Ulen dentist, was here Monday and Tuesday attending to his local dental practice.

Henry Braaten and family motored here Sunday from Manvil, N. D., and visited until Sunday afternoon at the home of Elmer Johnson, and with Johnson Brothers at their farm east of the village.

Mrs. E. Sundholm and children were here Friday from Red Lake Falls for a visit with Mrs. B. E. Burkee.

A fair sized crowd attended the dance given here last Saturday evening at the Bilden & Olsen hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hanson were down Sunday from Thief River Falls for a short visit with his relatives.

Postmaster Harold Holmes attended the Postal Workers convention and also dedication exercises at the new postoffice building at Thief River Falls last Saturday.

Christopher Kies came Saturday from Chicago to spend a few days at the Mrs. J. S. Roy home. Upon returning to Chicago, he will be accompanied by Mrs. Kies who has spent several weeks here with her mother and other relatives.

Alvin Potvin motored up Sunday from Cass Lake for a visit at the Pete Simonson home. Upon return, he was accompanied by Mrs. Potvin and grandson, and by Mrs. T. Ingstad of Jessie Lake, who had spent a few days with their father, Mr. Simonson.

Herman Anderson of Devils Lake, N. D., has been here the past week or more for a visit at the farm home of Mrs. A. P. Anderson and with Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Jackson in the village.

Threshing machines took to the fields thruout this section last week, and threshing will become general in a few days. Early reports are that grain is not running very well, especially wheat.

PLENTY OF FEED

Altho the wheat crop will amount to but little, and other grains will not yield as first anticipated, this section is in good shape for feed. The hay crop was better this year than average, and other fodder will be good. As this is essentially a stock raising district, conditions are much better than in those sections where grain is the main crop. Northern Minnesota is fortunate indeed, in having something to fall back on even if crop conditions are poor.

Here From Chicago

Mr. and Mrs. Hjalmar Johnson departed Monday for their home at Chicago after having spent a couple days visiting relatives in Black River. They recently returned from a motor trip to western states including Oregon and Washington. After leaving here, and while enroute home, they intended to visit with friends at Alexandria, Cambridge and other towns in southern part of this state.

Lloyd Hesse Dies

Lloyd Hesse, 7 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hesse of River township, died Friday at a Crookston hospital from complications following lockjaw, which developed after the boy's right foot had been pierced by a fork. After being at the hospital a day it was thought the infection had been checked, but he passed away Friday.

Funeral services were held Monday morning at 10:00 at the Catholic church at Plummer.

REIERSGORD RESIGNS

E. N. Reiersgord, who has served efficiently as superintendent of the local school the past eight years, handed in his resignation to the board this week and announced that he and family would move latter part of the month to Fosston where he has been elected principal of the town school for the coming year. The new position is in nature of a promotion for Mr. Reiersgord as the school at Fosston is much larger than the local one, and future prospects are better.

In addition to his school duties, Mr. Reiersgord has served as leader of the school band since it was first organized some years ago. He received his M. A. degree at the University of North Dakota in June this year, and is, therefor, qualified to hold a good position in any school system in the state. Thus far, no successor to Mr. Reiersgord has been appointed, but it is not anticipated there will be any lack of applicants.

Mrs. Lawrence Johnson and daughter Dorothy Mae, returned yesterday to their home at Mentor after visiting since Sunday at the home of Mrs. Johnson's sister, Mrs. Richard Larson.

TWIN CITY PICNIC TO BE HELD SEPT. 8 FOR FORMER RESIDENTS

Special Invitation Extended to St. Hilaire Band to Attend This Year

For several years past it has been the custom of former St. Hilaire people now residing in and near the Twin Cities to gather twice a year to renew acquaintances and meet old friends. These meetings have been the source of much enjoyment to the former residents of this place as well as to St. Hilaire people who happened to be in the Cities when such gatherings occured.

In a wire to the Spectator this week, the committee in charge of making arrangements for the annual summer picnic states it will be held at Como Park at St. Paul on Sunday, September 8th. Special invitation is extended to all local people attending the State Fair, especially the St. Hilaire Band, to meet their friends and former neighbors at that time. The wire states activities will begin at 2:30 P. M. All are asked to come to the park, and to plan for picnic supper with their friends. The guide at Como Park conservatory will help all St. Hilaire visitors to locate the group. No doubt a great many St. Hilaire residents will avail themselves of this opportunity to meet and greet the many Twin Cities people who were former residents of this community.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Austin were preparing to move to Crookston to make their future home.

Crops thruout western Canada, with exception of a few favored spots, were almost a total failure that year.

George Biskey returned after spending his annual vacation in the southern part of the state, and resumed his duties as carrier on mail route No. 1.

Offices of the Red Lake Falls Milling Company were moved that week from Red Lake Falls to Crookston.

The annual Synod church festival was held here. Per Stromme, noted lecturer and editor, was the speaker at the gathering.

Congressman Halvor Steenerson was a visitor in the village. He was a candidate for re-election at election to be held that fall.

Twenty bushels per acre of good quality wheat, and 40 bushels of oats per acre were threshed from fields at the Martz farm that week.

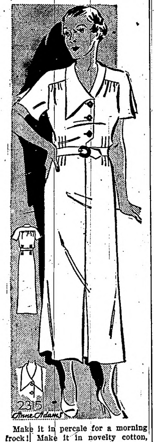
PATTERN 2315



Make it in percale for a morning frock! Make it in novelty cotton, shantung or pique for a sports frock! And then make it again in silk crepe for an afternoon frock!

This pattern will make a charming frock for nearly any summer daytime occasion. Its lines are particularly good—for the "not-too-slim" figure. Moreover, it can be run up before the clock moves round. Note both versions of the flattering collar. Pleated sleeves, a kick pleat, and cleverly placed fullness all contribute to the charm. Two or three frocks of this pattern will prove classics in your wardrobe.

Pattern 2315 is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 4⅜ yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to the Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York City.

Share-the-Wealth Measure Is Passed by the House

VIOLENTLY attacked from all sides and nowhere defended with enthusiasm, the President's new share-the-wealth tax bill nevertheless was put through the house because of the great administration majority and also because the congressmen are tired out and eager to go home. Representative Treadway, Republican, of Massachusetts, made a last effort against the measure with a resolution to send it back to committee, but this was easily defeated.

Sen. Barbour

As passed by the house, the bill is not quite what the President asked for. Briefly summarized, it increases taxes on individual incomes over $50,000, substitutes a graduated corporation-income tax for the present flat levy, puts new taxes on inheritances and gifts in addition to those already borne by estates and gifts, imposes new taxes of 5 to 20 per cent on "excess" profits of corporations.

It is designed to raise revenue estimated at between $250,000,000 and $270,000,000. Its warmest friends couldn't explain how this would do much in the way of bringing about what the President calls "wider distribution of wealth," or in the way of balancing the budget.

The measure was handed on to the senate with dubious prospects. It was expected the senate finance committee would study it for about a week, and in the meanwhile the conservative Republicans and not a few Democrats were preparing to fight it. Senator W. W. Barbour of New Jersey, Republican, fired an opening gun with a statement in which he said: "Votes, and votes alone, are the objective of this half-baked measure."

Declaring the bill "has no relation to making income meet outgo, but is intended to accomplish some weird social objective," Barbour continued:

"What this bill actually attempts is to climb upon that hard-ridden steed, "Share-the-Wealth," and ride him away while the demagogues who have pressed him sorely in the past are looking in the other direction.

"The bill should be laid away until the next session of congress when the budget for the ensuing year will be presented. Then, in the light of carefully appropriated federal moneys, we can determine how much revenue will be needed to operate.

"Taxes can be levied deliberately as a true revenue measure. Any other program is not good business and is not good government."

One change made by the house against the President's wishes involved corporations' gifts to charities. Mr. Roosevelt was firmly against letting corporations deduct from their taxable income any gifts to charity. Just as firmly the house voted to let them deduct up to 5 per cent of their incomes.

O'Mahoney Has a Scheme to Revive Objectives of NRA

NOT to be dismayed by the death of NRA, Senator J. C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming thinks the objectives of that contraption, high labor standards and fair competition, can be realized, and for that purpose he has drawn up a measure for the regulation of all national commerce by licensing business.

The senator, who is a lawyer, carefully avoided the phrase "interstate commerce." He proposed to define "commerce among the states" in the language of the leading decisions of the Supreme court.

Japanese Emperor "Insulted" By an American Caricature

JAPANESE consider their emperor a sacred personage, and consequently there was deep resentment in the island empire when Vanity Fair, an American magazine, printed a caricature of Hirohito. That issue of the magazine was banned in Japan because the picture was "considered insulting to the Japanese imperial house and if circulated in Japan might disturb public peace." More than that, Ambassador Hirosi Saito interrupted his vacation in New England and hurried to Washington to prepare a report on the affair and receive instructions from Tokyo. There was uncertainty as to whether he would make a formal protest or merely take up the matter directly with the magazine's editors.

Ambassador Saito

One State department spokesman said Japanese officials realized that the American government had no control over the press, but cable dispatches said Japanese newspapers criticized their embassy here for alleged failure to see that "such indignities" were not published.

The dispatches also reported that the Japanese home and foreign office officials characterized the caricature as "terrible." It showed the emperor pulling an old-fashioned jinriksha in which reposed the Nobel peace prize.

Frank Crowninshield, editor of Vanity Fair, said this caricature, like the many others run in the magazine, was meant to be merely jocose.

Huge Sum Is Allotted for American Business Census

NEARLY $8,000,000—$7,784,000, to be exact—has been allotted from the work relief funds by President Roosevelt for a census of American business. The census bureau asked and received this after it had been allotted $293,000 for a survey of retail trade. The business work is to begin at once, and the canvass will start on January 2. According to the official announcement, it will cover "all business activities with the exception of agriculture and manufacturing industries, and will furnish information of importance to the federal government, to business and to labor." The headquarters will be in Philadelphia.

The aim of the census, the officials said, "is to secure basic information relating to the number of operating units, employment, pay rolls, receipts and other business data for all business enterprises."

Necessarily, the census will give temporary employment to a large number of canvassers.

Rexford G. Tugwell, head of the resettlement administration, asked for a second allotment to develop unproductive land withdrawn from cultivation. He wanted $10,381,310 for eight tracts in seven states, and estimated that their development as hunting, fishing and camping preserves would provide 6,731 jobs lasting from 15 to 23 days. These projects are in Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota, Mississippi, New York, Georgia and Connecticut.

League Delays Settlement of Italo-Ethiopian Quarrel

CAPT. ANTHONY EDEN, British minister for League of Nations affairs, was exceedingly busy in Geneva trying to find a way to avert war between Italy and Ethiopia. He was aided and abetted by Premier Laval of France and together they evolved a plan for procedure by the league council which appeared promising, until it was communicated to Premier Mussolini. Then Baron Aloisi, Italian delegate, announced the Eden-Laval formula was "entirely unacceptable." However, hope was not abandoned for there was a chance that modifications could be made that would satisfy the demands of the Italians.

Anthony Eden

The league council finally, in a brief public session, set aside Ethiopia's demand for immediate action and agreed to undertake a general examination of the whole matter a month hence. It provided for resumption of arbitration of the clash at Ualual, stipulating that the arbitrators should not attempt to pass on the ownership of the territory on which the clash occurred—which is the root of the matter.

The arbitrators must finish their work or abandon it before September 1. The two disputants are to report the result to the council by September 4.

Emperor Haile Selassie met his chieftains in council at Addis Ababa and they told him it might be now too late to prevent war for their tens of thousands of fighters were eager for hostilities to begin and could hardly be restrained. The emperor, however, sought to hold the chiefs back.

British Parliament Gives India a New Government

GREATER freedom for the 350,000,000 inhabitants of India under a new form of government is provided by the India bill finally enacted by the British parliament and approved by the king. The measure was the bulkiest ever passed by parliament, and its preparation took eight years.

The law sets up an all-India federated parliament, linked with eleven British Indian states with their own subordinate legislatures and such native states as decide to come in. It separates Burma and Assam from India and gives them also a large measure of self-government.

Pensions of Spanish War Veterans Are Now Restored

PASSAGE of the bill to restore $46,000,000 of Spanish war veterans' pensions was completed when the senate accepted the house measure, the only opposing vote being cast by Senator Hastings of Delaware. This nullifies the various adjustments made by the President for the purpose of economy to carry out the party pledge of a reduction of at least 25 per cent in the cost of administration of the federal government.

Germany Asks Punishment of Attackers on the Bremen

GERMANY'S diplomatic note concerning the Communist attack on the liner Bremen in the port of New York took the form of a request that the offenders be punished but asked for no apology. Acting Secretary of State William Phillips, in his reply handed to the German charge d'Affaires, Dr. Rudolf Leitner, told briefly the efforts of the New York police to guard the vessel and to subdue the mob, and pointed out that some of those who took part in the attack were arrested. The German note said the incident constituted an insult to Germany.

In his press conference President Roosevelt declined to comment on the affair. Asked about the protest of Jewish organizations against the German government's religious attitude, the President intimated that the administration's view was fully expressed by Mr. Phillips' reply in which he expressed sympathy for anyone who was denied religious liberty.

Goebbels Insists on War on All "Enemies" of Nazidom

NOTWITHSTANDING warnings by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht and other sane Germans, some of the Nazi leaders insist on pushing to further extremes the war on Jews and Catholics. For instance, Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, in a speech at Essen announced drastic action against all "enemies" of the Nazi state—Jews, Catholics, the foreign press and the Stalheim war veterans. He predicted these important developments:

Paul Goebbels

1. Suppression of the Catholic press and intensification of the Nazi campaign against all Catholic opponents of the third reich.

2. Nationwide dissolution of the Stahlheim.

3. An official ban in near future on marriages between Jews and Aryans.

Goebbels linked closely the foreign press and the Jews.

"We have suffered the arrogance of the Jews with the patience of a sheep during the last two years," he said. "That the foreign press take up the defense of the Jews proves merely Judah's internationalism."

Death of Frederick Gillette, Former Speaker of the House

FREDERICK H. GILLETT, who represented Massachusetts in the house for many years, for six years was speaker, and thereafter served as United States senator, died in Springfield, Mass., at the age of eighty-three. Able, dignified and unfailingly courteous, Mr. Gillett was highly esteemed by his fellow congressmen, whatever their party affiliation. In his home town he was known as a politician who said little and did much.

Frank H. Hitchcock, publisher of the Daily Citizen of Tucson, Ariz., succumbed to pneumonia after several months of ill health. Prominent in Republican party politics all his mature life, Mr. Hitchcock managed Taft's Presidential campaign in 1908 both before and after the convention and was postmaster general in the Taft cabinet. For years he was actively interested in the progress of aviation.

Secretary Swanson Tells Plans for New Naval Bases

JAPAN will probably have another cause for complaint against the United States. Secretary of the Navy Swanson has announced that strongly fortified naval bases will be established in the Pacific ocean upon the expiration of the naval limitation treaties on January 1, 1937. He said he considered the creation of naval stepping stones in the Pacific an inevitable result of the treaties' expiration. He revealed that the navy long has given consideration to Pacific fortification problems and that impetus had been given to the study since Japan's abrogation of the naval treaties.

Sec'y Swanson

The necessity for adequate bases in the Pacific was demonstrated forcibly last May during the annual fleet maneuvers off Hawaii and the Aleutian islands. According to reports, the navy high command in a report of the lessons learned in the exercises strongly recommended an Aleutian islands base.

The United States naval bases are few and far between as against those of Japan and Great Britain, which lie along the principal courses of English and Japanese traffic lines.

Law Is Enacted That Insures Promotion for Many Officers

CONGRESS has passed and the President has signed a bill which assures promotion in the near future for about 5,000 army officers. It accelerates the advancement of commissioned officers below the grade of colonel and takes effect September 1.

The act increases the number of colonels by 158, the number of lieutenant colonels by 364, and the number of majors by 890. More than 1,000 second lieutenants will be advanced immediately to the rank of first lieutenant and 1,769 first lieutenants will become captains. In all, 4,918 officers will receive immediate promotion.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Milroy—An artesian well which spouts 23 gallons a minute was struck on a farm four miles south of here. Water came in at a depth of 268 feet.

Hastings—Black rust will cause about 50 per cent damage to the spring wheat crop around here, but barley and oats are near normal, according to the county agent.

Robbinsdale—Voters approved the issuing of $125,000 in bonds for a junior-senior high school with the largest vote ever cast at a Robbinsdale school election. The vote was 649 to 268.

Madison—A tunnelling project to improve Madison's municipal heat mains has been submitted to the works progress administration. It calls for a $7,000 federal grant to pay labor costs on the $17,000 project.

Austin—The city of Austin has agreed to purchase the natural gas distributing system of the Interstate Power Co. here for $162,500. The contract was signed and the city will take passession of the system October 1.

Cokato—Ed and Theodore Bergren of Saskatchewan, Canada, saw their brother, Julius, of Kalispell, Montana, for the first time in 27 years when the three came here to attend the funeral of their mother, Mrs. Mary Bergren.

International Falls—Killer bears have destroyed more than $3,000 worth of livestock in Koochiching county alone as 225 sheep, 15 stands of bees, a mare and a bull calf have fallen victim to the prowlers. R. C. Shaw, county agent, appealed to the state for permission to kill the bears where they threaten livestock.

St. Paul—While it may require a little time for them to develop into legal size, fingerlings planted in lakes and streams of the state outnumber last year's scouts by 239,000,000. With about 4,000,000 more of the tiny fish to be distributed, the state's program calls for planting 633,000,000 fingerlings this year, compared to 394,000,000 in 1934.

Duluth—For the quarter ending July 1, there were shipped from state trust fund mines 1,313,129 tons of iron ore for which the operating companies paid into the state treasury the sum of $353,257.27 for royalty and rentals, according to F. A. Wildes, director of the division of lands and minerals, Minnesota department of conservation.

Camp Ripley — Eighty applicants for state highway patrol jobs entered Camp Ripley to learn about crime, jiu jitsu, Emily Post and the king's English. The selected applicants will take a three-months training course at the end of which 33 of the 80 will be appointed to the patrol by Chief John P. Arnoldy. The new appointments will bring the patrol strength to 100 men as stipulated by the last legislature which also increased the patrol's police powers.

St. Paul—A 10-day duck season for Minnesota this year. The state's water fowl hunting regulations will parallel the recent federal edict, Conservation Commissioner E. V. Willard said, with 30 days shooting between October 29 and November 21. Federal regulations will curtail shooting between 7 a. m. and 4 p. m. daily, as compared with sunrise and sunset shooting last year The bag and possession limit is limited to 20 birds daily, with no species prescriptions.

Minneapolis—Approximately $11,000,000 in state aid to Minnesota public schools was distributed at the annual meeting of the state board of education and the board also is expected to authorize the distribution of $215,000 of federal funds for vocational education and training of teachers of agricultural, trade, industrial and home economics courses. State funds totaling $138,000 also will be approved as aid for school districts which have a large portion of property paying gross income taxes and therefore not producing returns from local taxation.

Faribault—Details of the expanded soil erosion control program for Minnesota were announced by H. H. Bennett, chief of the soil conservation service at Washington. To cost $228,888, allocated for the purpose from works program funds, the plan calls for a new demonstration project in Rice county and continuation of three existing projects in Winona, Houston and parts of Mower and Fillmore counties. The new project will cover about 20,000 acres along Prairie creek near Faribault. Actual work on these projects include terracing, construction of check-dams for gully control, sloping and revegetation of gully banks, construction of diversion ditches and other devices for controlling excess water.

Detroit Lakes—An increase of $18,000 in the Becker county tax levy was made by commissioners. While the poor fund decreased $2,000, the levy rose $121,000 to $139,000 for 1936.

St. Paul—A program for the construction of nearly 700 miles of trunk highways in Minnesota during the coming year, involving approximately $6,300,000, half of which will be provided by the federal government, has been approved. A list of additional projects, to cost about $500,000, is awaiting the federal O. K.

WASHINGTON DIGEST

National Topics Interpreted

BY WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D.C.

Too Much Red Tape

Washington.—One of the oldest and perhaps the most constant of all complaints about the federal government at Washington has been the tendency toward bureaucratic control. Bureaucratic control, simmered down, is red tape; it is attempted management of even personal affairs by a governmental agency, and it is naturally and obviously repulsive to the average American. It was a condition thoroughly to be criticized in Mr. Hoover's administration when there were boards, bureaus, and commissions everywhere. It is even worse now, I believe, with all of the New Deal's alphabetic soup agencies scattered hither and yon in execution of various New Deal experiments and theories.

All of this constitutes a prelude to what appears to me to be a most flagrant attempt by bureaucrats to manage private affairs. I refer to an order issued the other day by the federal communications commission under which it has asserted a jurisdiction which I cannot believe congress ever intended it should have. Further, the asserted jurisdiction which the commission is seeking to exercise goes far beyond anything which might be made the basis of complaint solely because it is bureaucratic. It has reached into the field of commercial enterprise in a manner which, without a doubt, will have the effect of covering invention and experiment in industry with a destructive frost bite—if the commission is allowed to get away with it.

The facts involved are these: The American Telephone and Telegraph company, which is spending millions of dollars annually in scientific research to improve our system of communications such as the telephone, the telegraph, and the radio, lately has perfected what is technically known as the coaxial cable. This cable is revolutionary. It holds the possibility of transmission of 240 telephonic conversations simultaneously over a single pair of wires. It is not commercially complete in all of its phases. Like every organization of sound judgment, the A. T. & T. wants to iron out weaknesses and imperfections through a period of experimental operation.

FCC Enters Picture

Here is where the federal communications commission enters the picture. As a courtesy, purely, the A. T. & T. submitted its plan for experimentation to the communications agency, saying as it did so that the commission did not have jurisdiction but that in the development of such a revolutionary invention the corporation was advising the commission of its plans and suggested that if the commission thought it had jurisdiction, it could issue an experimental license covering the work. In all of this it is to be remembered that the communications commission has jurisdiction over rates, regulations, and practices of the wire, telephone and radio companies.

It seems that some bright young men in the communications commission immediately conceived the idea of having that group take jurisdiction when legal authorities tell me there is nothing in the law giving them that authority. The story I get around the commission lobbies is that the A. T. & T. would not have objected to having the commission exercise what it believed its right to be in granting a license for the experiment but when the order emerged from the secret chamber of the commission, it carried in it a provision which said that the commission could withdraw its approval and nullify the permission granted on 10 days' notice as it saw fit.

Suffice to say that this provision together with several other technical phases of the circumstances was enough to arouse the ire of the business men concerned. They are not only disgusted. They are downright sore. It is one of those things that politicians, undertrained in science, attempt to do that cause practical people to lose faith in their government.

Fight of Vital Interest

If it were simply a fight between the A. T. & T. and the commission that is involved, the situation would hold no interest at all for me as a Washington writer. But, as I said above, it goes much further. I am told that some officials of the A. T. & T. are so dissatisfied with the attitude of the commission in this instance that they are ready, even anxious, to withdraw their application and decline to proceed with this experiment which ultimately is going to mean enormous changes in telephonic and telegraphic contact between cities located great distances apart. The A. T. & T. engineers have been working on this problem some six or seven years. They proposed to build 100 miles of cable by connecting New York and Philadelphia. It had very little of the commercial in it. They wanted to try out transmission of television images for rebroadcast by radio. They wanted to perfect further the transmission of photographs by wire and they were desirous as well of determining whether they had discovered all of the potentialities of the new invention. All of the expenses—some six hundred thousand dollars—was to be paid from surplus funds of the corporation.

It takes no stretch of the imagination to realize that if the A. T. & T. backed away from the program it has laid out and refused to spend more money in perfecting its invention and declined to attempt to put it into commercial use for the benefit of the country as a whole, the country, that is you and I, would suffer. We would be denied advantages developed by science and made available virtually as a national benefit.

I do not know what the end will be. It is not at a stage wherein a forecast is possible. But the principle of the commission's action, whether it be put forward under Democratic or Republican administration, remains exactly the same. It should not be tolerated and if the communications commission persists in its efforts to expand its control, its usefulness certainly is at an end. Hitherto, the communications commission has had a very satisfactory relationship with business. I have heard dozens of executives from communications corporations say they were willing to forgive and generally overlook ignorance piled up in the commission by political appointments in several spots. They wanted to cooperate but it is the opinion of more than just myself among Washington observers that this sort of thing does not contribute to good government.

Now, as to Duck Hunting

Duck hunters will have only 30 days for shooting this fall in accordance with the most rigid regulations in the history of American game hunting. This is the result of a determination by the federal government under an act of congress to give migratory wild fowl an opportunity to increase in numbers. In explaining the government's action which was made the subject of a proclamation by President Roosevelt, J. N. (Ding) Darling, chief of the biological survey and an internationally known cartoonist, declared that unless the shooting of ducks and other wild fowl is restricted it is only a question of time until none of them remain.

It is assumed that hunters will be interested first in the period during which they may shoot ducks, geese, brant, or jacksnipe. The season will open in northern states October 21 and will close November 19. In the southern states the season will run from November 20 to December 19.

For the information of hunters there is set out below the states included in the northern area where hunting may be done between October 21 and November 19:

Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, Idaho, Utah, Washington, Oregon, and Nevada.

The southern states listed and in which hunting may occur from November to December 19 follows:

New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, Tennessee, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and California.

Regulations issued by the biological survey, according to Mr. Darling, are based on the necessity of having a net annual increase of migratory birds left over at the end of each shooting season until the present depleted population of waterfowl is restored to something like normal. This year's rigid restrictions, he explained, follow a period of approximately thirty-five years during which the kill of wild fowl has exceeded the increase from breeding.

To give an idea of how thoroughly the wild fowl are to be protected, the new regulations prohibit shooting over what is known as baited water or land—that is, land or water on which feed has been scattered as an inducement for the birds to stop their flight. Another thing ruled out in this effort to protect the water fowl is the live decoy. This has always been the most effective method for luring wild fowl from the air. None will be allowed hereafter.

The regulations restrict shooting to the hours between 7 a. m. and 4 p. m., a course taken in order to permit birds in flight an opportunity to feed without being subjected to pot shots. Automatic and repeating shot guns will be restricted to a limit of three shells for their chambers and no shot guns larger than a No. 10 gauge will be permitted.

Mr. Darling who has gained a reputation as an enthusiast for game conservation, relinquished his work as a cartoonist in order to carry out his ideals. It has taken him some months to work out a program but he feels his efforts have been worth while.

OLD PORT OF ROME REVEALS ITS PAST

Excavators at Ostia Bare Many Tombs and Houses.

Rome.—The excavations being conducted at Ostia, the ancient port of Rome, are beginning to rival, at least in popular fancy, those at Herculaneum and Pompeii. While the two Graeco-Roman cities of the Neapolitan Campania were almost entirely dedicated to leisure and elegant life, Ostia thrived with commercial life and its people were principally manufacturers, merchants, small capitalists, clerks and sailors.

"It was a population always on the move and alert," says the Agenzia d'Italia of Rome, "and having dealings with merchants and brokers and travelers coming from every part of the ancient world. This explains Ostia's appearance, very different from Pompeii, with its large number of 'insulae,' which in ancient Rome were the type of houses used by the lower and middle classes.

Ancient Tombs Unearthed.

"The discovery made a few days ago in the excavations along the southern side of Ostia, near the new 'motor road' going to the Roman Lido, will attract especially the attention of archeologists. It consists of a mass of tombs, some of which seem to go as far back as the epoch of Augustus and appear to be very singular in their type and structure. These excavations were made on an area of about 100 meters on one side and 150 on the other.

"A road, Roman paved, shows the beginning of the newly explored area, passing along two rows of buildings recently excavated. A little further on are some stairs at the end of which is a square showing on the left side the molding of a stone monument, on a quadrangular basis, almost five meters high. It is one of the most characteristic Roman tombs of the imperial epoch, of a style reserved for wealthy families.

"In the central part of the area excavated, both on the right and on the left, are cubicles, nearly all built with curved vaults, with niches of various sizes cut into the walls.

Many Fine Pictures.

"On the walls are remarkable paintings and stuccos. One picture is three meters wide and two meters high and represents a lion devouring the head of an ox.

"Painted under the central screen is another representing a crocodile, a boat with two pigmies rowing, also two ducks, one with a pigmy riding upon its back.

"Another picture, in a niche, represents a woman sitting in front of a small table and a human figure with wings. On the right are a peacock and some other birds and on the small vault a bird looking very much like a crane.

"These pictures are astonishingly like those of the Empress Lina's 'ninfeum' at Saxa Rubra. In a cubicle, enclosed in an urn, are many animal bones, most probably sheep bones, belonging presumably to animals sacrified according to pagan rites. Every tomb is covered with inscriptions containing the names of the dead."

Globe-Circling Trip in Two Weeks Soon a Fact

Chicago.—A globe-circling journey in 15 days will soon be a reality as a projected trans-Pacific air service nears establishment, says a bulletin issued by United Air Lines.

It will be possible to leave the Pacific coast, for example, by air and be back home in 15 days, including a steamer crossing of the Atlantic, the only section of the trip not made by air. This remarkably fast time for a world tour will be speeded up even more when trans-Atlantic service is developed.

The schedule, based on the proposed Pan-American trans-Pacific air passenger trip, calls for the following itinerary: California to Manila by air, three days; Manila to Singapore by air, one day; Singapore to Amsterdam by air, five days; Amsterdam to Paris by air, two hours; Paris to La Havre by train, three hours; La Havre to New York by steamer, four and one-half days; New York to California by United Air Lines' overnight plane.

Thus Jules Verne's famed fiction plan of "Around the World in 80 Days," which was a sensation in 1872, becomes merely a leisurely sojourn around the globe.

Indian Songs Contribute to the Music of America

Omaha.—The folk songs of the American Indian represent an almost untapped reservoir for modern American music, according to Thurlow Lieurance, composer.

Lieurance, who wrote many Indian lyrics, including the popular "Waters of Minnetonka," believes that the traditional music of the Indian one day will provide an important background for developments in modern compositions.

"Indian music still has much to offer," he said. "It is of a type that can be worked over and adapted for use of almost any musical group."

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

At Westbury, L. I., many persons believed that the big, old-fashioned mansion that for years has stood hard by the Meadow Brook Hunt club, was haunted. Known as Phoenix Lodge, it was once the home of the eccentric multimillionaire, Jacques Lebaudy, son of the "sugar king" of France. Back in 1908, Lebaudy, who styled himself "Emperor of the Sahara," led an expedition into Africa to claim 3,500,000 acres of desert together with what he called, "the most valuable mines in the world." The adventure lasted just seven months. Then Lebaudy and his "empress" came to America and took up their abode in Phoenix Lodge. In the 50 rooms he installed costly furniture and tapestry, and had the 250-acre estate laid out in such beautiful formal gardens that it became the show place of Long Island. Incidentally, the French government had to send a cruiser to bring back Lebaudy's "subjects."

* * *

Ten years passed. Then came the happening that laid the foundation for the ghost story which caused the timid to whistle and hurry when they passed Phoenix Lodge at night. Though she had unlimited wealth and was living in a mansion finer than many a famed palace of old, Mrs. Lebaudy evidently wasn't happy. The proof lies in the fact that one night, she shot the "Emperor of the Sahara." She alleged that he had beaten her and some time later, she was acquitted by a jury on her plea of self-defense. Then she went back to France and Phoenix Lodge fell not only into disrepair but also into disrepute. Weeds choked the gardens; the tapestries rotted—and there were stories of mysterious lights and noises.

Eventually, government agents—G men are not superstitious, it seems—decided it might be well to look into these tales. So they kept watch on the decadent mansion for some time. Then they made a raid and captured, not a sheeted wraith, but a still, capable of turning out 1,000 gallons of alcohol a day and so modern that it required merely a single attendant. And now Phoenix Lodge is merely an old house where there was a shooting.

Maybe you've heard of Harold Pfleger, who, since last November, has had 14 blood transfusions. That fourteen-year-old's fight for life has been grim business indeed. But he has refused to take it that way. So the doctors and nurses of New York hospital are strong for the cheerful, game youngster—so strong indeed that they desired to do something more for him than called for in the daily routine. Questioning developed the fact that the one thing in all the world he wanted was a dog. As a matter of fact, he had even picked out a name, Terry, for the dog he hoped some day to own.

* * *

In a short time, Harold's wish reached the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. It came at just the right moment, too, because there was waiting at the animal hospital at Avenue A and Twenty-third street, a dog that needed a boy—a stray wire-haired fox terrier with a tan face and white whiskers. The dog wasn't transferred to Harold—that couldn't be done because of hospital rules—so his brother acted as his representative. Then with Terry, the brother went up to New York hospital.

* * *

Harold was waiting. His bed is five floors above the street, but those doctors and nurses pushed it close to the window and he could see his brother and his dog walking slowly up and down on the sidewalk below. Every afternoon, there is that same parade. Maybe it was that last transfusion and maybe it was the dog. At any rate, a telephone message to the hospital reveals the fact that in a very short time now Harold will be well enough to go home.

Ohio to Pay for Horses Morgan Stole in 1864

Columbus, Ohio.—Seventy-one years after General Morgan and his Confederate raiders entered southern Ohio and carried off provisions and other booty, the state of Ohio has acquiesced in a claim against his troopers.

The legislature has agreed to pay a claim of $600 occasioned by the theft of some horses by Morgan and his men during the war between the states.

Unless Governor Davey vetoes the item, Leoda Burke Oyler, of Cincinnati, will receive a check for $600 from the state of Ohio.

The claim was filed with the state many, many years ago. But each time it came up it was shunted aside, although the federal government sent the state a check years ago to meet the obligation.

Too Tough to Die, Is Boast of Town

Tombstone, Ariz. — Tombstone, the town that proudly describes itself as "the town that was too tough to die," is nothing if not foresighted, despite accusations that it is living in its glamorous past.

Members of the Tombstone American Legion post will march in the grand parade at the National Legion convention in St. Louis next September, bearing banners, "Tombstone, 1975 Convention City."

That, of course, is only 40 years in the future.

Can Years of Happy Married Companionship Wipe Out the Memory of Early Love "Slip"?

"When I was away visiting my sister-in-law in another city recently I had occasion to see a rather unusual little play that opened there. It was called 'The Perfect Marriage,' and showed two people who had been married fifty years who were beloved by everybody and really believed themselves to be an example of a perfect marriage.

"Lovers over seventy, they were. And in reviewing the years they had spent together theirs seemed really to be an example of what all who start out on a honeymoon hope their marriage will be.

"And then, by one of those quirks of circumstances that take place in plays, like the one pulled stitch that starts to unravel a whole job of knitting, there is unraveled the story of an extra-marital 'affair' on the part of both. Both the husband and the wife of this perfect marriage once had a lover. Neither find out until now, after fifty years of 'ideal' marriage. When they do the revelation nearly upsets their sturdy little citadel of love—but not quite. With the philosophy of their years they forgive each other, and—live happily ever afterward.

"Now we hear a good deal in real life, too, of forgiveness of infidelity, and at a more hot-blooded age than that of the golden-wedding couple. Can you understand it? I pride myself on being modern, and all that, but I think this is a question of human values that does not change with the age. What do you say?"

Broadminded, and with the understanding of human nature that is her marked characteristic, the famous writer to whom this query was addressed thus answers it:

"I say this—the old saying: 'You can forgive—but not forget!' Though marriage may, indeed many marriages have survived discovery of infidelity on one or both sides, in my opinion there is always something killed. The fabric of marriage may be patched up, but the warp and woof and soul of the thing must surely carry the mark.

"On the other hand, to my mind, it is not at all beyond understanding, as my correspondent suggests, how such a couple, or either one, can be willing to 'take back' the unfaithful one, or make the effort to forgive.

"While I certainly do not minimize the hurt, the wrench, the impulse to the contrary that would naturally be involved in continuing to live with a husband or wife who has been discovered unfaithful, the richer and the happier the marriage has been the more possible it is to understand such a forgiveness. For a really true marriage is a house of many mansions. Beside the physical love there is the understanding, the companionship, with which, as I like to say, one never walks alone. In that companionship there is mutual suffering, mutual struggle, mutual joy—mutual understanding. With people of quality—the human, not the social kind—those are things to make life rich indeed. With such people, you may say, infidelity does not happen. And yet, it has been known to. And in such a case forgiveness, while a bitter enough cup—and while the drink can never be the same as when it was taken at the spring of untainted belief—is, nevertheless, understandable."

PREHISTORIC "FACTORY"

A site where prehistoric man played on the beach perhaps 100,000 years or more ago has been discovered by C. van Riet Lowe, the South African archeologist. Between great clumps of rock, which were evidently washed by the sea countless years ago, although now they stand half a mile inland, is a vast sand dune which has hardened with the passing of time. This dune has been scoured by rain water running down the hillside and is crumbling away, exposing valuable evidence of how man lived in the Stone age days. Mr. Van Riet Lowe picked up dozens of unfinished stone axes. He believes this was a factory site of prehistoric man. Here, apparently, he came to the beach for his waterworn stones, knocked them into some semblance of the shape he desired and discarded those which chipped badly. The site was littered with imperfect specimens of the stones.

BARGAIN SALE OF TAXES OPENS IN COUNTY MONDAY

Numerous Residents Taking Advantage of Discounts Now Offered

Beginning Monday of this week, numerous Pennington county residents are taking advantage of what may be the final opportunity to pay delinquent taxes at bargain rates. Lands delinquent since 1930 and prior years are being offered for redemption and sale at discount figures.

The sale, authorized by the last legislature, will perhaps be the last of its kind to be offered because by the time another legislature meets most of the tax delinquent land will have become the property of the state and there will be no basis for any further bargain sales.

Emphasis is being placed on redemption of property by present owners rather than purchases by non-owners. Purchasers will not be able to acquire title to the lands they buy for a year and the present owners may redeem their property any time during the year. The bargain rates do not apply to taxes delinquent only since 1930 or subsequent years.

COUNTY SCHOOLS ALLOTTED $9,230 FROM INCOME TAX

To Receive $5 Each for 1,846 Pupils Between Ages of 8 and 16

Pennington county school districts will receive $9,230 in the distribution of $2,020,270 from the income tax school fund in state aid to all school districts in Minnesota, it was announced in St. Paul last Thursday by Dr. John G. Rockwell, state commissioner of education.

Distribution is based on a rate of $5 for every child in the county of compulsory school age, between the ages of 8 and 16. There are 1,846 children of school age in Pennington county.

This is the third distribution to the schools from income tax payments under the 1933 law, which requires each district receiving an allotment to apply it on the retirement of bonded indebtedness, after which the money may be used for current expenses.

Payments to be received by neighboring counties, include Marshall, $15,250; Clearwater, $8,645; Beltrami, $20,125; and Polk, $28,080.

Drivers License Must be Carried, Says Eklund

Adolf Eklund, clerk of court, issued a reminder today to vacationists and others that driving a car while wearing a bathing suit or sports clothes does not excuse one for not having his driver's license in his or her possession as required by the driver's license law. Keeping this in mind and never getting back of the wheel of a car unless one can produce his driver's license, immediately, if necessary, may save annoyance and inconvenience. He also calls attention to the fact that a resident of another state holding a visitor's permit and driving a car bearing the license plates of another state is not obliged to have a Minnesota Driver's license. However, that visitor must have a Minnesota driver's license should he drive any car bearing Minnesota license plates.

VILLAGE BRIEFS

Robert O'Leary of Edmonton, Can., came last week for a visit at the home of his aunt, Mrs. Henry Sande.

Henry Sande returned Tuesday evening from a trip to the Twin Cities. He purchased a car there and drove it back.

Note:—All rural correspondence notes should be in this office not later than Tuesday morning hereafter in order to insure publication.

Misses Helga and Amanda Kalland have returned from their vacation trip to Baudette, and the former is again in charge of the local central office.

After visiting at home of her father, Mike Fricker, for a time Mr. and Mrs. Milton Schantzen left last week for their home at Minneapolis.

M. E. Church

The Ladies Aid of the M. E. Church will be entertained by a group of four ladies Friday afternoon, Aug. 23, at the church. Everybody welcome.

MANY HORSES DIE OF SLEEPING SICKNESS

A strange and infectious disease, encephalomyelitis, which inflames the brain and spinal cord of animals, causing collapse and death, is believed to be responsible for death of more than a hundred horses recently in Canada. The disease is similar to the sleeping sickness of human beings. Some cases have been reported on this side of the line, and a couple cases believed to be the same ailment are under observation in this section. Horses yawn, become groggy, are unable to swallow normally, and lips are either very tight or very loose. As the malady advances, paralysis ensues in hind quarters, and the animal finally sinks into a coma which is followed by death. If detected in time, a serum is available that is effective in most cases, but early treatment is absolutely essential.

LONGREN AGAIN IS NAMED AS WHEAT GROUP PRESIDENT

Officers of Production Control Association Are Reelected

Officers of the Pennington County Wheat Production Control association were re-elected for the coming year at the annual meeting held Wednesday evening of last week in the farm bureau office.

Those named include Alfred Longren, president; Isaac E. Wilson, Hazel, vice president; R. M. Douglass, secretary; and R. J. Lund, treasurer. The allotment committee includes M.r Longren together with Ed Moren of Wylie and Anton Johnson of Hazel.

At the meeting a budget was approved for the coming year, and expenditures during the past year were approved. Contracts for the coming year are expected to be received by the end of the month, Mr. Douglass said, and rye as well as wheat will be included this year.

Farmer Dies Following Crash Near McIntosh

Melvin Wallace Pietz, 42-year-old farmer, was fatally injured Saturday when a binder he was riding was struck by a truck on highway No. 2 about two miles east of McIntosh. The injured man was taken to a hospital at Fosston and died Sunday. Coroner H. E. Nelson of Polk county said death resulted from a fractured skull caused by striking the pavement. He said no inquest will be held as the binder had no light on it. The binder, Pietz was riding to his home was struck by a truck driven by Olaf Nelson of Erskine.

LOCAL SCHOOL OPENS MONDAY, SEPT. 9TH

Five New Members on the Teaching Staff for Coming Term

At meeting of the school board this week, date for opening of the local school was set for Monday, September 9th. Contemplated absence of the school band, which plans to attend the Minnesota State Fair, is reason for setting the opening date a week later than a majority of other public schools thruout the state. The building has been completely renovated during recent weeks and everything is in readiness for opening.

Due to several resignations, there will be five new members on the teaching staff this year. Below is a list of the teachers, their home addresses, and name of the schools where they received training: Supt. Maynard R. Graham, Motley, Minn., U. of Minnesota; Prin. Bernice Anderson, Stephen, Minn.; H. S. Hal Widsten, Bemidji, Minn., U. of Minn., and Bemidji STC.; Ruth Onerheim, 7-8 grades, Madison, Minn., U. of Minn., and St. Olaf; Helen Morgan, 5-6 grades, Bemidji, Minn., Bemidji STC.; Ruth Bakke, 3-4 grades, Bemidji, Minn., Bemidji STC.; Dorothy Gunstad, St. Hilaire, Moorhead STC.

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH

While at the county fair at Wadena last week, where the parents operated a concession stand, the eighteen months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bud Beck was burned to death when an oil stove in their tent exploded and sprayed burning oil over the child and tent. Parents of the child, as well as Mr. Beck's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Beck, operated concession stands at the Pennington county fair. The latter and minor children have visited here at the Chas. Huff home since close of the fair in this county. Following burial of their child, Mr. and Mrs. Bud Beck returned here this week and the entire group left Wednesday for points in Iowa and adjoining states.

Mrs. E. D. Jensen returned Sunday after spending a few days at Minneapolis, and with friends at Cross Lake.

FOWLER CHECKING EXAMINER REPORT WITH CO. AUDITOR

H. L. Fowler, former county auditor, who was released from custody last Thursday afternoon following the furnishing of $3,000 bonds, conferred Tuesday morning with representatives of the state public examiner's office relative to various alleged shortages charged against him in their official report made public early last week.

It was reported that he made a satisfactory explanation of a number of items appearing in the portion of the report covering the current year.

The examiners delegated to County Auditor A. M. Senstad the duty of checking over earlier transactions with Mr. Fowler, and the two men were in conference yesterday.

FAREWELL PARTIES

A group of more than forty friends of Mrs. E. N. Reiersgord tendered her a farewell party Wednesday afternoon at the M. H. Jackson home. A delightful afternoon was spent, and a dainty luncheon was served. As a token of remembrance, Mrs. Reiersgord was presented with a rug.

Wednesday night, members of the band had a similar gathering at the school in honor of Mr. Reiersgord who had been instructor of the band since it first started about five years ago. Different members expressed their appreciation and thanks to their leader for his efforts in their behalf, and all joined in wishing him success in his new position at Fosston. At close of the festivities, the band presented Mr. Reiersgord a fine chair.

Miss Lilly M. Johnson returned last week from a trip with friends to Portland, Ore., and other western points. She is preparing to leave soon, with her mother and sister, to resume her work as supervisor in the city schools at Austin, Minn.

1935 MINNESOTA OPEN SEASONS FOR HUNTING ARE SET

Legal open seasons for the taking of ringnecked pheasants, Prairie chickens, bob-white quail and wild waterfowl were designated for 1935 by the Minnesota conservation commission in a meeting Friday in St. Paul. Orders issued by Erling Swenson, director of the division of game and fish, Minnesota state department of conservation, will regulate hunting of upland game birds. An executive order by Governor Floyd B. Olson will control hunting of wild waterfowl, state regulations to coincide with federal stipulations for this season.

The season on ruffed grouse, otherwise known as native partridge, will be closed during 1935 throughout the entire state. Similar closed seasons were also declared on mourning doves, upland plover and woodcock, by the commission, composed of John R. Foley, Wabash, chairman; Richard R. Bailey, Virginia, secretary; George W. Friedrich, St. Cloud, and R. J. Ahlstrom, Minneapolis.

Director Swenson warned hunters that ringnecked pheasant shooting will be allowed only afternoons during the open seasons with noon marking the opening of each days shooting and sunset each day bringing the shooting to a close. He also cautioned that only in certain specified counties is one hen pheasant permitted in the daily bag and two hen pheasants in the possession limit. No hunting is permitted in Ramsey county, Mr. Swenson pointed out.

In fourteen Minnesota counties, Kanabec, Pine, Carlton, Aitkin, Lake, St. Louis, Itasca, Koochiching, Beltrami, Lake of the Woods, Pennington, Marshall, Roseau and Kittson, it will be legal to take prairie chickens from noon September 21 to sunset September 29, inclusive. Time for taking will be from sunrise to sunset each day except that the season shall open at noon on the first day. Five birds are the daily bag limit and ten birds may be retained in possession.

Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Kies returned last week to their home at Chicago after visiting here at the home of her mother, Mrs. J. S. Roy, and with other relatives.

Because of inclement weather, the band concert and ice cream social which was to be held last Saturday evening was postponed until some later date.

FOR SALE—Monarch kitchen range in very good condition. Will sell cheap. E. N. Reiersgord, City.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Following regular meeting of the Business Mens' Club held Monday evening, a short social session was held in honor of E. N. Reiersgord, one of the charter members of the club, who leaves next week to reside at Fosston. Different members were called on for short talks by Ed. Johnson, who acted as toastmaster, and each responded with suitable remarks. Following this part of the program, Lester Olson, president of the club, presented Mr. Reiersgord with an appropriate token of remembrance from the Club. A "dutch lunch" was served later and cards were played.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Reiersgord and son, Tommy, motored Saturday to Aneta, N. D., and spent until Monday with Theo. Skatrud and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gunstad and children, Mary Lee and Billy, arrived here Friday from Pilot Point, Texas., and have spent the week visiting with his mother, brothers and sisters. They left yesterday and will visit with Mrs. Gunstad's mother at Guttenburg, and with other relatives in western Iowa while enroute home. Mr. Gunstad is publisher of the Post-Signal, a weekly newspaper at Pilot Point. This was his first visit back home in nearly thirteen years.

Mrs. Carl Johnson and daughters Eva and Lilly, accompanied by Mrs. B. E. Burkee and Helga Kalland motored Monday to Fargo and visited with relatives and friends.

Oscar Kolstad, who has been located at Duluth for several years, came up this week to spend a few days with his stepfather, John Forseen.

Donald and Mabel Patterson motored up Tuesday evening from Maple Lake and spent the evening at the home of their sister, Mrs. O. Gunstad. Mrs. Anna Patterson and Mabel, who have spent the summer at the lake, left yesterday with Donald to visit a short time at Duluth after which they return to their homes at Minneapolis.

Henry Olson, manager of the seed department of Land O' Lakes Creameries, Inc., at Thief River Falls, spent Tuesday evening here at the John Gunstad home and with other relatives.

Robert Collins and Frank Breneman are busy this week painting the Catholic school at Thief River Falls.

Sheriff, Arthur Rambeck was here Wednesday serving notices of expiration of time of redemption on owners and occupants of a number of pieces of property on which taxes have been delinquent for several years.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Jackson and son motored here Monday from Minot, N. D., for a visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Jackson, and with other relatives. They intend to visit briefly at the K. B. Johnson home at Lancaster, and at the L. Giese home at East Grand Forks before they return to Minot where Mr. Jackson holds down a good position as dispatcher for the Great Northern Railway Co.

Rev. and Mrs. M. Dahle, Manford and Grace Dahle are enjoying a short vacation at their summer cottage at Sauk Center.

Some complaint has been made about boys stealing apples at different places around town. Owners do not care so much about the apples, but they dislike having their trees broken after having all the work of bringing them to bearing age.

The creamery board met in regular monthly session Wednesday afternoon and checks are now ready for cream delivered during July.

Ed. Engh has traded his Dodge truck for another of same make but of larger capacity.

Exterior of Larson Bros. new store building has been painted the past week and now presents a very fine appearance. The new store is a fine improvement for that corner.

Nearly three inches of rain fell at Grand Forks early part of this week.

Arvid Dahlstrom, who has been employed at bricklaying at Grand Forks, returned home this week.

County Auditor A. M. Senstad was in the village for a short time Wednesday evening attending to business matters.

Mrs. Ed. Carlson and children came last wek from Morganville, Kansas, to spend a few weeks visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Patton.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bilden motored here Monday from Minneapolis to spend a few days at the home of his father, A. Bilden. They motored Tuesday to Winnipeg on a sight-seeing trip and returned the following day.

HAVE FAMILY RE-UNION

A very pleasant event occurred Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peterson in Wyandotte when all members of the Gunstad family gathered for a family re-union, the first of its kind for more than fifteen years. Those present were Mrs. A. H. Gunstad, Henry Gunstad, Mr. and Mrs. John Gunstad and family, Arthur Gunstad, Mr. and Mrs. O. Gunstad, Mr. and Mrs. Anton Johnson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peterson all of this community, and Mrs. O. Young and three children of Minneapolis, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gunstad and two children of Pilot Point, Texas, and Mrs. E. E. Lyon of St. Paul.

BLACK RIVER NEWS

Merriam Anderson left Saturday for Grantsburg, Wisc., where she will attend school.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lorentson and family of Thief River Falls visited Monday at the Felix Anderson home.

Donald Strom of Biwabic is employed at the home of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John Naplin.

Mrs. C. Kruse and Loretta left Sunday for Fargo for a visit at the O. Golden home.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Peterson and Muriel visited Sunday at the A. Swanson home.

Norma Bucklin returned Wednesday to Crookston after visiting relatives here. She leaves soon to attend a business college at Mankato for the coming school year.

Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Dysart and daughter, Bonnie, of Leoneth visited last week-end at the G. Lindquist home. They returned Sunday to Leoneth.

Mr. and Mrs. John Steiger are the happy parents of a daughter born Thursday, Aug. 15.

Anna and Edwin Rosette, accompanied by E. D. Jensen and son, Garmo, motored Sunday to Cross Lake and spent the day. Upon return, they were accompanied by Mrs. Jensen who had spent a few days at the H. Olson cottage at the lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Koidahl and children of Forbes, Minn., came Wednesday for a visit at the home of Mrs. Koidahl's mother, Mrs. Mons Swenson, and with other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Brink and son of St. Hilaire, visited Thursday evening at the Gunnard Lindquist home.

Miss Margaret Dahle, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. M. Dahle, left Sunday to enter Fairview Hospital at Minneapolis as a student nurse.

ELECT SUPERINTENDENT

At meeting of the board of education held Tuesday evening a score of applications, both personal and by letter, were considered for the position of superintendent left vacant by resignation of E. N. Reiersgord. After due consideration of all applications, the board elected Maynard S. Graham of Motley, Minn., to head the faculty for the coming year. Mr. Graham was graduated at the University of Minnesota and has had previous teaching experience as well as experience with conducting of bands. He is a married man, and plans to move here wtih his wife and infant daughter next week. Mr. Graham comes here well recommended and will, no doubt, carry on supervision of the school in the same efficient manner as has been done in the past.

Hal Widsten, son of Martin Widsten of Bemidji, was elected to fill the other vacant high school position. In addition to his other work, he will have charge of athletics the coming year.

A slow, drizzling rain which fell over this section fore part of the week, will delay threshing several days. As the grain is very dry and brittle, shocks became wet from top to bottom, and it will require several days of drying weather to again put them in condition for threshing.

25 Years Ago

A. J. Barsness of St. Cloud was elected principal of the local school for that year. With exception of two, all members of the teaching staff were new teachers at this school.

Miss Christine Skeie of this village, and Mr. Victor Lindholm of Highlanding, were married here August 21st at the home of the bride.

The school was kalsomined thruout and new floors laid in two rooms in preparation for opening of school.

Mrs. Charles Strom returned to her home at Spooner after visiting friends here.

John Forseen moved his shoe shop from the Killand building to the Pitkin general store.

Fifty-two patrons of the local creamery each received checks for over $50.00 for cream delivered during month of July that year.

Thirty-two bushels of No. 1 hard wheat per acre were realized from a field threshed at the K. O. Gigstad farm. This was considered a record both for yield and quality.

Patronize YOUR Creamery

Your home creamery deserves your most intensive co-operation. Built by the community to provide a better market for the main community product, it has always paid as much or more than other similar plants for butterfat.

A large volume of butter manufactured, means lower costs per pound, and better returns to butterfat producers. Boost your creamery and it will pay you big returns.

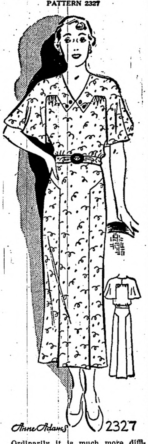
THIS EASY-TO-MAKE DESIGN IS POPULAR

PATTERN 2327



Ordinarily it is much more difficult for the heavier figure to present the same graciously feminine appearance as her slim sister achieves! But not when our stylist sets out to design a thoroughly feminine but neatly tailored afternoon frock! Witness the result. First see how trim the neck and skirt details are. Then, how simply feminine softness is gathered into the yoke. Now note the extremely simple cut of the yoke and cape and the graceful, flattering fall of the cape itself. If capes haven't come to your rescue before, you can make no better start than here and now! Sheer cotton or silk—as you like!

Pattern 2327 is available in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3⅞ yards 39 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to the Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth Street, New York City.

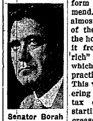
Senators Back Down on "Soaking" Small Incomes



Senator Borah

NOBODY liked the new tax bill that congress was working on, and the senate finance committee had hard work making up its mind as to the form it would recommend. First it altered almost every provision of the bill passed by the house and changed it from a "soak the rich" measure to one which would soak practically every one. This was done by lowering personal income tax exemptions and starting the surtax increases at $3,000 instead of $50,000. The latter feature was proposed by Senator La Follette and was adopted to keep him in line. Also, the inheritance taxes which President Roosevelt had asked for were eliminated.

Protests against increasing the taxes on little incomes came immediately, from senators, representatives and the country at large. Senators Borah of Idaho and Norris of Nebraska were among the "independents" who expressed their disapproval. Mr. Borah especially was vocal in opposition. He could not see the justice or the wisdom of the proposition.

"Families with these small incomes are now paying more than their proportionate share of taxes and at the same time are facing higher prices for food, clothes, fuel and rents," he said.

So the committee suddenly reversed itself abruptly, rejected the La Follette plan by a vote of 8 to 7, and for the time being at least saved the little incomes and perhaps a lot of house members who hope to be re-elected.

The bill which the committee voted to report contains new provisions to compensate for those eliminated from the house bill and the estimated revenue is only $1,000,000 less. This is divided in the senate bill as follows:

Graduated corporation income tax	$ 60,000,000
Corporation excess profits and capital stock taxes	65,000,000
Intercorporate dividend taxes	39,000,000
Increased estate taxes with related gift taxes	100,000,000
Increased surtaxes on incomes in excess of $1,000,000	5,000,000
Total	$269,000,000

The bill thus more closely follows the demands of President Roosevelt than the house measure, with the exception of inheritance taxes, which the senate committee eliminated. Even this action was offset by the increase in the existing estate and gift tax rates, expected to bring in $100,000,000.

This action by the senate committee probably means the adjournment of congress will be speeded up. The house is cleaning up its "must" legislation, the ways and means committee having voted to report favorably the Guffey coal bill which would set up a "little NRA" for the bituminous industry. It is generally believed this measure will not stand a test in the Supreme court, but the administration had demanded its enactment nevertheless.

How Social Security Pension System Works

WHEN the President's social security bill was finally enacted into law, the senate adopting the conference report already agreed to by the house, probably many thousands of men and women all over the country began figuring on the pensions they would receive under its terms. It is unlikely that one in a thousand has any clear idea of how the new program's pension system will work, so we reprint here a neat summary prepared by the Associated Press showing its operation as applied to "Bill Jones":

"Suppose young Bill is twenty when the law goes into effect and makes an average monthly salary of $100 until he is sixty-five. He will get a monthly pension, until his death, of $53.75.

"In detail, here is what will happen to him:

"In the calendar years 1937, 1938, and 1939 he will pay a salary tax of 1 per cent, or a total of $36 for the three years. In 1940, 1941, 1942 he will pay 1½ per cent, or $54. In 1943, 1944, and 1945 the tax will be 2 per cent, or $72. In 1946, 1947, and 1948 the tax will be 2½ per cent, or $90. From 1949 to 1981, inclusive, the tax will be 3 per cent, or a total of $1,188 for those 33 years.

"Thus, in 45 years, Bill Jones will have paid in $1,440. All the time his employer will have been matching his tax payments, so the total paid to the federal treasury will be $2,880.

"At sixty-five Bill Jones can expect to live perhaps 10 years more. If he does, he will get back $6,450.

"When Bill Jones dies this is what will happen:

"His average annual salary will be multiplied by the number of years he paid taxes. In other words, if he dies after he has paid taxes for 45 years, $1,200 will be multiplied by 45—giving a total of $54,000. Arbitrarily, the bill stipulates that Bill Jones' estate shall be entitled to 3½ per cent of that, or $1,890—less any amount he received in pensions before he died.

"If Jones dies before he gets back $1,890 in pensions, what he actually received is deducted from $1,890 and the remainder paid to his heirs. If he lives until he gets back all of the $1,890 and more, his heirs get nothing.

"If Jones should die before he reaches sixty-five, his heirs would be entitled to a payment of 3½ per cent of the total wages on which taxes had been paid.

"For instance, if he died after ten years, he would have paid taxes on $12,000. His heirs would be entitled to 3½ per cent of that, or $420."

Senator Clark of Missouri made a brave attempt to save private pension systems, but gave up when the promise was made that house and senate committees will try during the recess to work out a method of preserving such of these as are found worthy. The measure as passed provides for old age security; unemployment insurance, and for financial aid to dependent children, the blind, the crippled, and to public health agencies. It carries appropriations totaling $94,491,000 for the fiscal year 1936 as the government's share of the program. This sum does not include an authorized grant of $4,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, and $49,000,000 for each subsequent fiscal year to defray the cost of administering one project in the bill.

Farmers Organize Council to Protect Their Rights

FARMERS who believe that their individual rights are being encroached upon by the administration's agricultural policies are offered a chance to get together by the organization and incorporation in Chicago of the Farmers' Independent Council of America. Dan D. Casement, a farmer of Manhattan, Kan., is president of the body. Stanley F. Morse, South Caroline farmer and consulting agriculturist, is executive vice president and Chris J. Abbott, Nebraska stockman and farmer, and Clyde O. Patterson, Illinois Jersey breeder, were incorporators. Dr. Charles W. Burkett, agricultural authority of New York and formerly director of the Kansas agricultural experiment station, and L. G. Tolles, farmer and past master of the Connecticut State Grange, are other vice presidents of the council, and Dr. E. V. Wilcox, representative of the Country Gentleman, District of Columbia, is secretary-treasurer; Fred L. Crawford, Michigan congressman and farm owner; E. E. Dorsett, farmer and past master Pennsylvania State Grange, and Kurt Greenwald, farm manager and agricultural engineer, New York, are directors.

"To me there is but one issue, whether we are going to have a constitutional government or have a dictatorial regime," said Charles E. Collins, Colorado cattleman and president of the American National Live Stock association, regional vice president of the new organization.

G. O. P. Defeats New Dealers in Rhode Island Election

Chas. F. Risk

REPUBLICAN leaders throughout the country were immensely heartened—probably too much so—by the result of the by-election in the First district of Rhode Island. Charles F. Risk, Republican, and determined opponent of the New Deal, defeated Antonio Prince, Democrat, by nearly 13,000 votes, capturing the seat in congress which Francis B. Condon, Democrat, resigned to go on the State Supreme court. The reversal was so decisive that the Republicans hailed it as a clear indication that President Roosevelt would be defeated for re-election.

Representative B. H. Snell of New York, minority leader, made a speech about it in the house in which he said:

"This is the first time the people of any part of the country have had an opportunity to pass on the reckless and extravagant expenditures of the administration. They have passed upon it in a very decisive manner. The election shows the people are beginning to think. The handwriting is on the wall. From now on we will witness similar rejections by the citizenry of the New Deal program."

Hoover Demands Showdown From the Administration

FORMER PRESIDENT HERBERT HOOVER, traveling from California to New York, stopped in Chicago long enough to issue a challenge to the Roosevelt administration and a call on the President for a showdown as to his policy on changing the Constitution. He declared the American people have a right to know what alterations in the basic law the administration proposes to make.

"The time has come," he said, "when these full purposes should be disclosed. The people should now be told openly the specific words of the exact amendment that these gentlemen want so that the people can consider and themselves determine it. That is their right."

Grass Roots Movement Is Given Permanent Form

REPUBLICANS of the 10 Midwestern states that participated in the Grass Roots conference in Springfield, Ill., have made the Grass Roots' movement a permanent auxiliary of the party. Harrison E. Spengler of Iowa is its chairman, Mrs. Leslie Wheeler of Illinois the vice chairman, and Jo Ferguson of Oklahoma, the secretary. Michigan, Ohio and Kentucky, not represented at the Springfield meeting, have been invited to join in the movement.

Black's Methods in Probe Resented by Pat Hurley

P. J. Hurley

SENATOR HUGO BLACK of Alabama may bring out a lot of facts in his inquiry into lobbying, but his way of conducting the investigation is not winning him any credit. The house has all along felt that he was trying to bully it into accepting the utilities bill "death sentence" clause and has been correspondingly resentful. Various witnesses before the senate committee have felt, seemingly with reason, that they were being treated unfairly.

One of these witnesses who complained bitterly was Patrick J. Hurley, secretary of war in the Hoover administration. He testified that he had received $100,000 from the Associated Gas and Electric system in the last three years, but insisted he was paid for legal advice only and had done no lobbying. Hurley was not permitted to read a prepared statement, and Black's interjections and questions so angered the witness that he rose to his feet and shouted: "Everyone knows all you gentlemen are good prosecutors! Of course, you don't know what it is to be fair or just. You try to put words into a witness' mouth. Your questions are all on the type of the 'Why don't you stop beating your wife?' query."

Federal Penal Colony on Rat Islands Proposed

COL. C. A. SEOANE of the army signal corps has proposed a plan for the establishment of a federal penal colony on the Rat islands, off Alaska, and recommended it to the consideration of Attorney General Cummings. It would be so isolated that no guards would be required and the prisoners could be left to shift for themselves.

The four Rat islands, near the end of the Aleutian group, comprise 1,000 square miles—and are more than 1,000 miles from the Alaskan mainland, 2,000 miles from the nearest United States point, and more than 2,000 miles from Hawaii. Except for one or two fox ranches on each, they are uninhabited.

Banishment to the Rat islands "would mean a long good-by without hope of pardon, parole, or escape," Colonel Seoane said. "Therein lies the secret of what is believed would become an effective damper on the crime wave of today."

The islands, part of the public domain, are suitable for raising blue foxes, sheep, and goats, and for fishing. They are washed by the warm Japan current, seldom have snow and have an average temperature of 39 in winter and 54 in summer.

Nazi "Housecleaning" Has Hitler's Full Support

Adolf Hitler

ADOLF HITLER'S silence during the recently renewed Nazi warfare on Jews and Catholics led many to think the movement was being led by others. But Der Fuehrer emerged from his country residence to make a speech at Rosenheim in which he made it clear he was backing the current "housecleaning" to the limit. He declared the Nazi party would smash its opponents, continuing:

"Always stand to your flag, not only in good days but even more in the bad ones. Keep it up when the storm lashes and clouds the firmament."

Deep apprehension still prevails among Jews in Germany as to what the future has in store for them. After Count von Helldorf, Berlin police president, had forbidden individual action against Jews, Wilhelm Frick, minister of interior, announced:

"The Jewish question will slowly but surely be gotten rid of, as the Nazi program foresees."

Mussolini and Ethiopian Emperor Prepare for War

ENGLAND and France were still trying to find the way to avert war between Italy and Ethiopia, but Premier Mussolini of Italy was so skeptical that he ordered 75,000 more men to the colors. By the first of October he will have about a million men in uniform. Haile Selassie, the Ethiopian emperor, was reported to have sanctioned the concentration of 60,000 of his troops on Italy's east African frontiers. The chiefs, it is said, are finding it increasingly difficult to restrain their warriors from overt acts that would surely precipitate warfare.

A report from Addis Ababa said the emperor was ready to cede a portion of Ethiopia to Italy in return for loans from that country to develop Ethiopia's resources and the granting of a seaport, as was suggested some time ago by Capt. Anthony Eden of England

DIETARY HABITS NEED FOSTERING EARLY IN CHILD

Nothing is quite so important to health as food. The wellbeing of a child depends on it, and his future stamina will reflect nutritive discrepancies in babyhood.

The mother who thinks that there is time enough ahead for corrective diet is laboring under a traditional delusion that up until two years of age and sometimes longer, milk is the sum total of everything.

Milk is the warp and the woof of what it takes to get through life, and especially at its beginning. But it needs supplementing, because its chemistry is low in a few needed essentials and the child, set in his all-milk diet, resists other foods.

Doctors Prescribe Varied Foods.

Doctors long ago recognized the value of adding other foods to the diet of milk, early in babyhood, in order to offset future finicky appetites. Thus the infant of six weeks gets his cod-liver oil and orange juice or tomato juice; a little later a spoonful or two of prepared vegetable juice or even the strained vegetable itself. At a period that in the past would have been considered murderous he gets his bit of cereal, part of the yolk of an egg, a snack of baked potato and mashed stewed fruit.

Whatever today's baby is given, should, of course, be absolutely under the doctor's direction. There is a difference in babies.

But the great truth that many mothers do not know is that children with touchy appetites at six or eight or ten years of age, are the results of fixed preference in babyhood.

Caution Must Be Exercised.

Another thing that should be remembered is that as milk must be the alpha and omega of his meal, therefore the amounts of other food given must not be so great that the willingness to take milk is decreased.

The doctor will give you lists and schedules for feeding. My suggestions here are only for one purpose. That is to show "why" and "how" aversions to needed foods are started. Food habits, which mean flavor habits, have to be cultivated early.

To Save Windmills

An energetic campaign to save the picturesque windmills of France has been started by the Municipal Council of Bergues, in French Flanders. The French state has been petitioned to protect these mills, which constitute a form of sentimental wealth which it is difficult, sometimes impossible, to replace.

FLY-TOX

Quick, Pleasant Successful Elimination

Let's be frank—there's only one way for your body to rid itself of the waste material that causes acidity, gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Your intestines must function and the way to make them move quickly, pleasantly, successfully, without griping or harsh irritants is to chew a Milnesia Wafer thoroughly, in accordance with directions on the bottle or tin, then swallow.

Milnesia Wafers, pure milk of magnesia in tablet form, each equivalent to a tablespoon of liquid milk of magnesia, correct acidity, bad breath, flatulence, at their source, and enable you to have the quick, pleasant, successful elimination so necessary to abundant health.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles at 35c and 60c or in convenient tins at 20c. Recommended by thousands of physicians. All good druggists carry them. Start using these pleasant tasting effective wafers today.

Watch Your Kidneys!

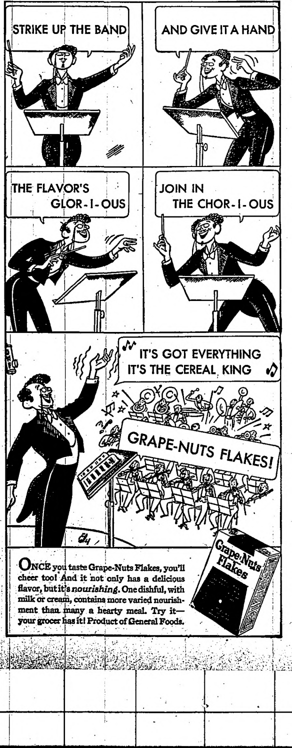
Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen limbs; feel nervous, miserable—all upset.

Don't delay! Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are especially for poorly functioning kidneys. They are recommended by grateful users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

DOAN'S PILLS



ONCE you taste Grape-Nuts Flakes, you'll cheer too! And it not only has a delicious flavor, but it's nourishing. One dishful, with milk or cream, contains more varied nourishment than many a hearty meal. Try it—your grocer has it! Product of General Foods.

Legislation Lobbies

Washington.—While two congressional committees have been seeking newspaper publicity for themselves in promoting investigations of legislative lobbies, the Federal Trade Commission has quietly taken the position that "legislative activities" on the part of individuals or business interests are not so bad. Strangely enough, the commission heretofore has been labeled as rather radical but in this instance it has taken a much more conservative view of efforts of private citizens to protect themselves than have the members of congress.

The commission made known its position in only one case, but the understanding is that it represents a view of a majority of the commission members and that in all probability there will not be much fuss or furore again respecting the efforts of private citizens to engage the attention of their elected legislators when their pocketbooks are in danger.

No such attitude is in evidence at the Capitol. Certainly, no such evidence has been given by Alabama's Senator Black and his senate investigating committee. The house investigating committee, under the chairmanship of John J. O'Conner of New York, has not been quite so ferocious but it has not overlooked opportunities to get on the front page of newspapers whenever possible.

The two congressional investigations have come to be regarded by Washington correspondents largely as farcical. I reported to you some weeks ago that the probable result of the congressional investigations would be the smearing of many men of wealth and the exposing of any shortcomings of corporations on which the committees could lay their hands. That has been the result to date and the outlook has not been changed. As far as anyone can see now, neither committee is going to adduce any evidence or testimony that will be helpful in the framing of legislation—that is the basis upon which congressional investigations proceed and it is the only basis in law they have for such inquiries.

In support of the assertion that there is much publicity sought, one needs only to reflect on the circumstance of those two committees engaged in a battle to obtain the testimony of Howard C. Hopson, the big shot of the Associated Gas and Electric company. Mr. Hopson has been sought to give testimony respecting his company's lobbying activities and was looked upon by the chairman of each committee as a star witness—a star because he is one of the biggest men in the utilities field and therefore good headline material.

We here in Washington saw the spectacle of subpoena bearers from each committee chasing through the streets in a race to hotels where Mr. Hopson was reported seen. The elusive Mr. Hopson was not discovered in any of the three hotels where rumor said he was quartered. Then rumor got busy again and a process server raced wildly over the Virginia roads to the nearby estate of Attorney Patrick J. Hurley, who was secretary of war in President Hoover's administration and who has served as attorney here for the Associated Gas and Electric company at times past. It turned out that Mr. Hopson was not at the Hurley home and the faithful process server was forced to return empty handed.

Delicate Question

But to get back to the Federal Trade Commission. Its position may yet be regarded as determinable only on the merit of an individual case or circumstance. That is to say the commission probably has not condoned sharp practices in the relationships between private business and official agencies.

The action of the commission in this instance was with reference to a motion of counsel for the International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers. The attorneys asked that the commission strike out of the complaint against the association three paragraphs which charged association officers and members with attempting to urge legislation and local ordinances "in bad faith." That question, of course, is very delicate. It presents a collateral question as to whether when an individual seeks legislation of a protective character for his own interests or legislation that will aid him in his business, he has done so "in bad faith." Undoubtedly, there may be times when bad faith could be properly charged. But in discussing this phase of the situation in many quarters in Washington, I found the consensus to be that protection of property can hardly be cataloged as effort made in bad faith.

Nevertheless, the politicians at the Capitol take a different attitude and they do not hesitate to follow through any scent they obtain of information which, when published, will hit newspaper front pages.

The reason I regard the action of the Federal Trade commission as being so significant is that the commission deals with literally thousands of individual businesses each year. It has jurisdiction to order elimination of unfair trade practices and to expose just plain cheating in private business. Therefore, the commission may be said to have a vital influence on the lives and businesses of those whose operations may be characterized as small and important only in small communities, as well as on the great masses of capital and national trade associations. Since the commission has shown a willingness to consider the rights of individuals to foster their own interests, some observers believe that its prestige will be enhanced and that we may find in the future that the commission will be a popular governmental unit rather than one which business looks upon with fear.

Executive Orders

Throughout the Roosevelt administration we have observed almost daily announcements that the President has done this, that or the other thing "by executive order." In the rush of legislation designed to help us over the emergency in 1933, executive orders came thick and fast. No one thought a great deal about them. It was unusual for them to emerge from the White House in such numbers but I believe it was the general desire to forget the precedent that was being established, numerically at least, in the issuing of executive orders because of the acute conditions in the country.

Subsequently, attention was called officially to the great number of these orders and that they had the force and effect of law. It was the more important because the Supreme court of the United States called attention to the facts. The court digressed far enough in a weighty opinion which it rendered to suggest that it was impossible for the average individual to know what these executive orders contained; what inhibitions or prohibitions were prescribed and what rights, if any, a citizen had left.

The American Liberty league, which is addressing itself consistently to analysis of governmental affairs, informs me that between March 4, 1933, and the end of July, 1935, Mr. Roosevelt issued more than one thousand two hundred and fifty executive orders. The league offices also say that this is a greater total than the number of executive orders issued over the preceding 10 years.

Some fifty new agencies and additional branches of existing agencies or departments have been created by the simple expedient of an executive order. These new agencies have embarked upon all sorts of projects never even discussed at the time of the enactment of the law under which they were issued.

* * *

Orders Upon Orders

In addition to the executive orders, it is claimed that something like twenty thousand administrative orders have been issued by officials of various agencies whose sole legal basis for their acts was an executive order signed by the President.

"The examples of executive orders which have been cited show clearly a usurpation of legislative power," the league commented in a statement issued the other day. "By no stretch of the imagination can many of these orders be regarded merely as ministerial acts in execution of laws enacted by the congress. Policies are involved which under the principles of democracy should be passed upon by the congress, members of which reflect the varying viewpoints of citizens of different areas and schools of thought. So long as the judgment of the entire membership of the congress is applied to important questions a balance will be maintained in the public interest. It is contrary to our scheme of government to place supreme power in the hands of a single individual as has been done in European countries where parliamentary bodies have become nonentities. Encroachment by the executive upon legislative prerogatives, in violation of the letter or even of the intent of the Constitution, smacks of autocracy and despotism. It is subversive of popular government."

So long as executive orders and administrative regulations issued under them involve only administrative practices, there is seldom much public interest in them. Always, after enactment of legislation, the administrative agencies designed to carry out the provisions of the legislation issue rules and regulations interpreting the statute. But it is to be remembered that in such cases, the authority is in a statute and that statute is in printed form and widely distributed. In other words, individuals have an opportunity to know what the law is and have no excuse for violations of it. Such is not the case, however, with executive orders. They are issued from the White House, and copies are filed with the Department of State. Ordinarily, they get no further publicity and the average man in the street has little opportunity to know what they are.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Albert Lea—State members of the American Legion and its auxiliaries met here for their annual convention.

Redwood Falls—The Arlington Stone and Cement Works of Arlington was low bidder on the contract for construction of the sewage disposal plant here.

St. Cloud—A $600,000 addition will be made to the St. Cloud Veterans hospital as part of a national program to make accommodations for 8,800 more veterans, according to word from Washington.

Owatonna — Ferdinand Jacobson scored 95 points for first place in butter competition over 34 creamery operators at the seventeenth annual Steele county free fair and southern Minnesota exposition here.

Duluth—A mad bull invaded the farm yard of R. W. Myshack and kept the family indoors until deputy sheriffs arrived next day to drive it away. The animal had escaped from Levi Larson, Duluth farmer.

Hutchinson—A blazing council fire sputtered and crackled the twenty-fifth year of a pioneer sportsmen's creed when the Gopher Campfire Club welcomed 3,000 members to its annual summer outing August 18 and 19.

Stillwater—A separation of 62 years was ended when Mrs. Grace Maunsell, city treasurer, visited a sister in Boston she had not seen since 1873. Mrs. Maunsell came west that year to make Stillwater her home.

Willmar—Suggestion of the state board of control that state asylum sewage be run into the city disposal plant has been rejected by the city council. Councilmen held that the $2,000 revenue assured to the city through the plan would be insufficient to compensate for the added cost.

Marshall—Two Marshall workmen received a bonus when they took part in wrecking operations of the old Duluth House, landmark here. When walls of the old hostelry were dissected, Ed Como found an old silver watch and a silver dollar dated 1902, while Otto Hasert discovered a moss-encrusted silver dollar dated 1882.

Duluth—An executive order authorizing the purchase by the government of privately owned land on Isle Royale, in Lake Superior has been signed by President Roosevelt, advancing the movement to make the island a national park. The President, at the same time, authorized the allocation of $705,000 for the purchase.

Pipestone—In a headon collision near Shakopee in which their car was hurled backwards 135 feet, Mrs. Lillian Busch and her 7year-old son Harry of this community, were killed. Her husband, Walter, and Barbara Ann, 2, were critically injured. The other car was on the wrong side of the road and driven by Carl Fredlund, Minneapolis.

St. Paul—Five national public works officials, headed by Colonel Horatio B. Hackett, assistant PWA administrator, reported increasing interest in works projects throughout the country, gave assurance that Minnesota may have all the project funds it needs, but gave warning that project applications had best be made promptly, before all the funds are gone. Engineers for the nine Minnesota districts have been made.

Minneapolis—Minnesota's complement of four federal district judges is made permanent in a bill passed by congress and sent to President Roosevelt. Previously three was the state's allotment, but a fourth had been created temporarily. Einar Hoidale, former Minneapolis congressman, is in line for the first vacancy. This may not be open for some time. Judge J. W. Molyneaux has reached the retirement age, but is not ready to quit yet.

Minneapolis — Automobile traffic faces being slowed down to 20 miles an hour in the residential districts and 15 miles an hour where there are no traffic signals, as the city council contemplated enforcing existing laws. Aroused over the increasing number of traffic accidents and resultant increase in deaths and injuries, the city council committee on ordinances and legislation recommended the strict enforceent of existing laws when they were informed a proposed ordinance restricting speeds to 30 miles an hour would clash with the state law.

St. Paul—Approximately 3,000 Spanish-American war veterans in Minnesota will be affected by the Spanish-American war veterans' bill which President Roosevelt signed, according to W. T. Coe, past state commander of the United Spanish War Veterans. The bill restores all pensions to the dependents and veterans of the Spanish-American war, Boxer rebellion and the Phillipine insurrection, and the average Minnesota veterans' allotments will be increased from $32 to $45 per month under the bill. The veterans now will receive disability payments from $20 to $72 a month, regardless of their private income, cause of disability or service record.

Worthington—Plummeting to earth when a wing crumpled, a pleasure-ride cabin plane carried a pilot and three passengers to death a short distance from where 8,000 persons had gathered for the local airport dedication. Flames enveloped the craft following an explosion from the impact, charring bodies almost beyond recognition. The dead: Pete Le Franz, Fergus Falls, pilot; Ernest Boots, 50, Rushmore; Glenn Rue, 23, Kenneth; Charles Kruger, 33, farmhand of Jamestown, N. D. The plane was one of 25 in the air circus here

Enclose a stamped addressed envelope for reply when writing for any information.

Gas and Tobacco

Smokers are sometimes accused, by wisecracking friends, of conducting gas attacks. Less grounds for this accusation may some day be found in tobacco which has, itself been the subject of a gas attack. Experiments pointing in this direction are reported in a German science journal. German-grown tobacco was subjected to treatment with ethylene and other gases, during various parts of the fermentation or "ripening" process. These gases are the same as those used in the United States to speed the ripe coloration of fruit and the opening of cut flowers. The results, as tested by skilled tobacco judges, are good.

UNIQUE HOBBIES BEING PURSUED BY COLLECTORS

When an old man died in Chester there were found in his house four large boxes full of tram tickets from nearly every tramway system in the world. For 20 years he had collected every variety of tram ticket he could find, and these he had sorted in alphabetical groups according to the cities they came from.

That old man and his hoard of tram tickets is by no means the only case on record of strange hobbies invented by ingenious people to pass their leisure hours.

In the case of a well-known K. C., railway tickets are the great attraction—he is reputed to possess more than 20,000. First numbers of newspapers and magazines form a second collection that he prizes highly. Incidentally, a number of people make it a practice to keep copies of papers in which momentous news is given.

A London man who was an ardent theatergoer had a whole library of theater programs—souvenirs of plays he had seen. Each had his remarks carefully noted in the margin. His collection was so complete that if you mentioned the name of an actress he could tell you in a few minutes all the plays she had appeared in since her rise to fame.

Stranger still was the hobby of a sailor. During a storm in the Pacific some flying fish struck the funnel of the ship and fell upon the deck. The sailor, who was ship's cook, had the idea of starting an aquarium on board, and every fish washed up or caught alive was put into a big tank.

Unfortunately for him, fish caught in the Pacific ocean stand little chance in a European winter, and a week of snow in the Thames killed them all.

ST. HILAIRE BAND LEAVING FOR FAIR

The St. Hilaire 4-H Club band leaves Monday evening over the Great Northern to enter the 4-H Band competition at the Minnesota State Fair. Among the activities scheduled for them after their arrival in the Cities are a picnic Tuesday night; a 4-H parade to the grand stand on Wednesday, and a banquet Thursday night at the Nicollet Hotel. The youngsters will spend three days at the fair.

The band which won first place in the music contest at Crookston last June, will represent Pennington County in musical competition, and will be in charge of Supt. M. Graham.

Here is hoping that this group of young men and women may have with them some of the good fortune that they enjoyed when the 4-H Ciubs achieved for PenningtonCounty the distinction of "Champion County" at the Short Course at Crookston last June.

The band will travel in a special car attached to the southbound passenger train, and will return home Friday morning the same way. A special rate per person has been given for the trip, and parents and others who may desire to go to the Fair will be given the same rate and accommodations as there will be room for 25 or 30 people aside from the band members.

BUYS GREENHOUSE

Thor P. Smidesang, who resided for many years at Wylie before moving to Eldred to manage an elevator, has bought the greenhouse at Thief River Falls from Martin Bothun, veteran florist of that city. Mr. Smidesang is well known thruout this territory and he has a host of friends here who will wish him success in his new undertaking.

Mr. Bothun, who has operated a cafe at Thief River Falls in addition to his florist business, plans to go to some western state in hopes a change of climate will be of benefit to his health.

Miss Laura Simonson, who is employed as stenographer at Minneapolis, motored here Saturday for a visit with her father, Pete Simonson. On Sunday she left, accompanied by her father, her sister, Pearl, and her niece. Gladys Stearns for a brief visit in the Cities. From there the three first named will go to Crandon, Wisc. Miss Pearl will teach another term of school at Crandon; Pete Simonson will spend the winter there at the Harvey Aubol home, and Miss Laura will return to Minneapolis at expiration of her two week's vacation.

MAYBE DUMB, BUT NOT DEAF ARREST OF 'MUTE' REVEALS

Red Wing.—Beer ruined the career of a peddler of pencils in Red Wing. A transient, in a soiled white cap, heavy overcoat, his sockless feet in shabby shoes made the rounds of the beer parlors selling pencils. Apparently deaf and dumb, he chattered in sign language or wrote out his wants on pad and pencil. His condition aroused sympathy and business was fairly brisk. However, as he went from bar to bar, he drank up his profits in beer and the close of the day found him in such a sorry state that the police were summoned and the intoxicated mute was put in a cell. It was then a minor "miracle" occurred for when the "deaf and dumb" peddler found himself in jail, his lost voice and hearing returned with a rush and he raved loud and clear against the Red Wing police and their ancestry. A police car escorted him to the outskirts of town and the "mute" was sent on his way.

AID FOR STUDENTS

The National Youth Administration has announced a program which will aid students wishing to attend school but who are financially unable. This aid of fifteen dollars per month will be distributed by the WPA. Young men and women between ages of 16 and 25 are eligible. If interested, call at the St. Hilaire school for further information.

M. R. Graham, Supt.

SUPT. M. GRAHAM AND FAMILY HERE

Supt. Maynard Graham, accompanied by his wife and infant daughter, and a sister of Mrs. Graham, arrived Monday morning from Motley and are now busy at getting settled in the residence vacated by E. N. Reiersgord and family. The Spectator joins with people thruout the community in bidding Supt. and Mrs. Graham and family welcome to St. Hilaire, and in expressing a hope their stay will be both long and pleasant.

SCHOOL BAND GIVES CONCERT SATURDAY

The school band will give another of its popular open-air concerts next Saturday evening. For this occasion the band will appear in full uniform, the same as they will have at the state fair next week. A special invitation is extended to everyone in the community to come in Saturday for the free concert.

Miss Alice Skottem went this week to Twin Valley to attend the wedding of a friend.

Ben Jacobson and family of Eveleth, motored here last week-end for a visit with their relatives.

The ball team took the short end of a 10 to 8 score when they played a team at Thief River Falls last Sunday.

The Ladies Aid of the Norwegian Lutheran will be entertained by Mes. O. Hauge, J. S. Roy and S. Olness at the church parlors Friday, September 6th.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the creamery held last Saturday evening, it was decided not to have the creamery operate an oil station for the present at least.

Mrs. Geo. Bainbridge of Goodridge, received the sad news last week that her sister had died at the old family home in Iowa. She went down Saturday to be present at the funeral.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Shaskey of Fargo are the happy parents of a son born Tuesday, Aug. 13. Mrs. Shaskey formerly was Mabel Loberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lars A. Loberg of this village.

Edgar Johnson leaves Sunday for Lancaster where he was reelected last spring as principal of the village school. Elroy Johnson will be in charge of the Johnson Cafe here which is owned jointly by them.

Guests at the R. M. Larson home last Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. L. Hagen and son, Lief, Mrs. C. J. Berg and daughter, Clara, of Crookston, and Mrs. C. L. Sandberg and son, Robert, and Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Sandberg and daughters, Sylvia and Deloras of Holt, Minn.

Mrs. Oscar Gigstad, accompanied by Mrs. Anna Martz and daughter, Dorothy, motored here Tuesday from St. Paul to spend a few days with relatives and friends. Mrs. Gigstad will visit at home of her mother, Mrs. Knute Kolstad and Mrs. Martz and Dorothy will spend some time at the Martz farm across the river.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Johnson and son returned Friday after visiting at the home of Mrs. Johnson's mother at Manvil, N. D. The mother suffered loss of a finger in an accident while they were there, and she was taken to the hospital at Grand Forks. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were at Grand Forks during the week-end to see her, and they returned home Monday.

The creamery has decided not to take cream on Saturdays after September 1st.

Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Reiersgord and son were here from Fosston for a short time yesterday.

Miss Emma Narveson motored up this week from Crookston and spent several days at the Gigstad home.

Postmaster Harold Holmes suffered a severely wrenched back Wednesday evening while engaged in putting ice in the refrigerator at his home. The pain was so severe he had to be assisted to bed. At this time he is showing some improvement.

Mrs. Harry Winter entertained members of the Birthday Club at her home Friday evening honoring Mrs. E. Reiersgord, Huldah Gigstad, Eva and Lilly Johnson who all leave this week. On Saturday, Mrs. Winter entertained a group of twelve ladies at afternoon luncheon.

Mrs. Erika Wallen, former resident of St. Hilaire, was very pleasantly surprised at her home at Minneapolis on Thursday, Aug. 22, by a large number of friends, the occasion being her 70th birthday anniversary. The evening was spent socially after which a delicious lunch was served. Her daughter, Mrs. Geo. Weborg and family and Kenneth Weborg and wife, came the same day from Pender, Neb., to help celebrate the occasion and to spend a week visiting.

REIERSGORDS DEPART

Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Reiersgord and son, Tommy, left Monday morning with their household goods, for Fosston where Mr. Reiersgord will be principal of the town school the coming school year. During their years of residence in St. Hilaire, Mr. and Mrs. Reiersgord have made many friends who regret very much to see them depart. However, all join in wishing them happiness and unbounded success in their new home.

SCHANTZEN GARAGE BEING REMODELED

Clifford Schantzen, proprietor of the Service Motor Garage, set men at work this week taking down the second story of his garage building. The building is to be cut down to one story and re-roofed so what is now the workshop will be included under same roof as the main building. Mr. Schantzen also intends to sheet up part of the long warehouse on north side of the garage so it can be used for warm storage during winter months. When repair work and alterations are finished, the structure is to be painted which will be a decided improvement to that corner.

GARNES TEAM WILL PLAY HERE SUNDAY

The ball team from Garnes is scheduled to cross bats with the St. Hilaire team on grounds here next Sunday. The Garnes boys have a reputation of being good batters so fans can be assured of seeing some action. The game will be callde at the usual hour.

FLYING TULLIBEE LANDS ON DECK DURING STORM

Warroad—This is the fish story of the week. It will be told without embellishment. Several persons vouch for its veracity. There is a fish to show for it. On a return journey from the Northwest Angle Fay Young, captain and owner of the S. S. Resolute was holding in close to shore and headed toward Long Point to avoid as much as possible of a storm. One great wave broke over the bow of the boat. When the wave receded a tullibee lay on the deck. There were five tourists on board who had not caught a fish during a five day trip. The opinion was hazarded that the tullibee was just enough of a booster to sacrifice his life that no tourist might leave Warroad without having caught—or been caught by—at least one fish.

Ruffling Inexpensive Touch to House Frock

By popular demand the house frock sheds its "work-a-day" appearance and blossoms forth in a crisp, dainty (but serviceable none the less!) manner to delight the wearer and eye of the beholder! Pattern 9477 is so utterly simple in design that the veriest beginner can attempt it confidently. Instead of a troublesome sleeve, an epaulet effect is achieved with one simple cut. Choose a crisp, sheer cotton, like swiss or lawn with a bright design scattered over it, buy a few yards of contrasting ruffling—and presto! you've a cool house frock that does itself proud for porch or street wear, too!

Pattern 9477 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3 yards 36-inch fabric. Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to the Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth street, New York, N. Y.

HELP NEEDED

"George Washington Tubbs," said the judge, sternly, "you're entirely no-account and shiftless—and I'm going to send you away for a year with hard labor."

"Please, Jedge," interrupted Mrs. Tubbs from the rear of the courtroom, "will yo' Honah jes kinder split dat sentence? Don't send him away from home, but let dat hard labor stand."

That's the Idea

"My papa's a mounted policeman," said little Pat to his mother's visitor.

"Is that better than being a foot policeman?" she asked.

"'Course it is," replied Pat. "If there's any trouble, he can get away quicker."

Cries for More

Jimmie—"Dad, what do they put water in stocks for?" Dad—"To soak the investors, son."

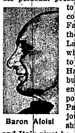
Mussolini Won't Give Up His Ethiopian Adventure

MUSSOLINI is determined to conquer Ethiopia, and all Europe is trembling. Il duce evidently feels that his personal prestige is at stake, and to him that means the continuation of the Fascist regime. Anthony Eden and Pierre Laval offered Italy what would amount to a mandate over Haile Selassie's realm, but that was not enough, so the tri-power conference in Paris was declared adjourned. The friendship between France and Italy must be ruptured. Great Britain will insist on action by the League of Nations council when it meets September 4. There is no reason to believe that the council will do more than it did in the case of Japan's seizure of Manchuria, but it seemingly will be forced to denounce Italy's action, and that would be enough to induce Mussolini to withdraw his country from the league. If and when Italy defies the league, that pretentious body, previously defied successfully by Japan and Germany, will amount to little. No wonder the statesmen of Europe are jittery.



Baron Aloisi

One high French official was quoted as saying that Europe "faces a crisis like that of 1914," and he admitted that "France must resign herself to losing Italy's friendship." Others in Paris declared that France is now solidly with England.

After Baron Pompei Aloisi had submitted the Anglo-French proposition to Mussolini and had received the duce's reply, he told Eden and Laval that his master would be satisfied with nothing less than "annexation of Ethiopia in whole or in part." Laval was furious and directly accused Mussolini of breaking a personal promise made to him when he visited Rome. Eden abruptly brought the conference to a close.

In Addis Ababa the high priests of Ethiopia conducted a solemn service, in the presence of the emperor, praying for liberty and for deliverance from war with Italy. The head of the church said: "God will confound our enemies, will break their hearts and shatter their staves in their hands." And in every church in the threatened country the natives gathered and repeated these prayers. But in Italy Benito Mussolini was telling his fighting men, as they departed for Africa, to disregard everything but their duty to make war. Said he:

"We are going forward until we achieve a Fascist empire. I know you will do your duty with iron discipline and will not hesitate to make sacrifices until all our goals have been accomplished."

Will Rogers and Wiley Post Brought Home for Burial

WILL ROGERS and Wiley Post, crushed to death in Alaska when their plane fell not far from Point Barrow, were brought back to the states for burial by Joe Crosson, their intimate friend, in an airplane. And all their countrymen stood figuratively with bared and bowed heads as the broken bodies were laid to rest. None was too great and none too lowly to pay tribute in words and action to those two fine Americans, one a beloved comedian, humorist and philosopher; the other a leader among the world's aviators. They died as they had lived, adventuring gallantly, and the world is the poorer for their passing.

Push President's Program Through to Passage

SENATOR ROBINSON and other Democratic leaders in congress went into a huddle with President Roosevelt on the legislative situation and the possibilities of an adjournment within a week or ten days. They emerged with the knowledge that the Chief Executive still insisted on the passage of his "must" list of bills. These measures were said to be:

Sen. Robinson

The utilities bill, the tax measure, the Guffey coal stabilization bill, the ban against damage suits against the government because of its gold policy, alcohol control, Tennessee Valley Authority act amendments, a bill to impose NRA labor standards on firms which contract with the government, rivers and harbors legislation, the third deficiency bill, the oil regulation measure to ratify state compacts made at Dallas, railroad reorganization legislation.

Compromises on both the utilities bill and the tax measure were being worked out. The former, it was reported, would direct the federal power commission to decide which companies should be eliminated, but would leave wide avenues through which the companies could carry to the court their fight against dissolution.

About two weeks ago, it is revealed, the Roper council, composed of some 40 business leaders, sent to the President a report urging strongly that the tax bill be deferred until the January session of congress, so that there might be time for the formulation of a carefully considered tax program. The council included a defense of holding companies, asserting they have played an important part in the country's growth and "should not be ruthlessly destroyed." This document was pigeonholed at the White House, which was highly displeasing to the members of the council though they should by this time be used to that treatment of their work.

Victor Over New Dealer Takes His Seat in House

WHEN Charles S. Risk, the Rhode Island lawyer who defeated the New Deal candidate for congress recently, entered the house on the arm of Representative Bertrand H. Snell, Republican leader, and was escorted to the speaker's rostrum to take the oath, he was vociferously greeted by the Republicans as a hero whose victory they thought presaged great things for the party next year. Mr. Risk took his seat on his thirty-eighth birthday.

Republicans Make Awkward Demands in Lobby Probe

MINORITY members of the senate and house committees that are investigating the doing of lobbyists started out the week with the determination to find out why Marvin H. MacIntyre, secretary to the President; Lawrence W. Robert, Jr., assistant secretary of the treasury, and Amon G. Carter of Fort Worth, publisher and friend of the Roosevelt family, were all found in the apartment at the Shoreham hotel of Bernard B. Robinson of Chicago, chief lobbyist of the Associated Gas and Electric company. Mr. Robinson himself also was there, and it was said when the door was opened at the knock of the sergeant at arms of the senate a "scene of revelry" was disclosed. For a day or two the news of this affair was not sent out from Washington by the news associations, reportedly because of the efforts of Mr. Carter to have it suppressed entirely. This, too, some of the investigators want explained.

B. B. Robinson

Republican members of the house committee also said they would insist on the interrogation of Undersecretary of the Interior Charles West and Emil Hurja, executive director of the Democratic national committee. West is reputedly the President's lobbyist and Hurja acts in a similar capacity for Postmaster General Farley, and both of them were involved with Tom Corcoran in the utilities "death sentence" lobbying that started the whole inquiry.

Nye Admonishes Cuba to Pay Interest on Her Bonds

SENATOR NYE of North Dakota has spoken a word for the American investors in Cuban public works bonds, interest on which has been defaulted. The senator is chairman of a bondholders' committee and he wrote a letter to Jose Manuel Casanova, president of the Cuban social-economic union which was in Washington as guests of the government. Mr. Nye contended that taxes had been collected for the specific purpose of meeting these obligations, and continued:

"If your government were financially unable to pay our citizens the interest that is rightfully due them on the $40,000,000 they invested in Cuban public works bonds, we should give sympathetic consideration to such a situation. But this is not the case."

Wheat Acreage Reduction Put at 5 Per Cent in 1936

SECRETARY of Agriculture Wallace has changed his mind about the reduction of wheat acreage for 1936. Instead of asking the farmers for a cut of 15 per cent, as was announced recently, the figure is now placed at 5 per cent.

Sec'y Wallace

Wallace told reporters that the change was decided upon after the government's August 1 survey of crop conditions indicated that total wheat production this year would amount to only 608,000,000 bushels as compared with domestic requirements of 635,000,000 bushels.

The step was taken, he asserted, to assure ample supplies for domestic consumers. He said that it was expected to place the country in a "strengthened position" in the export market. He added the change in policy will not result in any marked reduction in benefit payment to farmers. He did not say what the exact reductions in the payments would amount to.

Lobby Probers Quarrel Over Witness Hopson

RIVALS in the matter of publicity, the house and senate committees on the activities of lobbyists got into a tangle that certainly didn't enhance their dignity. Howard C. Hopson, the long sought head of the Associated Gas and Electric Utilities system, permitted the emissary of the house committee to find him, and Senator Hugo Black flew into a rage and had his committee threaten Hopson with contempt proceedings unless he appeared before it. Chairman O'Connor of the house body was angered by this and declared: "Hopson is in my custody. I've got him. Nobody else has got him. Nobody else is going to get him."

H. C. Hopson

The elusive, chunky utilities magnate told the house committee about his various companies and related the saga of his travels while he was being sought. But he politely refused to answer questions concerning the sources and amount of his income. He testified that he "believed" the Associated Gas system had spent "eight or nine hundred thousand dollars" in opposition to the Wheeler-Rayburn utility control bill.

"That's just a small fraction of the $300,000,000 equity in our companies which would be destroyed if the bill becomes law and remains law," he declared.

Late in the day Hopson calmly walked into Black's committee room and asked: "Is some one here looking for me?" Black and his committee then questioned the utilities man for an hour or two and got mighty little out of him except smooth sarcasm that made the chairman quite furious

Schacht Scolds Nazis for the Persecution of Jews

DR. HJALMAR SCHACHT, economic dictator of Germany, is a brave man. Once more he has dared to speak out strongly in reprobation of the Nazi persecution of the Jews in the reich, and of those who are attacking Christian churches. He declared such individuals were doing great injury to Germany's economic condition and retarding her recovery, and this is especially his interest as he is president of the Reichsbank as well as minister of economics. His strictures were applied to Julius Streicher, chief Jew-baiter, and Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, though he mentioned no names.

"There are certain contemporaries of whom one can think only with the prayer in mind, 'O Lord, preserve us from our friends,'" Schacht asserted scathingly. "These are the people who at nights heroically smear paint on shop windows, who brand every German who buys from a Jewish shop a traitor, who call all former Free Masons scoundrels, and who are unable to distinguish between religion and the abuse of the pulpit.

"Their aims are worthy. Secret societies have no right to exist in the third reich. Pastors and priests must minister to the soul and not dabble in politics. Jews must resign themselves to a realization that their influence is broken in Germany once and for all.

"But all these problems must be solved under the guidance of the state and cannot be settled through sporadic actions which seriously disturb business.

"It is absolutely essential for the offices responsible for German recovery that the world keep faith in Germany as the state in which law is respected. According to point four of the Nazi program, Jews cannot be citizens. Point five of the program provides that special legislation be prepared for them. This legislation is being worked out. Until it is published, existing laws must be respected.

"The same attitude applies to the church problem, which is of definitely greater importance to Germany than the Jewish question."

Just before this speech was delivered, Streicher had ordered his henchmen to arrest on the spot all Jews seen in public with German girls, and directed the vendors of his newspaper to investigate in their areas and report all "Aryan" domestic servants who are working for Jews. This information be promised to publish, with names and addresses.

FDIC Reveals Great Losses Written Off by Banks

FROM the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation comes a report showing that in 1934 the banks of the country wrote off their books a total of $1,131,000,000 in losses accumulated during the depression. The FDIC added that this was made possible because the banks received $650,000,000 net in new capital, which was supplied largely by the government's Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Despite these losses, the FDIC figures disclosed, the banks' assets rose from $40,610,000,000 to $47,370,000,000 during 1934, and that deposits increased from $31,300,000,000 to "about $39,000,000,000."

A belief that deposit insurance is not a cure-all was expressed by Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the FDIC in his report to congress. He said insurance is "not a complete remedy for the ills of the banking system nor for unstable business conditions." He added that a chief controlling factor with regard to these conditions will be "general economic conditions and monetary and credit developments."

Disinfect Your Drains

You can easily disinfect your drains and prevent odors in your bathroom. At regular intervals, as often as you think necessary, use the following solution: Dissolve two ounces of chloride of lime in one gallon of water. Pour this down the drains, allow it to remain for a couple of minutes, and then flush.

Heritage From the Old Days

The old traditions of the sea prevail. Meal time is not a conversational tea. At the captain's table it is not proper even to talk unless the Old Man speaks first. The mate always removes his cap and knocks before entering the master's quarters. If standing to windward on the poop when the captain comes on deck the mate promptly moves to leeward, so the Old Man will get the breeze uncontaminated. Laugh if you will, but the hand of a schooner captain is iron and the old niceties still prevail.

What sort of men sail on schooners? All sorts. Crews are sometimes negro or brown-skinned, with agile little men from West Indian islands, ruled by white officers, of course. More often they are Norwegian-born, Swedish-born, Danish-born, German-born, Russian-born sailors of the old school. Most of them are citizens now, but few schooner men were born under the United States flag.

Will Plant More Wheat

Washington.—A plainly worded and simple announcement forthcoming the other day from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, presented one of the sharpest reverses in policy yet promulgated under the New Deal. Dozens of experiments have been tried out since President Roosevelt came into office and almost as many have run their course and have been abandoned. Many of them were tried out with high enthusiasm but the enthusiasm died long before the recently created agencies themselves went out of existence. Such was not the case, however, in the instance to which I refer because the simple announcement by the AAA resulted in the addition of 5,200,000 acres to the wheat planting area of the United States for the 1936 crop.

Not alone did this announcement represent a change in administration agricultural policy. If one is to believe the undercurrent of information available around Washington, one cannot escape the conclusion that the increase in wheat acreage to be authorized represented something of an answer to the protests, even boycotts, that have been evidenced in many sections of the country against an increased cost of living.

It is unnecessary to repeat here how hundreds of women have boycotted meat markets in Detroit and how one delegation after another in other sections of the nation have written or telegraphed to the Department of Agriculture or to their representatives and senators in congress in complaint against the high and ever increasing food prices.

Of course, boycotts and riots and demonstrations are rather silly. They just don't get anywhere successfully. About the only result one ever sees flowing from that sort of activity is a lot of publicity.

More Hogs Comes Next

So, when Secretary Wallace and Agricultural Adjustment Administrator Davis agreed to raise the wheat acreage from 85 to 95 per cent of the available acreage for the next crop, the consensus was that the administration felt it might have gone too far in its crop reduction program. Probably all restrictions will be lifted on hogs very soon because hog prices have sailed higher than a kite and the shortage of available live stock for packing has come to be almost appalling. Certainly, the city dwellers who constitute a big element in the market for pork products regard the shortage as appalling and they are not to be appeased by any promises from Washington.

Secretary Wallace was rather angered at published newspaper accounts from various cities to the effect that the AAA program was responsible for the high prices. He insisted that the drouth of last year was responsible and that the destruction of several hundred thousand sows and several million pigs had not affected the market situation at the present time.

But Mr. Wallace's statements did not go over so well. In the first instance the bulk of the city dwellers simply will not believe that the drouth had resulted in killing off a sufficient number of hogs and cattle to cause the current high prices. In the second place, wiseacres around Washington who have a habit of blurting out their thoughts without regard to feelings of others, promptly inquired what good had come from the AAA corn-hog control program if the drouth alone was responsible for the price increase. These same individuals were mean enough to inquire also why some experts in the Department of Agriculture had released statements to the press to the effect that meat prices, especially pork, will continue to skyrocket until the summer of 1936. They pointed out that a great shortage in supplies existed and that it was to be expected the upward trend would continue until a new crop of hogs of packing size is marketed next year.

Then, we here in Washington heard suggestions from men whose job it is to understand market conditions in which imports of pork products were predicted for the forthcoming winter. Now, importation of any commodity does not take place unless the domestic supply is short of the requirements. Thus, crop control program or no crop control program, drouth effects or no drouth effects, it is possible that this, one of the greatest hog producing nations in the world, may witness substantial imports of a food item for which it has always been noted as a producer.

Explains Reversal

As regards the reversal of form in the wheat control program, Mr. Wallace said in his announcement that the increase had been authorized "primarily to assure domestic consumers of continued ample wheat supplies." He said that the wheat carried over this year was about 152,000,000 bushels and that on the basis of present estimates of production for next year it seemed advisable "to use the flexibility of the Agricultural Adjustment Act at this time to provide for somewhat larger production to assure adequate supplies of all types of milling wheat."

In theory, of course, the AAA control plan should permit production of sufficient wheat next year to take up the slack of left over requirements and should have the effect of maintaining American stocks at about normal. But, in practice, a different result is threatening. This nation always has exported a considerable amount of wheat. It has, therefore, had some influence in the world market and to that extent has influenced the domestic price. It happens, however, that the world wheat crop ahead of us is likely to be smaller than usual. If the United States had the wheat, it is pointed out variously, there could be a considerable return to the farmers from the export market. As it stands, possibilities of taking advantage of that situation just do not exist.

Without further reference to the practical operation of this theory, some experts have mentioned to me the fact that the 1936 American crop may not be as good as in times past. Then, not only will the American farmers be unable to take advantage of a foreign market, but they will not obtain the maximum return possible for their domestic sales because of their own shortage.

In answer to this, AAA officials point out they can use the flexibility of the Agricultural Adjustment Act as a benefit to the farmers. Their view of the situation is that the American wheat industry will be in a strong position, due to the shortage of world wheat, and can again exert its influence.

The divergent opinions of those who favor crop control and those who think the theory will not work have created many arguments even among officials. There are those who think only of the farmer's position and there are those who think only of the plight in which the city dwellers finds themselves when prices are high. The whole thing, when simmered down, is simply another way of stating the age-old problem in which we find on the one hand those who produce the food and on the other those who eat it. Adoption of the principle of crop control has not solved that problem nor does it hold any prospect of solving it. It seems to me as a matter of cold judgment that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is not any more fair with the people as a whole than are those who promote boycotts or seek to tear down gains made by agriculture. The department officials have given out statements carrying only their side of the case. Those who attack higher prices have made only their side of the argument. Neither has added much to the sum total of human knowledge or human comfort.

Federal Pay Roll Grows

The New Deal plans for giving employment may not have been so effective outside of Washington, but no one can question the result in so far as the federal pay roll is concerned. Late figures reveal that since President Roosevelt came into office more than 150,000 persons have been added to the federal list of employees. The total of workers on federal pay rolls in the executive branch of the government at the end of the fiscal year, June 30, was 717,712, whereas the total was 566,980 at the end of March, 1933—the end of the first month after Mr. Roosevelt took office. It has always been the claim of political parties that "to the victor belong the spoils." It is true under the Roosevelt administration to a remarkable degree. This is shown by the fact that the civil service list of employees in the federal government has gained very few while those appointed to jobs without the necessity of passing a civil service examination account for the bulk of the new workers.

Much of the New Deal legislation has carried specific provisions that employees in the particular agency created by the bill in question could be appointed without "regard to the civil service law." That is the simple expedient used to provide spoils for the victor.

But these new thousands are not at all secure in their jobs as distinguished from basic reason why a great many persons seek federal appointment through civil service examinations. An employee who has passed an examination and has received an appointment is supposed to be fairly secure in his job and as long as he does the work assigned to him there is scant possibility of him being ousted. This is not true of the political appointees. If and when there is a change of administration and a political party of opposite faith takes the reins, the workers who came in by reason of political plums have little chance of staying on the job. Consequently, one fequently hears around Washington now discussion as to what will happen to all of these new workers if New Deal agencies blow up or Mr. Roosevelt should fail of re-election.

Mid-West Farmers Increase Incomes

Those Keeping Books Report Business Improvement Being Shown.

Farm earnings of 73 account-keeping farmers in several Illinois counties, showed an increase in 1934 over 1933, the second consecutive year of their business improvement, according to a report of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, published in the St. Louis Milk Market Review.

Average cash income last year among the 73 farmers was $2,715 per farm, and cash expenditures average $1,500 per farm, leaving $1,215 to meet interest payments and family living expenses, the report explains. Besides the cash income, an inventory increase of $461 per farm was shown, on account of rises in farm product prices.

The 73 accounts show an average net income in 1934 of $1,043 a farm, compared with an average of $259 in 1933 and an average net loss of $542 in 1932. The data compiled, the report observes, is not representative of average farm conditions, as the statistics were secured from large farms.

Of the farms considered, 38 were general and 35 dairy farms.

"On many farms," the report states, "the cash received from benefit payments (AAA payments) will more than pay for the year's taxes. As an average for all the accounting farms, payments actually received were $64 more than sufficient to pay 1934 taxes."

Caustic Potash Is Used to Remove Calves' Horns

The horns are usually removed from young calves by using caustic potash. This may be obtained in stick form at a drug store. The calf's horns should be treated with caustic potash as soon as the button appears, which will be possibly at two weeks of age, according to a writer in Hoard's Dairyman. The long hair around the horn should be clipped away with ordinary hair clippers or a pair of shears. A circle of vaseline should then be placed around the horn, making a considerable ridge above the eye so that no liquid containing the caustic potash will get into the eye. The stick of caustic potash is then dampened and rubbed vigorously on the small horn button until the flesh gets considerably reddened, although it is not advisable to rub it until blood appears. The person doing the work should protect his hands against contact with the wet caustic.

Rodents on Farm

Contrary to the experience of big game, many of the smaller wild animals find civilization an advantage. In primitive regions the numbers of such animals as ground squirrels, prairie dogs, and pocket gophers were largely determined by the available food supply and the extent to which they were the prey of the larger hunting animals. As farmers filled the western country they drove off the larger animals and planted crops and meadows, thus increasing the available food supplies for the small rodents. The rodents multiplied to take advantage of the more available food available in fields, meadows, and orchards. This is one reason, according to the biological survey, that farmers find it necessary to trap and poison the rodent pests.

Save Overheating of Stock

"There is no need for farmers losing horses during sudden hot spells of the busy farming season," Wayne Dinsmore, secretary Horse Association of America, says. Men who work around coke ovens in temperatures as high as 135° F. have all the salt and water they want. If horses are treated the same way they can stand heat, too. Take barrels of water to the field and allow the horses an opportunity to drink every hour. Give them all the salt they want. This simple treatment will save work stock from heat prostrations in hot weather, he states.

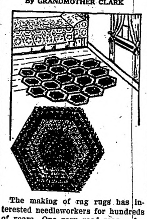
Different Ways of Making Rugs

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



The making of rag rugs has interested needleworkers for hundreds of years. One very good reason for this is that rugs are practical and wanted in every home. The larger the rug the harder the work; the weight increases as the work progresses. Making a rug of motifs and then assembling takes the hard labor out of rug making and the work becomes interesting. Work these motifs in spare time at home or elsewhere and, when all are finished, assemble.

Folder No. 532 contains a lot of information about making the hexagon motif in various sizes in hexagon shaped rugs and in various color combinations. Hexagon motifs are crocheted in any size and color scheme according to your own idea. Amount of material and all the stitches are given and other hints of value to rug makers. A new kind of chart for selecting your colors gives you an opportunity to see what your rug looks like before you go ahead with the work. You can get some wonderful ideas from this folder on "Different Ways to Make Rugs." It will be mailed to you upon receipt of 10 cents.

Out in Front

"Are you a political leader?"

"How do I know?" asked Senator Sorghum. "I'm out in front, but maybe I'm only being pushed from behind by a stampede."

PROBLEM OF HOW BEST TO PUNISH CHILD SERIOUS

The problem of how best to punish a child to help him or her to understand the error of his ways so that a like mistake will not be made repeatedly, is one of the things which puzzles parents. Should the child have careful explanations of why the thing is wrong for which he is punished? Should he learn to obey arbitrarily with the reliance on father and mother's word and judgments being right? Should corporal punishment be banned in favor of restrictions? When many different methods have been tried and still no change for the better is the result, the problem assumes grave aspects, as there is a tendency to disregard rightful rules. This is, of course, assuming that the parent's judgment is correct, and not capricious. A child soon appreciates when the disciplining is not just.

Children are governed in so many different ways, that no hard and fast rule can be given that will apply in all cases, but, as a general thing, very little folk have to depend upon mother's and father's commands being final. For this reason parents should learn to be guarded in what they demand of their little ones. Implicit obedience of officers' commands, seldom understood by soldiers, is expected in army life, but home life is a different matter.

Affection is the guiding power. The parents love their children so much they want to bring them up to have respect for their maturer judgments, to understand that what was done was to help them to adjust to life, to deport themselves in an upright and honorable way, to strengthen home affiliations, and at the same time to teach them self government and that independence which is founded on a respect for the laws of the land.

The reaction of training the children in these things is beneficial on the parents. Their high ideals for their off-spring are stimulating. The knowledge that they, themselves, are patterns of excellence and represent all the virtues to the children whose belief in their goodness is steadfast, and also their belief in the goodness of other people is founded on this faith in them, bring out fine traits and qualities in the older folk.

EIGHTY CASES OF HORSE DISEASE IN THIS REGION

Brain Ailment is Spreading Rapidly, Dr. Twete Reports

Approximately 80 cases of encephalomyelitis, brain disease affecting horses, have been discovered to date in this section, indicating that the ailment is making rapid headway, Dr. L. R. Twete, local veterinaian, announced today.

Dr. Twete reported that fifteen cases have developed this week in the Deer Park community and ten in Rocksbury, adding that efforts to combat the disease are handicapped by a shortage of the necessary serum.

An increase of 203 quarantines since last Friday, discloses a further spread of the epidemic from northwestern Minnesota into southern counties, officials of the state livestock sanitary board reported Tuesday.

The total number of premises under quarantine is 853 and in a majority of cases from one to three horses are afflicted.

Dr. C. E. Cotton has furnished veterinarians in every county with information relative to remedial measures.

BANG'S TEST SIGN UP MEETINGS BEING HELD

Sign-up meetings for the Bangs disease test were begun last week by County Agent R. M. Douglass, and meetings were conducted this week in Rocksbury and at the court house for North township, while another is scheduled for this evening in Wyandotte.

PART OF SCHOOL AID RECEIVED BY DISTRICTS HERE

Of Total of $15,882.85 City Schools Will Receive $11,308.85

County Auditor A. M. Stenstad Friday received from State Treasurer Julius A Schmahl a check for $15,882.85 covering payment in part of special state aid to Pennington county schools for the year ending July 31.

Four districts shared in the allotment, which had been certified by John G. Rockwell, state commissioner of education. He stated that other items of aid would be certified as rapidly as possible.

Of the total the Thief River Falls district, No. 18, receives $11,308.85, including $9,821 in tuition aid and $1,487.85 for the teacher training department. The Goodridge district, No. 8, receives $2,289 in tuition aid, while the St. Hilaire district, No. 102, gets $2,198 for the same purpose, and District 48 in Reiner receives $87 for transportation of crippled children.

GOV. OLSON ASKS AUTOISTS TO MAKE SEPTEMBER SAFE

Month Set Aside for Observance of All Traffic Regulations

Motorists and pederstians alike today were called on by Governor Floyd B. Olson to join a volunteer campaign for the reduction of the constantly increasing traffic mortality rate.

In a proclamation setting aside the month of September "for the voluntary and complete observance of traffic regulations with the objective of reducing accident injuries and deaths to the absolute minimum" he urged every citizen in the state to actively participate in the campaign to reduce traffic accidents.

25,000 Potential Upland Game Birds Are Rescued

More than 25,000 upland game bird eggs will have been "rescued" by state game wardens in southern sections of the state before the end of this week, Charles McFarlane, deputy director of the Division of Game and fish, reported. This "conservative estimate" is based on the average receipt of 500 eggs at the state-owned game farm near Madelia, Mr. McFarlane explained.

Game wardens are working on game bird egg rescue work in co-operation with sportsmen's organizations, Boy Scouts, 4-H clubs, rural mail carriers and other interested individuals.

Last reports from the game farm stated that almost 4,000 upland game birds have already been hatched. A 60,000-egg modern incubator was installed to take care of the influx of game bird eggs from practically all southern Minnesota areas.

CLAIMS BASEBALL RECORD FOR ZUMBROTA BUSHER

Kenyon.—How well do you know your baseball records? Adolph Anderson, ardent baseball fan from Zumbrota is so confident that Art Hanson, Zumbrota first sacker, established on the other day with his "four for four" hitting and errorless day in the field that he has offered a prize of ten dollars to the person showing him positive proof that Hanson's record has ever been equalled in organized baseball. According to Anderson's account, twenty-one chances, three of them exceptionally difficult, were cleanly handled for put-outs by Hanson in a ball game between Zumbrota and West Concord, a game won by Zumbrota pitcher. Cleanly handling 21 putouts at first base and at the same time battling 1000 with four clean singles, is a record never surpassed in baseball history, according to Mr. Anderson. Feverish conning of baseball record books will be in order by those who wish to win ten dollars and an argument from Anderson.

Is Pheasant Economic Asset or Liability?

Definite information will be assembled by the Division of Game and Fish working in conjunction with the University of Minnesota as to whether the ringnecked pheasant is an economic asset or liability to farm operations in the state. Numerous complaints about pheasants damaging sprouting corn this year caused this action designed to "get more data concerning the food habits of this specie of upland game bird.

Eight birds sent in by Warden William F. Munch from the Jackson vicinity contained only waste grain, cut worms, beetles, alfalfa leaves and in one instance several kernels of seed corn from which the germs had already been eaten presumably by squirrels.

"These birds had been accused of doing damage and some of them were actually shot in cornfields but in place of actually causing any damage, an examination revealed that these birds were performing a valuable service to the farmer in the ridding of insect pests," Erling Swenson, director of the division, said.

HIGHWAY PATROL JOINS IN WAR ON SPEEDING DRIVERS

Speed to be Judged According to Traffic Conditions, Says Chief

The state highway patrol, which for years was prohibited by law from making arrests for speeding, has now joined forces with other safety agencies in an effort to reduce dangerous speed on the highways.

N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner, announced today that after a study of legal points involved, he has ordered the patrol to treat excessive speed in the same manner as other traffic law violations.

John P. Arnoldy, chief of the patrol, is working out detailed plans for his men to follow in combatting the speeders who menace other traffic upon the trunk system.

The state legislature of 1929, in creating the highway patrol, expressly prohibited the patrol from enforcing speed laws. Succeeding legislatures followed the same policy. This year, however, when the legislature gave added police powers to the patrol, it omitted from the law the words which previously protected speeders.

"The way is open for the patrol to prosecute speeders, and we have determined to exercise that authority", Chief Arnoldy said. "Modern motor cars are capable of such tremendous speeds that greater regulation is imperative to reduce the traffic killings on our public highways."

On the open highway, outside of built up sections, school zones and other special situations, the state law provides that any speed over 45 miles an hour constitutes prima facie evidence of driving faster than is reasonable. That is, a person arrested for speeding on the open road, if going faster than 45 miles an hour, would have to prove to the court that his speed was reasonable and not endangering other users of the highway.

"We are not going to set 45 miles an hour as a speed limit." said Mr. Arnoldy. "The patrolmen will be instructed to exercise their judgement and make arrests for high speeds in accordance with traffic conditions and other surrounding circumstances."

A conviction for speeding will make the motorist liable to imprisonment for up to 90 days, or to a fine of up to $100.

WARDEN BLIDE RELEASES DEER AFTER HEELING LEG

Hallock.—"Billy" the baby deer brought in with abroken leg by Game Warden Blide last spring is now enjoying himself in the wilds of the poplar grove, east of Krogstads in Hazelton township. Billy suffered a broken leg when hit by a car near Karlstad last May. The bone was set by a local doctor and the fracture healed dapidly. Given excellent care by the Blide children Billy developed into a real pet, eating out of the children's hands and coming when called for his milk. He grew rapidly and it was becoming a problem to keep him inside the pen built for the purpose so it was decided he had reached the age when he could care for himself in the woods. Several deer have been staying this summer in the heavy woods in Hazelton township along the Two river so here with his comrades, protected by law from the hunter's guns Billy will grow up to be a stags estate.

DAMAGE BY BEARS PROVE TO BE EXAGGERATED

Admitting that bears have done some damage to cattle and sheep in northern Minnesota but stating that much of the damage has been greatly exaggerated "like Mark Twain's reported death," Martin J. O'Toole, chief state game warden, is back in St. Paul following a personal investigation.

Most of the damage alleged to have been done by bears occurred in Koochiching county, west from International Falls to Birchdale. In Mr. O'Toole's opinion considerable of the losses could readily be traced to wolves although "bears have taken a few sheep but not in the numbers reported by county agricultural officials".

WPA PROJECTS FROM COUNTY GET STATE O. K.

Driving full speed ahead in an effort to beat the September 12 deadline when all projects from the state must be in the hands of Washington authorities, major developments this week in the Works Progress administration program to provide jobs for needy unemployed include:

Announcement of a state-wide 30-hour, five-day week immediately effective for all workers assigned to WPA jobs:

Approval by state headquarters of another group of 235 projects to cost an estimated $4,254,952;

Selection of six district supervisors of women's projects and the first allocation of $391,851 for the women's program.

Acceptance of applications for student aid at all of the state's 32 colleges and the state university.

In announcing the 30-hour week, which will supersede the previous order of a 140-hour month, Victor Christgau, state WPA administrator, said "this arrangement will give employment to a larger number of persons on each project and will enable the work to be carried on efficiently and economically without interruptions and lay-offs. It also gives the WPA worker an oportunity to devote all of his energy and ability to the task while he is on the job."

The applications for $4,254,952 which received the state administrator's approval during the week swelled the total submitted to Washington from the state to $32,104,125. The 1,148 projects, it is estimated, will provide 35,753 persons with jobs for a year.

The following Pennington county projects have been approved to date by the state office: Thief River Falls: construction curb, federal funds $14,461, sponsor $4,193; park improvements, federal funds $8,915, sponsor $1,551; construct curbs and gutters, federal funds $14,472, sponsor $4,193; construct side-walk, federal funds $19,509, sponsor $5,510. River Falls Twp.: brush, grub, improve cemetery, federal funds $530, sponser $150.

With practically every county in the state represented in the program to date, Christgau pointed out that some are still behind in submitting sufficient projects to take care of their relief loads.

"November 1 is the date on which federal authorities have announced that funds for direct relief no longer will be available," Christgau said. "To insure funds that will provide jobs for the needy unemployed, there is less than two weeks left in which to get projects into Washington."

The part women on relief will have in the state WPA program took definite shape this week as the announcement of the first allocation of $391,551 by Washington for women's projects was followed by the appointment of district supervisors. For the Detroit Lakes district of which Pennington county is a part, Miss Evelyn Stapf was named.

Christgau disclosed that 126 projects to provide jobs for 4,230 women have been approved and submitted to Washington. The applications, from 54 counties, include cleaning, sewing, library, statistical survey, clerical, cooking, nursery school, visiting nurse and canning projects.

The week also saw the Youth program of the Works Progress administration in full swing as George A. Selke, state director, president of St. Cloud Teachers College, authorized executives of the state's 32 colleges and the state university to proceed immediately with the plans to give needy students jobs which will pay an average of $15 a month. The students, to be selected on the basis of need, and character and ability to do college work, will be offered part-time employment on "socially desirable" projects to be sponsored by the institutions they attend.

WIN FROM GARNES

The local ball team took the long end of a 10 to 3 score in their game with the Garnes club played on local grounds last Sunday. The visitors played a good game, but superior team work on part of the locals left no doubt as to final outcome. This is the last scheduled game to be played here this season.

SCHOOL OPENS MONDAY

The St. Hilaire public schools re-open next Monday morning for a nine months' term after the annual summer vacation. The teaching staff is complete, the building is in tip-top condition and everything is in readiness for opening. Four bus routes will be operated this year, and it is anticipated attendance will be equal to, or will exceed that of previous years.

NOTED FLYER VISITS AT RED LAKE FALLS

Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh were visitors from Friday until Monday at the home of his sister, Mrs. Geo. Christie at Red Lake Falls. During their stay at Red Lake Falls, Colonel Lindbergh made two trips in his monoplane to Little Falls presumably to visit with friends at his old home.

Crowds of curious persons, anxious to get a view of the famous flyer, visiter the landing field at Red Lake where the plane was anchored.

Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh left at 2:30 Monday afternoon for an unknown destination.

WILL IMPROVE CEMETERY

Among the projects approved by the Works Progress Administration the past week is one of especial interest to local people. The sum of $530 federal funds has been granted for improvement of St. Hilaire cemetery in River Falls township.

Sponsors of the project will be required to furnish an additional $150, and the total sum is to be used for brushing, grubbing and otherwise improving the plot.

At same time announcement was made of a 30 hour, five day week for all workers assigned to WPA jobs.

IMPROVING PARSONAGE

A crew of men started work this week excavating a basement under the Swedish Lutheran parsonage on Water street. The long, open porch is to be removed to be replaced by an inclosed one, and a heating plant may be installed when the basement is finished.

HERE FROM IOWA

Mr. Emil Raecek, accompanied by his son-in-law, motored here Sunday evening from Charles City, Iowa, for a visit at the Wm. Novak farm home southwest of the village. Mr. Raecek is a brother-in-law of Mr. Novak.

HERE FROM CALIFORNIA

Mr. and Mrs. J. Regan and daughter motored here last week from their home at Monterey, Calif., for a visit at the homes of Mrs. Regan's brother and sisters, Joe King, Mrs. S. Skottem, Mrs. O. Nettland and Miss Agnes King.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bohlen of Rudd, and August Bohlen of Dumont, Iowa, motored here Saturday for a visit at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Bohlen north of the village. Richard Bohlen is a son, and August Bohlen a brother of Jake Bohlen.

FIVE WEDDING LICENSES ISSUED HERE IN AUGUST

While only five applications for marriage licenses were filed in August with Clerk of Court Adolf Eklund, this total is one more than the four licenses issued in August, 1934.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Postmaster Harold Holmes has been confined to his home a few days because of illness.

Another rain fell over this section Tuesday and threshing will be delayed again a few days as a result.

Ole Loberg, an oldtime resident of this community, came up Saturday from Willmar to look after threshing at his farm northwest of the village.

After spending the summer months here at home of his sister, Mrs. L. E. Beebe, Merril Dann left Monday for his home at Rio, Wisc.

LaRoy Johnson of Detroit Lakes is taking the place of his brother, Edgar, at the Johnson Cafe during the coming school year while Edgar teaches in the village school at Lancaster.

Elmer Johnson and Clifford Schantzen have had their school bus cars repaired in preparation for use on the school routes at opening of school next week.

After spending a two weeks vacation in this state, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Jackson left Monday enroute to their home at Minot, N. D., where Mr. Jackson is train dispatcher for the Great Northern Railway Co.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Gigstad, accompanied by Mrs. Anna Martz and daughter, Dorothy, returned Monday to their homes at St. Paul after spending a few days here with relatives and friends.

Larson Bros. are busily engaged in building new shelving and getting their new store ready for fall business. Large shipments of goods have been received lately which will tax capacity of the place when all is placed on display.

Ray Lindquist motored here last week from Minneapolis for a short visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Lindquist, at their farm home west of town. Upon returning home, he was accompanied by his son who had spent the summer with his grandparents.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hanson, accompanied by Mrs. B. Burkee, motored Sunday to Moorhead and spent the day at the E. O. Burkee home. Mr. Burkee, who became ill a couple of weeks ago, was still receiving treatment at a Fargo hospital when the Hansons were there. Mrs. Burkee remained at Moorhead to stay with her son during his illness.

Miss Alice Skottem is to leave this week to teach in the public schools at Climax.

Dr. D. S. Horn, the Ulen dentist, was here Tuesday and Wednesday this week attending to his local dental practice.

Mrs. Richard Larson went Monday to spend a few days at the state fair. She went down in the special coach provided for the band.

Miss Grace Dahle, who has taught in the local high school for three terms, leaves soon to teach in the high school at Rhame, N. D.

Stanley Olsen motored here last week to spend a few days with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Olsen. He left this week to resume his work as superintendent of the village school at Judson, N. D.

Mrs. Ed. Carlson and children left last week for their home at Morganville, Kansas, after spending about three weeks here at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joe V. Patton.

Miss Helena Erdmann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Erdmann of River township, left Monday for Brainerd where she has accepted a position as teacher in the Brainerd high school for the coming year.

Clifford Schantzen has removed the upper story of his garage building and has put on a new roof over the entire structure. As soon as that part of the work is completed, the building is to be painted.

Rev. M. L. Dahle of this village conducted funeral services Tuesday afternoon at Ebenezer church in Mayfield for Betty Lovaas, six year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lovaas of Garnes township, Red Lake county.

Regular meeting of the Business Mens Club was held Monday evening at the club rooms. Among other matters taken up was that of making an appropriation to help finance trip of the band to the state fair, and to order community calendars for the coming year.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenard Hovet and daughter of Little Falls, motored here Saturday and spent until Monday afternoon at the home of his mother, Mrs. Knute Kolstad. Mr. Hovet is the owner of a thriving job printing business at Little Falls. They were accompanied here by Mr. Hovet's brother-in-law, Oscar Gigstad of St. Paul.

BAND GOES TO FAIR

Amid the cheers of parents and well-wishers to number of more than a hundred who gathered to see their departure, the St. Hilaire 4-H Club Band left Monday evening in a special coach attached to the southbound train, enroute to spend three days at the Minnesota State Fair. The band which won first in the music contest at Crookston last June, represents Pennington County in the musical competition at the fair. This trip comes as a reward for faithful and concentious work on the part of the band members who have struggled valiently to bring their organization up to its present high standard.

Following a banquet given for 4-H Clum members at the Nicollet Hotel at Minneapolis last evening, the St. Hilaire group left over the Great Northern and will be home this morning. Special thanks is due the Great Northern Railway Company for providing of such excellent accommodations for this trip.

Court Opens Oct. 7th

A list of thirty names of county residents drawn for petit jury service in the October term of district court was announced today by Clerk of Court Adolf Eklund. While the court term opens October 7, the jury will not be summoned to appear until Monday, October 14.

The panel, comprising ten women and twenty men, includes the following from Thief River Falls: W. J. LaBree, Mrs. Charles Shirley, Tom Lonson, Andrew Ness, Palmer Peterson, Mrs. H. L. Aanstad, Clayton Steenerson and Roy Belcher.

Those from other sections of the county include Mrs. Paul Ortloff, Mrs. J. A. Hanson, Casper Iverson and Wendell Corbett, all of St. Hilaire; Charles Johnson and Mrs. Elmer Hanson, Numedal; Ole Hegland and Martin Hoaas, Mayfield; Victor Swanson, Ole Grinde and Edward Heieren, Silverton.

Mrs. Otto Johnson, River Falls; Thore Skomedahl, Hickory; S. H. Ness and Mrs. Andrew Ortloff, Sanders; Mrs. Peter Lovly, Goodridge; B. B. Hammer and Tobias Stene, Smiley; Mrs. Harry Myrom, Norden; Mrs. S. N. Olson, Bray; Olaf Wahlberg, Cloverleaf; and Charles T. Carlson, Wyandotte.

COUNTY OPTION ELECTION SET FOR OCTOBER 14

Following the filing last week with County Auditor A. M. Senstad of a petition meeting legal requirements, Mr. Senstad, acting in accordance with the state law governing the matter, issued an order Friday for a special election to be held thruout Pennington county Monday, October 14, at which time voters will be given an opportunity to register their wishes in favor of or against the sale of intoxicating liquors within the county.

The petition complies with the law by being signed by more than 25 per cent of the total number of votes cast in the county for the office of governor at the last general election. It bears 1,296 signatures, while the vote for governor in 1934 was an even 5,000. A few of the signatures were counted out because of duplications or failure to give addresses, but not enough to bring the total of qualified voters below the required 1,250.

The regular polling places will be used for the election, and the township boards in the rural area will serve as judges unless other arrangements are made, Mr. Senstad stated. The question to be voted on will be phrased: Shall the sale of liquor be prohibited?

Pennington county has been dry territory since before the adoption of the national prohibition amendment, now repealed. In the event that the vote in the coming election should favor the sale of liquor, each community in the county would have the power to decide whether or not liquor shall be offered for sale within its limits, and, if so, whether it should be dispensed thru a municipal liquor store or by licensed private dealers.

25 Years Ago

Elmer Burkee and Maurice Rolland went to Moorhead to attend the State Normal school.

Henry Olsen was back at the Pitkin store after having spent the summer months elsewhere.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Krueger were here from Red Lake Falls looking over the town with view of starting a harness shop.

Gust Konickson shot a 500 pound bear that week out in Mayfield township east of here.

T. D. Rice, who owned a farm south of Hazel, shipped in a lot of winter wheat to sow as an experiment at his place.

After visiting in North Dakota with friends, Miss Mary Hoff returned and resumed her position at the Merchants State Bank.

Prof. A. J. Barsness, the new principal of schools, came up from Brandon and was making preparations for opening of school.

Congress Session Ends; Long's Lone Filibuster

CONGRESS ended its session at midnight Monday—after the clock hands had been moved back three times—the house hilarious with refreshment, song and rustic antics, the senate furious because Huey Long of Louisiana had conducted a lone filibuster for seven hours and talked to death the third deficiency appropriation bill. This measure carried $93,000,000 tax to pay pensions to the aged, retirement pay to railroad workers and money for crippled children.

Senator Long

The Kingfish defeated all efforts to silence him and was adamant to pleas that he was cutting off funds for humanitarian purposes. He was insisting that the house be forced to vote on the cotton and wheat loan amendments to the bill which the senate had inserted but which the lower chamber had rejected. A compromise had been reached between the administration and the bloc of cotton state senators by which the cotton raisers were to get government loans of 10 cents a pound, and the wheat farmers were left out. Long would not stand for the elimination of the amendments thus arranged.

The Democratic leaders were afraid that if submitted to the house government loans not only on wheat and cotton but on other commodities would be voted at a cost of upward of $2,000,000,000.

They determined to let the appropriation bill fall rather than submit to Long's terms, although Robinson stated that information from the controller general's office indicated there would be no available funds for the social security program unless the deficiency measure were passed.

Most congressional authorities held that failure of the $103,000,000 third deficiency bill may delay operation until January of the bulk of New Deal legislation enacted the last two months of congress. It provided funds for many purposes besides those mentioned above.

The compromise cotton plan was accepted reluctantly by the AAA, and many of the southern senators were dissatisfied with it. The senators from the wheat states were disgruntled because the wheat loan policy was completely abandoned.

Sept. 12 Is Deadline for Works Relief Applications

APPLICATIONS for money from the four billion dollar works relief fund must be in by September 12, according to an executive order issued by the President. In addition, he directed all agencies—federal, state or municipal—to be prepared either to ask for bids or begin works operations by October 22.

The President has set November 1 as the date for putting his works program into high gear and taking all the unemployed off the relief rolls. The new orders, issued to the heads of all departments and emergency agencies, were regarded as moves to realize that goal.

Uncle Sam Warns Russia to Keep Its Pledges

FRIENDLY diplomatic relations between the United States and Russia, established in November 1933, will not longer be maintained unless the Soviet government mends its ways and keeps its solemn pledges to prevent Communist organizations on its soil or under its control from plotting to overthrow the government of the United States. This was the warning handed to N. N. Krestipsky, assistant foreign affairs commissar of the U. S. S. R. by Ambassador William C. Bullitt in Moscow, whose note was written by direction of the Department of State in Washington.

Ambassador Bullitt

The language of the note was not quite so blunt as the above, but it did not mince words and its implications were not to be doubted. It said the United States "anticipates the most serious consequences if the government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics is unwilling, or unable, to take appropriate measures to prevent further acts in disregard of the solemn pledge given by it to the government of the United States."

It was thought in Washington that Russia's reply might be delayed until the return of Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinov, who was in Geneva helping deal with the Italo-Ethiopian crisis. It was Litvinov who personally gave to President Roosevelt the pledges that Russia would prevent Communists under its control from interfering with the internal affairs of this country, and in Mr. Bullitt's note these pledges are quoted in full, with the assertion that they have been flagrantly violated.

The American note called attention to the recent meeting in Moscow of the Communist International where the speakers discussed openly the plans for subversive Red action in the United States. The chief American delegates to this congress were Earl Browder and William Z. Foster, present and past heads respectively of the Communist party in the United States; Gil Green and Sam Darcy. Ambassador Bullitt sent to Washington daily reports on such of the doings of the congress as he was permitted to know, and after his final report he was instructed to lodge the protest.

Recognition of the Soviet government was, and still is, severely criticized by various elements in the United States, notably organized labor; and the friendly relations established by the Roosevelt administration never have "paid out" in the way of increased business with Russia because the Soviet government demanded extraordinary credits in exchange for orders. So perhaps our administration will not be too sorry if there is a rupture of relations.

Winant Made Head of the Social Security Board

JOHN G. WINANT, former governor of New Hampshire and a Republican, has been appointed chairman of the social security board, the body that will direct the part of the New Deal of which the President is proudest and which he declares is one of the outstanding social reforms in the history of the government. Mr. Winant's two associates on the board are to be Arthur J. Altmeyer of Wisconsin, who has been serving as an assistant secretary of labor, and Vincent Morgan Miles of Fort Smith, Ark., an attorney who has been associated with the Public Works administration. Each is to receive an annual salary of $10,000.

J. G. Winant

In sending his nominations to the senate the President stipulated that Winant will serve six years, Altmeyer will serve four years and Miles one year. All appointments date from last August 13 when the social security bill reached the White House.

As chairman of the new national labor relations board, operating under the Wagner act, the President named Joseph Madden, a Pittsburgh attorney. The other members appointed are John M. Carmody of New York and Edwin S. Smith of Massachusetts. J. D. Ross was nominated as a member of the securities and exchange commission, a job that it had been thought would be given to Benjamin Cohen, co-author of the utilities bill.

Mussolini Says Italy Will Fight Sanctions

GREAT BRITAIN, having ordered a concentration of naval strength in the Mediterranean for the purpose of protecting the Suez canal in case war breaks out between Italy and Ethiopia, followed this up by sending 1,000 troops to reinforce the garrison on the island of Malta. Immediately thereafter Premier Mussolini, in an interview in the London Daily Mail, made this portentous declaration:

"It should be realized without the possibility of misunderstanding that whoever applies sanctions (penalties for treaty violations) against Italy will be met by the armed hostility of our country."

The duce added that if the League of Nations voted sanctions against Italy, his country would at once leave the league.

In reply to a direct question whether there is the slightest possibility of his changing his attitude, Mussolini replied in the negative, saying "none at all—unless Ethiopia gives in."

Opening up of the vast Ethiopian interior, he said would benefit "all civilized states." Colonization of Ethiopia by Italy would "completely fulfill all colonial aspirations of Italy."

Death of J. N. Willys, Motor Magnate and Diplomat

JOHN N. WILLYS, long prominent in the automobile industry and ambassador to Poland for two years in the Hoover administration, died in New York at the age of sixty-one. He had been ill since last May when he suffered a heart attack. Mr. Willys, forced into business at eighteen by the death of his father, made his first fortune in selling bicycles. In 1908 he took over the Overland Automobile company, which was about to go into the hands of a receiver, and organized the Willys-Overland company at Indianapolis. Later he purchased the Pope-Toledo company at Toledo, Ohio, and moved the Willys-Overland plant there. He sold his automobile holdings to a syndicate in 1929, the deal involving several million dollars.

Thomas Alva Edison, Jr., eldest son of the famous inventor, died suddenly in Springfield, Mass. He was head of the research engineering department of the Edison plant at West Orange, N. J.

Roosevelt Talk to Youth Answered by Snell

IN HIS radio address to the convention of Young Democrats clubs in Milwaukee President Roosevelt insisted that he was not speaking with any political motive but was saying "precisely—word for word—what I would say were I addressing a convention of the youth of the Republican party." He justified the New Deal as an intervention by government to protect and aid common men in the complex scheme of modern existence, and asserted its aim was not socialism, but regulated individualism.

Rep. Snell

Championing a philosophy of change, the President said that "rules are not necessarily sacred—principles are. The methods of the old order are not, as some would have you believe, above the challenge of youth.

"To the American youth of all parties I submit a message of confidence—unite and challenge."

Under the auspices of the Republican national committee, Representative Bertrand H. Snell of New York spoke over the radio in direct reply to the President's appeal to youth—for both parties are making strenuous endeavors to capture the allegiance of the young men and women. Mr. Snell argued that a change in the Constitution abolishing rights of individual citizens would place "those who possess the power, the wealth and the cunning" in control of the government.

"Surely the youth of America," he said, "are not prepared to endorse any administration which is seeking to bring about such a condition."

High Prices of Food Will Be Investigated

BEFORE adjourning the house passed a resolution, previously adopted by the senate, appropriating $150,000 to enable the federal trade commission to make a general investigation into the rising prices of food. The commission is to analyze and allocate the costs of producing and distributing foods to the American consumer. Representatives from agricultural districts supported the measure, contending that the farmer is not receiving his proper share of the food dollar.

"One statistician has estimated," a committee report stated, "that in 1932 it cost the final consumer of five major American farm products 19 billion 21 million dollars. That is the sum the consumer paid to the retailer."

Of this total sum it is estimated that the farmer received only 7 billion 556 million and that it cost somewhere in the neighborhood of 11 billion 500 million to get the farmer's products to the consumer.

Guffey Coal Control Bill Is Forced Through

LEGISLATIVE action in both house and senate was fast and furious during the closing days of the session. White House pressure was freely used; filibusters were started and stopped; senators and representatives, hot and bothered, were inclined to be quarrelsome. But congress had its orders and it wanted to go home, so the administration program in general was pushed through.

Senator Guffey

One of the most controversial measures on that program, the Guffey coal bill, had been driven through the house by orders from above and threats of a strike, and when it was taken up by the senate every effort to kill it, by eliminating the tax feature, was defeated. During the debate Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, Democrat, created a sensation by denouncing the bill in these words:

"Outside of political circles, it is questionable whether there are five reputable lawyers in the United States who would declare this measure constitutional. However, that is not the worst feature of the bill. The worst feature is the defect and infirmity in the legislative program that we are developing. This nation cannot remain free and happy, if we are to legislate for groups, and beyond all of that, if groups are to legislate for themselves the end of things is not very far distant."

The house gave up the fight against the "death sentence" in the utilities bill and instructed conferees to accept a "compromise" that was pretty much one-sided. This means that all holding companies beyond the second degree are to be sentenced to death by the SEC promptly after January 1, 1938. Even a holding company in the second degree would not escape unless its operations were confined to a single integrated system within a state or within contiguous states.

Both senate and house adopted a resolution making mandatory the embargo on munitions shipments to both belligerents in case of war. This was what the administration did not want, claiming it would tie the hands of the Executive so that he could exert no influence toward averting war.

Senate and house accepted the conferees' report on the bill increasing the powers of TVT and legalizing that body's past actions and it was sent to the White House. The senate passed without a record vote the railway bankruptcy amendments recommended by Co-ordinator Joseph B. Eastman, which are designed to prohibit minorities from blocking reorganization plans.

DIFFERENT AMOUNTS OF LIGHT NEEDED

A survey shows that 22 per cent of children finishing grade school have damaged eye sight. When they have finished college, 40 per cent are so affected. At age forty, 65 per cent suffer from visual defects. And at age sixty, 95 per cent have eye defects.

This regrettable increase in eye troubles is in many instances caused by eye strain resulting from reading, studying, sewing at night with poor light and not enough light.

Science measures light in terms of foot-candles. A foot-candle is the amount of light one standard candle shines on a surface one foot away.

For seeing one's way around and performing ordinary tasks which do not require seeing very small objects, 5 foot-candles is sufficient. For reading coarse print and large stitch sewing, you can get along with 10 foot-candles. For continued reading of ordinary print, or doing ordinary sewing, you need at least 20 foot-candles. For reading fine print and fine sewing, you require 30 foot-candles, or more.

Your light may look bright, but it is the illumination you get on your work that saves your eyes from strain; and this diminishes rapidly the farther away you are from your lamp.

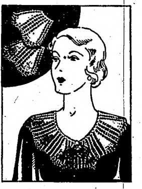
Seated with your paper or work 3 feet away from your lamp, it will require a light of at least 275 candlepower to produce the 30 foot-candles needed to be certain your eyes have enough light to do their work without danger of strain and permanent injury.

If you use electricity, your light company will recommend the right size bulbs to use.

If your home is not wired, one of the new 300 candlepower kerosene or gasoline pressure mantle lamps will supply plenty of "live" natural light for every home need. It takes the pressure to give you all the light you should have.

"Sunburst" Collar and Cuff Set for Fall

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



This Collar and Cuff set is quite a departure from the many models shown in open net work. The solid work gives the pieces more definite form and very little starching is necessary to hold the shape. Collar and Cuff sets are going to add attraction to fall dresses more than they did last spring so a little time given your crochet now will find you ready when the season makes its change.

Package No. 711 contains sufficient white Mountain Craft crochet cotton to complete this three piece set. Complete instructions and set illustrated on a model are also included.

Send 25 cents and you receive this package by mail postpaid. Instructions and illustrations will be mailed for 10 cents.

Build Campaign Battle Lines

Washington.—Politics being inseparable from governmental administration under our system," it becomes pertinent at this time to examine what has happened in the late session of congress. In a nation where a two-party political structure obtains, politics cannot be segregated from the administration in the larger sense. It is not with a critical attitude, therefore, that the magnifying glass is held over the doings of President Roosevelt, his cabinet and brain trust advisers and the congress that has lately adjourned.

I believe it will be agreed that politics has predominated in the management of our national affairs during the last eight months especially. The fervor and appeal that was held for recovery by all of us during the earlier days of the Roosevelt administration seems to have been largely dissipated. That is not to say that no one wants to see recovery accomplished. It is to say, however, that this fervor and this appeal has been somewhat subordinated. Thus, it can be summarized in a brief sentence: The administration, looking to the elections of 1936, has been engaged in building campaign battle lines and forging campaign ammunition.

The 1934 congressional elections presented to the country an issue based on the performances and the future program of President Roosevelt. It was accorded a proposition where citizens were voting either to give the New Deal a future mandate and the President authority to proceed as he thought best or to vote a mandate that would call a halt on those same performances and policies. The country supported Mr. Roosevelt, some of his advisers since have told me, in a manner even more substantial than he had anticipated. He emerged from that campaign with a larger Democratic majority in the house than he had before. In addition he was accorded much more than a necessary two-thirds of the senate. The picture looked roseate.

Though the congress that has just ended its session gave the President many anxious hours, I think that on the whole it can be regarded as having provided him with a record of rather arduous and faithful response to his wishes. He did not obtain quite all that he wanted nor did he obtain that portion of his program exactly in the form he desired. But, again, politics in congress is almost a matter of general compromise anyway so that the President can be said to have come out very well. He can proceed now to any plans for that session of congress which convenes next January and which, in accordance with nearly all precedents, will adjourn ahead of the national political conventions next June.

Looking to the Future

Politics being the game that it is, one must look into the future to discover the ultimate goal. So, looking into the future, one discerns several objects or objectives of decided, as well as important, interest to the individual voters.

In the first place, the consensus surely is that Mr. Roosevelt has built a legislative and administrative structure in our government that presents a concrete and unqualified issue to the American people, namely, to proceed along New Deal lines and make the necessary changes in the Constitution to permit execution of those policies or to throw the whole thing overboard. There can be no equivocation.

As the structure stands at this time and as it will stand until the next session of congress is under way, many New Deal propositions are of doubtful constitutionality. If they are so held by the Supreme court of the United States then Mr. Roosevelt is believed certain to turn to the country and request Constitutional revision.

His latest and perhaps his most definite move in this direction was in connection with the so-called Guffey coal bill. It will be recalled that, in placing that piece of legislation on the "must" list of measures to be acted on before congress adjourned, Mr. Roosevelt advised house leaders that he wanted it passed and he did not care particularly whether some members of congress had "reasonable doubts" about its constitutionality. In effect, therefore, the President commanded passage of legislation that must place before the Supreme court a vital question for determination. It will be tested. Of that there is no doubt. If the law is held unconstitutional, it merely means that its provisions form another part of the campaign battleground observed to be shaping.

Mr. Roosevelt also succeeded in forcing through congress the legislation destroying the public utility holding companies. It was a tough fight but the President was victorious. Now, I hear from many sources that court examination of the legislation likewise will come because some folks are convinced it is confiscatory. If it is, it is unconstitutional.

And so it is in the case of several other pieces of legislation enacting New Deal ideas into statutes. One by one, it appears they will get before courts for review.

Thus, the line of cleavage is marked. While the President has remained silent, neither denying nor confirming the undercurrent of information that I have reported here, one cannot fail to reach the conclusion that if many of the New Deal measures are held invalid, the President and his New Deal supporters, of necessity, must go to the country in the next election seeking constitutional modification to permit the use of policies now inimical to our form of government. That is the issue which the voters will be called upon to decide.

As to the Opposition

Since we have examined the circumstances from the New Deal side, let us likewise see what the Republicans and other oppositionists are doing. Lately, I have talked with some of the recognized Republican wheel horses. Whether they speak the sentiment of the masses of Republican voters or whether they voiced only their own views is not important here. Political straws do show which way the political winds are blowing. So when these veterans of many political battles say that they welcome the creation by the New Dealers of an issue, they evidently see in the situation worthwhile opportunities. When they say that they are willing to go to the country in defense of the Constitution as it stands and the traditions it represents, they evidently feel they are on firm ground.

Much water can go over the dam between now and November, 1936, and much sentiment can be changed in that time. But the Republicans thus far have done very little in the way of building up their case. While they appear to be enthusiastic about their chances against Mr. Roosevelt in 1936, they have thus far failed to develop even a nucleus of an organization.

It may be their strategy not to start their cannonading too early. Indeed, I have heard the thought expressed that it would be unwise to use ammunition too far in advance. At any rate, there have been only a scattered few direct attacks on what certainly must be the issue of 1936, the question of revision or retention of our Constitution. It is to be noted in this connection that those Republicans who have let go with a few shots have been of the ultraconservative type. I think it is generally agreed that the Republican set-up next year will be managed not by the old ultraconservatives but by those who have pulled away to some extent and who are willing to admit that times have changed conditions and a new model, perhaps not streamlined, is necessary.

G. O. P. Bides Its Time

One argument advanced why Republican leadership has not been more active is that if a start is made too early, the Roosevelt administration will have an opportunity to answer all of the criticism. Said one Republican leader: "We would be utterly foolish to permit the New Dealers to know all of our arguments too far in advance. I, for one, am content to let them proceed with their socialistic regimentation because I know that every time a calf is given too much rope, it chokes itself to death."

Then there is another factor which I understand is responsible for the delay in Republican attacks. A good many Republicans have a hope, at least, that a campaign based on a plea for maintenance of our Constitution and the traditions and modes of living which it represents will draw to the Republican candidate a certain segment of Democrats who are unsympathetic with the New Deal. There has been plenty of evidence in the session of congress just adjourned that at heart numerous Democrats lean to the conservative as distinguished from the New Deal method of government. The closing hours of the congressional session seemed to belie this. But anyone who mingled among old time Democrats in the house could not fail to have observed existence of a doubt as to the wisdom of many New Deal policies. Those men were forced to line up behind the Presidential program not because they believed in it fully but for two other reasons. These reasons were: first, they still entertained some fear that if they broke with the President it might mean their political defeat for renomination and re-election, and second, they were harassed and physically and mentally tired and wanted to go home.

The late summer and fall months during which these representatives and senators naturally will be among their constituents is rather likely to provide them with a better knowledge of where they stand. They will come back next January either convinced that they must tie fast to the New Deal or they will be more obstreperous than they have been in the recent session. If the strength appears to be on the Roosevelt side, the next session of congress will be simply a rubber stamp for the Chief Executive. If, on the other hand, they find that the enthusiasm for the New Deal has waned, I think it is fair to predict that the next session of congress will be one of the most troublesome with which any President has yet been confronted.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Atwater—The Annual Watermelon Day festival was a huge success with more than a car-load of the melons being devoured.

Kenyon—Plans for the eleventh annual corn show October 4 and 5 here, were launched by A. A. Kramer and Albert Hilstad, in charge of the show for their third year.

St. Paul—Otto Bremer has resigned as state manager of the Home Owners Loan corporation, a position he has held since the creation of the office shortly after the Roosevelt administration came into power.

Hibbing—Official approval by the PWA removed the last obstacle hindering construction of the refrigeration plant which will supply artificial ice in the new memorial building here. Work will start at once.

Marshall—The city council voted appropriations of $3,000 for an airport hangar, with additional funds of $30,000 to be furnished by the federal WPA setup. The hangar would house 25 planes and be of modern construction.

Zumbrota—A celluloid pocket comb and a fall on roller skates is fire tinder in the mind of Edward Kling whose burning trousers created a mild sensation on a local amusement rink. Skating unperturbed after a spill, Kling, native of Pine Island, found his trousers smouldering. In the pocket crackled a burning celluloid comb, presumably ignited by the tumble.

Minneapolis—The Junior Association of Commerce is sponsoring one of the finest fields of bicycle racers ever assembled for the fifth international six-day bike race in the auditorium September 10 to 16. Canadian stars, Torchy Peden, Jules Audy and Henri LePage will compete, along with the Swedish champ, Erland Christensen and the German team of Gus Kilian and Heinz Vopel. Other headliners will assure the spectators of a keen race.

Duluth—Delay in establishing the 17 additional CCC camps in the state has become necessary at the present time because of the heavy employment demands in the harvest fields and at lake resorts, E. W. Tinker, regional forester, said here. Of the 30 additional camps permitted the state, 13 has been established, bringing the present total in the state to 31. Under the CCC regulations a camp may not be established until the maximum strength of 200 men is reached.

Henderson—Elmer Schatz of Green Isle reigned "king of the sauerkrauters" after an auspicious victory in Henderson's kraut-munching contest before a record crowd of 20,000 persons. While the crowd howled in glee, Schatz vanquished two pounds of the famed festival dish in one minute and 59 seconds to edge out by a mouthful Len Martin of LeSeuer, who finished two seconds later. The contest climaxed a day of festivity that saw an estimated 15,000 persons partake of free sauerkraut, buns and wieners in Community Square park.

Tower—A letter written and posted in Finland and addressed only "Mrs. Sanni A. Harju, route 1, box 41, U. S. A.," has been received by Mrs. Harju near here despite the fact that the city, county or state was not designated. Postoffice authorities in New York, knowing of Scandinavian and Finnish settlements in Minnesota, forwarded the letter to Minneapolis. Authorities there recalled that a large Finnish settlement in the state is in Otter Tail county addressed it to New York Mills. The postoffice there happened to know that the Harjus reside near here and the letter was sent here.

Cloquet—Victims of the disastrous fire which swept northern Minnesota in 1918 won their long fight for federal compensation as President Roosevelt signed the bill authorizing payment of claims estimated at between $9,000,000 and $12,500,000. By this action more than 8,000 claimants, now scattered through 38 states, are assured full payment of losses suffered in 1918 when a devastating fire swept through approximately 2,000 square miles of northern Minnesota timberland. Seven thousand homes were destroyed and more than 500 persons burned to death. The total damage was estimated at between 30 and 40 million dollars.

St. Paul—With "Stop This Slaughter" as their slogan, representative men and women from six northwest states and two Canadian provinces will gather Sept. 17 and 18 to formulate a triple-barreled program designed to cut down the traffic death toll in this area. Among the speakers will be Gov. Floyd B. Olson and Chief Justice John P. Devaney of the Minnesota Supreme Court. The three fold aim of the conference will be (1) education of the public to the necessity for traffic rule observe, (2) strict and uniform law enforcement, and (3) co-operation of civic organizations, law enforcement agencies, and private citizens in the traffic safety movement.

St. Paul—The failure of congress to complete a social security program before adjournment will have no effect on his plans to call a special session of the Minnesota legislature, Governor Olson said on his return from Washington. He said there was no doubt at all that congress at its next session would complete President Roosevelt's social security plans, and that Minnesota may as well have its necessary state security legislation ready. The date for the special session of the state legislature has not been determined, the governor said.

ARMY ACE MAKES TARGET RECORD

It looked like the ace of aces, Lieut. Frank Luke, Jr., was flying again when Lieut. Frederic C. Gray hit target after target from his diving plane. Gray scored 1,176 out of a possible 1,750 points in firing at ground targets and targets towed by other planes to win the Luke Memorial trophy for aerial pursuit gunnery at March field, California. A member of the Golden Bear Seventy-third attack squadron the lieutenant from Abilene, Texas, was the first reserve officer to win the trophy.

The young man for whom the trophy was named was also from the Southwest—Phoenix, Ariz. Erratic, disobedient and always on the verge of a court martial Luke set a record during the World war that had never been equaled in any air force. He won 18 aerial victories in six weeks at St. Mihiel and brought down 13 Boche sausage balloons in six days.

Luke was a good friend of another ace, Capt. "Eddie" Rickenbacker, who has recounted some of the young aviator's exploits. "At dusk on September 16, 1918," said Rickenbacker, "Frank told me to watch two balloons and promised that they would blow up at 7:15 and 7:19. They were two miles back of the German lines. At 7:15 almost to the second the first was gone. Just four minutes later the second was blazing."

It was Luke who originated the idea of night attacks on balloons just as they were being raised.

One night, about September 29, 1918, Luke went out and didn't come back. He sometimes flew off to visit the French and mess with them while his officers waited anxiously. "He was in Squadron 29," said Rickenbacker. "I always believed I could handle Frank and get the best possible service out of him and had arranged for his transfer to my squadron. The order transferring him reached me just after he flew out in the dusk that night. I still have it."

What happened to Luke was confirmed after the armistice. He had dropped a note to an American observer to watch for burning balloons. A few minutes later three in a row came down. Red Cross investigation behind the German lines revealed that Luke then encountered five German planes. Instead of turning tail, he broke up their formation and brought down one before his own plane fell. He was unhurt and refused to surrender when Germans surrounded him. He killed several with his revolver. Then they turned a machine gun on him.

Tortured with Itching of Pimples

Relieved After Using Cuticura

"My face was a mass of pimples due to some external irritation, and I was in agony for three months. The pimples were hard, red and large and were scattered all over my face. I was tortured with the itching and it kept me awake.

"I used many remedies, but to no avail. A friend asked me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment, so I did. Soon an improvement could be seen, and after using for two and a half months my complexion was clear." (Signed) Joseph Paradis, 1078 S. Blvd., New York City, May 2, 1935.

THREE PATENTED CONSTRUCTION FEATURES MADE THIS NEW GROUND GRIP TIRE POSSIBLE

THE new Firestone Ground Grip Tire is the greatest traction tire ever built. It has 54% more tread rubber to give your car, truck, tractor and farm implements the greatest traction ever known.

Gum-Dipping, the Firestone patented process which soaks every cord in liquid rubber, makes it possible for this tire to stand the terrific strains and stresses of the extra pulling power. Firestone Tires are the only tires built that are Gum-Dipped.

The tread is built of extra tough rubber and designed with deep grooves between scientifically placed cross bars, giving super-traction and long wear. Firestone Ground Grip Tires are self-cleaning. (Chains are not needed.) The bars of the rubber are so placed that they will not bump on paved roads, giving you easier riding and longer wear.

TEXAS . . . Mr. C. W. Wardlow, McKinney, Texas, writes: "Approximately 28% saving in fuel, and 38% more acres worked each day, and am able to go through any kind of 'tough going' due to your new tread design on the Ground Grip Tires."

OHIO . . . Mr. G. I. Henning of West Salem, Ohio, writes: "Want you to know the effectiveness of your pneumatic tire on our binder—it saves time, we cut grain faster, it is easy on the man riding on the binder and now we never have to stop to tighten up bolts."

SOUTH DAKOTA . . . Chris S. Anderson, Badger, S. D., says: "I like Firestone Tires because the tractor runs easier, uses less fuel, travels faster and hauls larger loads."

NEBRASKA . . . Dr. C. E. Larsen of Tilden, Nebraska, writes: "I purchased a set of your new Ground Grip Tires about two months ago for my coupe . . . I have not been able to stick this car in mud since they were put on and they have already saved me three sets of chains and I would not be without them if they cost double what you charge."

IOWA . . . Mr. H. Elsbury of Sutherland, Iowa, writes: "With Firestone Tires on my McCormick Deering Tractor and Separator I have taken in over $100 from farmers I could not reach with other wheels."

Only Few in County Seek Hunting Permits to Date

With the prairie chicken hunting season not opening in this county until Saturday, September 21, only a few hunters to date have made application for licenses, County Auditor A. M. Senstad said today. He added that he expects to have full information relating to the various small game hunting seasons by the end of the week.

'MAN ON FLYING TRAPEZE' LANDS IN MERRY-GO-ROUND

Waseca.—The man on the flying trapeze swung through the air—but not with the greatest of ease—at the Waseca county fair last week, leaving a whirling glider swing at the height of 30 feet to land among the horses on a merry-go-round. Don Campbell, Morristown, visiting at the fair, found the glider swing, which suspends miniature airplanes in the air around a revolving post, not quite exciting enough. It is believed that he unsnapped the chain which holds the occupant in the swing seat and fell out when the swings reached a height of 30 feet, landing in the merry-go-round. The merry-go-round suffered casualties of one horse with a broken leg, and Campbell had a broken nose, a broken arm, an injured hip, and many body bruises.

September 12 Deadline for Submitting All WPA Projects, Says Christgau

Thursday, September 12, is the deadline for all WPA projects accepted in Washington, Victor Christgau, Works Progress Administrator announced this week. This, he explained, means that all projects must reach his office in St. Paul at least by September 10 for approval. Federal funds for local relief will stop by November 1, he said, and if the WPA is to take over the people who now are on relief in the various communities, we must have projects with which to put people to work. Otherwise these local communities and counties must assume the relief load. He urged all communities to speedily complete the preparation of projects for submittal to the headquarters in St. Paul, Area engineers are located in each district to advise and assist project sponsors.

Red Lake Falls Child Killed Sunday When Hit by Passing Automobile

Richard, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cyr of Red Lake Falls, died Sunday from injuries he sustained when struck down by an automobile.

The mishap occurred at Red Lake Falls, in front of the Cyr home, when the child stepped from behind the Cyr car into the path of an automobile driven by William Halberg.

Halberg was enroute to Red Lake Falls after visiting the Kirschman field where the Col. Charles Lindbergh plane was parked. The Cyr's had returned to their home on the west edge of the city and the family was getting out of the car when Mr. Halberg's car passed. Mrs. Cyr called to the child as he darted into the road, but her call was unheeded.

Dr. Borreson Present at State Convention

Dr. Baldwin Borreson, superintendent of Oakland Park sanatorium, was one of a group of physicians in attendance early this week at a meeting of the Minnesota Sanatorium association at the Sunnyrest sanatorium in Crookston. Dr. W. G. Paradis, superintendent of the Crookston institution, was named president Tuesday, succeeding Dr. L. S. Jordan of Granite Falls.

INDIAN JOE LOCATES BODY AT NINETY FEET

Excelsior.—Indian Joe, famous "body finder", again appeared in his mystery role at Christmas lake, near Minnetonka, to recover the body of Larry Lyons, drowned musician, after a seven days search by others had failed. The body was found in a depression in 90 feet of water, and would never have come to the surface except for Indian Joe. Dynamite and diving had failed when this man came to the rescue. Christmas lake is fed by springs, and the strong undercurrend carried the body to deep water, where the immense pressure of the water held it there. The victim had evidently been taken with cramps. His arms were drawn up tightly and could not be bent, while the lower limbs were limber as in life. Indian Joe steadily refuses to tell his secret, but invariably finds drowned bodies where everyone else has failed. He works alone, mainly at night, and denies that he uses diving methods. A full-blooded Indian, he claims powers denied to others.

ONLY 13 CASES OF HORSE DISEASE IN COUNTY, IS REPORT

That the prevalence in this section of the horse disease encephalomyelitis has been overestimated is indicated in a survey made by Dr. L. E. Jenkins, field veterinarian of the state livestock sanitary board, who reported Tuesday that there are only thirteen cases of the disease in Pennington county and a smaller number in Red Lake county.

Dr. Jenkins stated that the disease, which is carried chiefly by mosquitoes, rarely affects more than one or two animals in a herd and he advised treating sick horses with serum and vaccinating the more valuable animals as a preventive measure, the vaccination being effective for ten to twenty days.

While all horses in infected herds are quarantined, said Dr. Jenkins, the restrictions may be modified to permit the owner to care for his crops, with the condition that all horses on the farm must be kept from contact thru water troughs or otherwise with animals from other farms.

IMPROVEMENTS ARE MADE ON N.W. SCHOOL CAMPUS

The installation of modern sound picture equipment and the opening of the auditorium balcony are regarded as the most important of the many improvements made on the Northwest School campus during the past summer. The former includes complete DeLuxe Ultraphone Jewell Wide Range-on-Film equipment with two Simplex projectos, arc control lamps and a 10x14 regulation sound screen. According to A. M. Foker, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, the opening of the balcony will increase the capacity of the auditorium from 500 to approximately 850, thus providing ample accommodation for special meetings which have for some time been overflowing the main auditorium.

The dining hall building has also received considerable attention during the summer. Painters have redecorated the whole interior in pleasing shades of ivory, creams and tans. Additional equipment has also been added, including a Sani-Speed ice cream freezer, an electric cooling cabinet for the storage of ice cream, an electric refrigerator and electric toaster. A new cement walk has been laid from the Kiehle building to Robertson Hall and the walk from Home Economics in front of Stephens Hall, Dining Hall, Hill Building to the entrance of Owen Hall has also been relaid. Plans are also under way to pave the tennis court east of the Physical Educational building before the opening of school. On the inside of the Physical Education building a new hair drier has been added for the use of the girls following the swimming classes. The air in this new machine is heated by a steam coil and forced out by an electric blower to the various outlets. Eight people can be accommodated at one time.

Based upon the number of advance room reservations and large number of inquiries, school officials are making plans to accommodate the largest attendance in years, Superintendent A. A. Dowell states that registration will take place on September 30.

MILLIONS OF TOADS DESCEND ON MORRIS

Morris—There is need for a Pied Piper of some sort in Morris. Literally millions of small toads appeared as though by magic after a big rain recently, covering the streets and making themselves generally obnoxious. The superstitious will assure you that they came down with the rain, but those who scoff at the "raining toads" idea favor the theory that the hundreds of miniature rivers formed by the rain might have carried them from their breeding places and deposited them in the city. The sidewalks, streets and gutters in many places throughout the city were literally covered with the toads. They gradually thinned out in the next few days, although there are still hundreds of them hopping around the streets. Since mosquitoes which had caused a great deal of discomfort with their hungry hordes disappeared at the same time the toads appeared, there is little sentiment against the latter.

Olivia.—Two Henryville men, with the spirit of bravery predominant only in the rugged pioneers, captured bare handed an untamed, healthy and full grown skunk recently, and for awhile at least had things pretty much their own way. A quick grab resulted in the animal being lifted by the tail, totally disarmed. He was placed in a sack and later dumped into a barrel for the merriment of the spectators. Upon being lifted from the barrel, however, Mr. Skunk got ahold of the side of the barrel wtih his front feet and had a chance to straighten out long enough to enter a protest to the treatment. It has been officially reported that neither George Wacek or Frank Werish slept in the house that night, and that the course in skunk handling has been definitely postponed.

THATCHER WHEAT YIELDS WELL IN VALLEY THIS YEAR

According to R. S. Dunham, Northwest School and Station agronomist, there has been a tremendous amount of interest shown in rust resistant varieties of small grain this year. Of particular interest has been Thatcher, a rust resistant wheat developed by the Minnesota Experiment station from a double cross. A single cross of Marquis and Iumillo (durum) and another single cross of Marquis and Kanred (winter wheat) were the parents of Thatcher, states Professor Dunham. Prior to its distribution in 1934, it was grown in plot trials at the Northwest Experiment Station for seven years. As a result the following information had ben obtained before this variety was recommended to the farmers.

The average yield for Thatcher was 28.2 bu. an acre; for Ceres, 26.8 bu., and for Marquis, 22.7 bu. The average weight per bushel for Thatcher was 59.4 lbs.; for Ceres, 60.7 lbs., and for Marquis, 58.6 lbs. The average time required for maturity of Thatcher was 97 days; Ceres, 99 days, and Marquis, 100 days. The average percentage of loose smut in Thatcher was 0; in Ceers 1.5, and Marquis, 0.8. The average percentage of stem rust on Thatcher was only a trace; on Ceres, 18.0, and Marquis, 35.2. As an average of four years the protein content of Thatcher was 14.4 per cent; Ceres 13.8 per cent; and Marquis, 13.9 per cent. As an average of four years the percentage of dead spikes due to the wheat stem maggot in Thatcher was 8.8; in Ceres, 5.7; and Marquis, 6.8.

Thatcher is a beardless, stiff-strawed, common or bread wheat acceptable for milling. Approximately 5000 acres of this variety were harvested by Minnesota Red River Valley pure seed growers this year. A list of these growers will be mailed upon request. In accordance with the customary plan at the Northwest Station, no orders for station seed will be accepted until the annual pure seed announcement is sent out. This announcement will be sent to any who desire it after the seed is cleaned and ready for market.

Although Thatcher wheat has been the object of most comment, states Professor Dunham, Anthony, Rusota, and Minrus oats proved just as rust resistant this summer and Peatland was outstanding in this respect among barley varieties. Certain other varieties of wheat, oats, and barley were unhurt by rust in some instances but for the most part they escaped because of early maturity rather than any rust resistance.

$2,500,000 STATE ROAD LETTING SET FOR SEPTEMBER 20

Bids on $2,500,000 of road construction projects in seventeen counties will be opened by the state highway department September 20, N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner, announced today.

This is the largest letting of state highway work in three years and comprises the first group of jobs in the state's $7,500,000 regular federal aid program for the current fiscal year. The federal government pays approximately one-half the cost. Highway bonds will be sold to finance the state's share, as authorized by the last legislature.

Included in the first letting will be nearly 85 miles of concrete paving on which the cost estimate is approximately $2,350,000. Bids also will be taken on six bridges to cost about $80,000 and on eighteen miles of grading to cost about $100,000.

Mr. Elsberg estimated that about one-third of the work included in the September 20 group can be completed before the winter freeze-up. The remainder will be done early next summer. Projects are located in the following counties.

Blue Earth, Winona, Redwood, Martin, Freeborn, Norman, St. Louis, Becker, Grant, Faribault, Crow Wing, Chippewa, Pine, Pope, Stearns, Roseau and Goodhue. Included is the paving of 11.2 miles on T. H. 59 from Ogema to a point two miles south of Calloway.

Height of Hurdles

The average height of the hurdles used in the jumping classes of the better horse shows is between 3½ feet and 4 feet. They are, of course, graduated.

DON'T BLAME HORSE; ADVERTISING DID IT!

Tracy.—Everyone knows that it pays to advertise, but even the most ardent space salesmen have up to this time not realized that even horses are influenced by what they read. "Bangles", a very sober milk wagon horse at Tracy, suddenly became uncontrollable on the street and lunged through a heavy plate glass window of a garage. Half cut to pieces, the poor animal got into the display room but failed to lossen himself from hte wagon. Since the accident the owner has been accused of everything from feeding the horse too much to disturbing its sleep too early in the morning. He has completely exonerated himself from all accusations, however, as he reveals that the horse saw a sign in the garage window: "Change your plugs every 10,000 miles."

PEDESTRIAN KILLED ON VILLAGE STREET

Lloyd Ross Meets Instant Death When Hit by Auto Here Saturday Night

Lloyd Ross, age 23, who had been employed on the Black farms since last spring, was instantly killed at about 12:15 last Saturday night when struck by a speeding auto as he stepped into the street in front of Biskey's confectionery with the intention of crossing. Eye witnesses to the sad affair state the car was travelling at a high rate of speed and continued thru town without stopping after the accident.

Thinking perhaps life was not extinct, two young Thief River men who were present, loaded young Ross into their car and made a hurried trip to the hospital at Thief River where it was found death had been instantaneous because of a crushed skull and other injuries. Information furnished by these men enabled officers at Thief River Falls to locate the death car in that city, and the driver, Erven Tommerdahl, and two companions were taken into custody, two others being kept under surveillance.

At a coroner's inquest held Monday night the jury found Ross came to his death by being struck by a car driven "in a careless manner" by Erven Tommerdahl. Companions of the latter were released from custody following the inquest.

Lloyd Ross was a son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ross of Alvarado, Minn. Employed at the Black farm since last spring, he was well thought of by all his co-workers and was a very likeable young man. Besides his parents, he is survived by two sisters and three brothers at Alvarado. The body was taken Tuesday to Alvarado and funeral services were held there Wednesday.

This is the first instance of a fatal auto accident happening within the village altho several deaths have occurred on the highway north and south of town.

Tommerdahl waived preliminary hearing Wednesday in municipal court at Thief River Falls, and was bound over to district court on a charge of manslaughter in the second degree.

Mrs. J. H. Mayer-Oakes, Mrs. C. H. Jung and son Loren, of Thief River Falls, were visitors Sunday at the Kirkconnel home.

St. Hilaire 4-H Band Which Appeared at Minnesota State Fair Last Week

BAND RETURNS FROM MINNESOTA FAIR

The St. Hilaire 4-H Club Band returned Friday morning after having a most delightful trip to the Minnesota State Fair where they represented Pennington County in the state-wide 4-H Band competition in which they were awarded second place.

Arriving at Minneapolis at 8:00 Tuesday morning, they were transported by Land O'Lakes trucks to the U. Farm Campus, the boys being assigned to the Gymnasium and the girls to the Dormitory. That afternoon the band played at the 4-H picnic held at the Livestock Pavilion, and had their picture taken by a staff photographer of the Minneapolis Star.

Wednesday afternoon they played their contest numbers in the 4-H building under the grandstand, and were later given opportunity to visit points of interest on the grounds. At 4:30 they practiced with other 4-H members (1400 strong) for the march to the fairground stands which took place that evening. A photographer for the Minneapolis Journal took pictures of the group and local band which appeared in that paper last week.

Thursday the band played at 4-H assembly at 8:30, and had another sight seeing trip before leaving the grounds at noon. Trip to uptown Minneapolis was by street car, and the band members were guests at a dinner given at the Radisson Hotel sponsored by the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association. That evening the band played at a 4-H banquet at the Radisson Hotel at which 1400 guests were present including the Minneapolis ball club, Mayor Latimer, and Mr. Christgau, W. P. A. Administartor. Following the banquet, the band marched in a group to the Union Station and boarded their car homeward bound.

All members of the band, as well as its director, are well pleased with their trip and hope to have opportunity to go again next year.

SCHOOL REOPENS AFTER VACATION

The local school re-opened Monday morning after the annual summer vacation of three months. Enrollment the first day was as large as last year, there being 67 in high school and 90 in the grades. The Freshman class has the honor of being the largest, there being 26 enrolled. As many pupils are employed at various places at the present time, and will enter school later, it is expected the total enrollment this season will be considerably above that of 1934.

The faculty for this year is as follows: Supt. M. R. Graham, Prin. Bernice Anderson, Coach Hal Widsten, 7 and 8 grades, Ruth Onerheim, 5 and 6 grades, Olive Olson, 3 and 4 grades, Ruth Bakke, 1 and 2 grades, Lorothy Gunstad.

Activities in which students will have an opportunity to take part will be basketball, baseball, dramatics, Glee Club and band.

8:45 in the morning and 12:45 in afternoon has been set as the time students from town can enter the building.

Remodeling of exterior of the Schantzen garage building was finished last week. More work is to be done on interior to provide space for warm storage of cars the coming winter.

ERDMANS FETED ON 25TH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Erdmann were pleasantly surprised at their home Sunday afternoon, when eighty relatives and friends tendered them a surprise party, the occasion being their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

During the course of the afternoon an impressive service was conducted by Rev. Ed. E. Domke, the remainder being spent in a sociable manner, at six o'clock a very bounteous lunch was served.

As a token of remembrance of the happy occasion, Mr. and Mrs. Erdmann were presented with a set of silverware from their friends.

Those present were: Rev. and Mrs. Ed. E. Domke and family of Crookston, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Seeger, E. A. Seeger and family, Fred Seeger and family, Fred E. Miller and family, Henry Thode and family, Martin Funte and family, Emil Zutz and family, Fred Lehrer and family, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Harmoning, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gerlach and son Gust, Mr. and Mrs. Nick Thode, Mrs. Wm. Kuehn, Mrs. Minnie Miller Mr. Harry Miller and Myrom Lee, all of Red Lake Falls; Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Seeger and family and Mr. Tom Melby of Oklee; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gother and Mr. Adolph Zutz of Wylie; Mrs. Fred Ulrich, Hulda and Arthur Ulrich, Mrs. Fritz Ulrich and children, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Ulrich and sons, Mr. and Mrs. Gust Larson and sons and Miss Gertrude Drees.

F.-L. PICNIC SEPT. 15

The fourth annual Farmer-Labor picnic in this county will be held Sunday, Sept. 15 at the Heinze grove, south of Greenwood cemetery, at Thief River Falls. The program will start at 1:00. The speakers will be Paul A. Rasmussen, state budget commissioner, Henry G. Teigen, Editor of the Minnesota Leader, Chas. D. Egley, Manager of the Farmers Union Livestock Commission, Senator Geo. Lommen and Representatives Erick Friberg and J. O. Melby.

An old-time orchestra will furnish music. Coffee will be served free.

GETS HIGH BUTTER SCORE

Lester Olson, manager of the local creamery, was given the highest score of any creamery in this district and section on his butter entry at the Minnesota State Fair last week. Mr. Olson's score was 93½ which was only two points lower than the prize winning entry for the entire state. Considering that creameries located close in to the Twin Cities have certain advantages in manufacture of butter, Mr. Olson's showing was exceptionally fine.

FORMER CITIZENS PICNIC IN ST. PAUL

The annual get-together summer meeting and picnic of former St. Hilaire people now residing in and near the Twin Cities, was held at the Como Park grounds at St. Paul last Sunday. A large number of people were present and a very enjoyable afternoon was spent talking over old times. Mrs. Milton Schantzen (Esther Fricker) was elected president of the group for the coming year. A similar meeting by Thief River Falls people was held at another section of the grounds the same day making the occasion doubly enjoyable.

CLARENCE ERICKSON DIES IN AUTO WRECK

Funeral services were conducted Monday afternoon at the Trinity Lutheran church at Thief River Falls for Clarence Erickson, former resident of that city who was killed late last Thursday night in a head-on automobile collision near Detroit Lakes. Mr. Erickson, who was 37 years of age, was employed by H. D. Lee Company of Minneapolis travelling salesman. He was employed for several years in the Oen store at Thief River Falls prior to his acceptance of the travelling position, and was very well known to a large number of people in this village and vicinity. He and Mrs. Erickson, who is a daughter of Secretary of State Mike Holm, moved from Thief River Falls to Grand Forks only about ten days ago.

Mr. Erickson was born at Crookston and spent his boyhood years in that city. Besides his widow, Mr. Erickson is survived by his mother, Mrs. Ole Erickson, and a sister, Mrs. Elias Rolland at Thief River Falls.

Two Chicago men, occupants of the car that collided with that of Mr. Erickson, suffered only minor injuries. At an inquest held at Detroit Lakes the day after the unfortunate occurance, the jury found the accident was "unavoidable."

New concrete foundations are being poured this week for the Spectator office building. A new addition is to be erected in the near future.

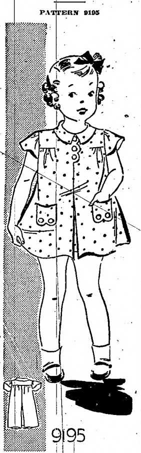
Tot's Play Frock That "Stays Put"

PATTERN 9195



Is she never still a minute? Racing madly about, arms and heels flying? Then here's just the little play frock she needs, the kind that will "stay-put"—the neat little collar and tidy button-up front keep the dress from pulling askew! The little skirt, with its front and back pleat, allows for freedom—and with the matching bloomers, what matter if she does play leap frog with brother? The cute flare sleeve is cooler, but the pattern permits a puffed version if you prefer it. You could outline the scallops with bias tape to match the dots and buttons. Most practical in printed pique or percale, and daintiest in dotted swiss, or dimity.

Pattern 9195 may be ordered only in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8. Size 4 requires 2¼ yards of 36-inch fabric. Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to the Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth street, New York, N. Y.

Far From the Crowd

"Are you looking forward to a vacation?"

"It won't be exactly a vacation," said Senator Sorghum, "but I'll be glad to get away. A man needs some time to himself so that he can worry without being interrupted by speeches."

Insides

"What we want to do," said the excited citizen, "is to show the public all the inside facts."

"Why?" asked old Doc Pillsbury, "There is expert use for an X-ray photograph, but it is entirely lacking in popular fascination."

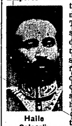
American Company Given Great Ethiopian Grant

FIVE days before the meeting of the League of Nations council to consider the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel Emperor Haile Selassie took a step that may complicate matters tremendously. The "king of kings" signed and sealed a document turning over to American interests sweeping concessions for the development of oil, mineral and other natural resources in more than half his kingdom. The charter was granted to the African Exploration and Development corporation, and runs for 75 years. It was obtained by F. W. Rickett, an English promoter, representing the corporation, and the transaction was witnessed by Everett Andrews Colson, American financial adviser to the emperor.



Haile Selassie

The emperor himself said the concession was given to Standard Oil, but officials of Standard Oil of New Jersey and other Standard Oil units flatly declared they had no knowledge of or interest in the grant. The company was incorporated in Delaware by the United States Corporation company of New York.

The governments of Great Britain, France and Italy were much stirred by this development. The British government formally "advised" the emperor to "withhold" the concession, asserting that it considered this a matter for consultations between the English, French and Italian governments. The emperor in an interview declared he did not see why a concession granted to Americans should create international complications or involve the treaty which the three nations named signed in 1906. That pact creates "spheres of influence" in Ethiopia but never was recognized by the Ethiopian government.

"As a sovereign state we have the right to do anything we please in our own territory," said Haile Selassie. "The United States is not a party to the 1906 treaty in which England, France and Italy merely pledge themselves to do nothing to encroach on the interests of others. This is one of the reasons I gave the concession to Standard Oil. As the agreement is already signed, sealed, and delivered, I do not see how it can be recalled if such a thing is suggested by the British government."

It would seem that this action by the emperor has forestalled Mussolini's intentions to seize and develop the natural resources of Ethiopia, though Rickett said he felt there was "plenty of room for the duce in the general exploitation of such a hospitable land as Ethiopia without resorting to force of arms." In Rome it was unofficially asserted that the concession would not alter Italy's military program and that for the time she may welcome commercial enterprises of a neutral character undertaken in Ethiopia because the job of exploitation there is so vast and complex.

It was announced in Addis Ababa that the emperor also had granted to British and Egyptian interests a charter for the conservation of the water of Lake Tsana, the source of the Blue Nile—which is of vast importance to Great Britain. It is proposed to build a dam and pumping stations.

Premier Laval Ready to Jump Either Way

PIERRE LAVAL, French premier, went to Geneva for the league council session with full power to act as he saw fit in the Italo-Ethiopian affair, the cabinet having authorized him to oppose sanctions against Italy if he believed that wise, or to try to persuade the council to regard Mussolini's contemplated invasion of the African empire as a "colonial expedition" rather than a war. Laval's firm intention was to keep the friendship of both Italy and Great Britain if possible. For a time it was thought that, if he couldn't do this, he would stand with Italy, but later it appeared more likely that if it came to a showdown he would sacrifice Italian friendship for British. Herriot and some other members of the cabinet were reported to be in favor of sanctions.

Premier Laval

Dispatches from London said it was rumored that the British government was ready to announce, on the day Mussolini starts war on Ethiopia, that it is no longer interested in maintaining the balance of power in Europe. This would mean it would not interfere if Hitler decided to grab Austria, which would be a terrific blow to the duce. The British admiralty sent its powerful Mediterranean fleet eastward toward the Suez canal and strengthened its garrison at Malta.

Mussolini went ahead with his war preparations, seemingly unconcerned by all the opposition he has aroused. In the military maneuvers he was conducting near Bolzano live ammunition was used in the artillery firing, and one soldier was killed and two wounded by shell fragments. In a fiery speech to the soldiers, with King Victor Emmanuel standing beside him, the duce shouted:

"The world must know once again that while there is talk so absurd and provocative of penalties (sanctions) we will not give up a single soldier, a single sailor, a single aviator."

All the Italian submarines were assembled off Sicily ready to lay a defensive line across the Mediterranean from that island to Africa, and the Sicilian coast defense batteries were strengthened. The premier already has issued numerous decrees for raising the funds necessary for his adventure and to forestall embargoes.

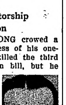
Neutrality Act Signed by President Roosevelt

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT signed the congressional resolution of neutrality, announcing that he approved it because it is "intended as an expression of the fixed desire of the people of the United States to avoid any action which might involve us in war."

However, he made plain his objection to the inflexible provisions of the act, saying it was conceivable that situations might arise in which these might have "exactly the opposite effect from that which was intended." The resolution calls upon the President to place an embargo on the export of "arms, ammunitions and implements of war" to all belligerents in the event of war, and creates a national munitions control board. The application of the arms embargo lasts only until March 1, 1936.

Huey Long's Dictatorship Due for Investigation

SENATOR HUEY LONG crowed a lot about the success of his one-man filibuster which killed the third deficiency appropriation bill, but he didn't add to his popularity among the people who looked forward for help from the agencies that are now hampered by the failure of the measure. Besides that, it is now admitted that his filibuster rescued the Democratic house leaders from a tight place in the matter of the cotton and wheat loans. Still further, it appears that Huey's domination of Louisiana is going to be investigated by a congressional committee. That committee probably will be headed by Representative William L. Granfield of Massachusetts, for he was the author of the elections investigation bill, which was found to contain a little "joker." This joker gives the committee such wide powers that it can probe into all the facts concerning Long's complete control of election affairs in his state and the methods by which he has attained to the position of a dictator there.



W. L. Granfield

Russia Again Warned About Communist Activities

RUSSIA'S reply in America's protest against the subversive plotting of the Communists in Soviet territory was a rejection and a coldly worded re-assertion of the old and more than dubious position that the Moscow government is not and cannot be held responsible for the doings of the Communist Internationale. This was considered for four days by official Washington and then it was decided to let the matter drop with another and rather milder warning. The new note sent to Moscow said:

"If the Soviet government pursues a policy of permitting activities on its territory involving interference with the internal affairs of the United States, instead of 'preventing' such activities, as its written pledge provides, the friendly and official relations between the two countries cannot but be seriously impaired."

Mrs. Harold Ickes Killed in Automobile Accident

MRS. ANNA WILMARTH ICKES, wife of Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, was killed when an automobile in which she and three friends were riding was overturned in a ditch at Velarde, N. M. Mrs. Genevieve Forbes Herrick, well-known newspaper writer; Ibrahim Seyfullah, secretary of the Turkish embassy in Washington, and Frank Allen of Gallup, N. M., the driver, were severely injured. Allen died later.

Mrs. Ickes, who for years was deeply interested in the Indians of the Southwest, had been inspecting an Indian settlement at Taos and was returning to Santa Fe. Before she went to Washington with her husband in 1933 she was a leader in club work in Chicago, and she served three terms in the Illinois legislature. Among the many notable persons who attended the funeral in Winnetka, suburb of Chicago, was Mrs. Roosevelt, wife of the President.

Norris and Mullen in Row About Power Plants

SENATOR GEORGE NORRIS of Nebraska and Arthur F. Mullen, former Democratic national committeeman for that state, are engaged in a warm dispute that may cause considerable embarrassment for President Roosevelt, friend of both men. Mullen carried to the White House a hot protest against a $20,000,000 power project which is sponsored by Norris. He is attorney for two $7,000,000 power plants which already have been approved by the PWA, and he asserts there is no field for the enormous amount of electrical energy that would be developed by the three projects, and probably not enough water for all of them.

The first project approved by PWA was at Columbus, Neb., 80 miles west of Omaha, and situated on the Loupe river. The second was on the Platte river, 150 miles farther west, at Sutherland, Neb. Both were approved in the fall of 1933. In addition to the original grants and loans approximating $15,000,000, there was added an allocation of $2,500,000 later.

In the rivalry between these two projects the same argument about the shortage of water was used, and Mullen was criticized for acting as attorney for both.

Report That Lindbergh Baby Is Still Living

ATTORNEYS for Richard Bruno Hauptmann plan to seek a new trial for the convicted kidnaper and slayer of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's first-born son on the ground that the child still lives and that they can produce him in court.

The boy, five years and six months old and "the image of the Lindbergh baby," is said to be in custody of a Flushing (L. I.) family, which took him from an orphanage and adopted him.

Stock Raisers Urge That Tariffs Be Maintained

BECAUSE of the possibility of a continued increase in the importation of live stock and its products, an appeal in the name of more than 300,000 farmers and ranchmen, members and patrons of the National Live Stock Marketing association, was sent to President Roosevelt urging that present tariffs and sanitary restrictions on animals, meats, lard, and similar products be maintained.

In a telegram, signed by Charles A. Ewing, president of the co-operative association, the chief executive was told that any concessions in the way of lower tariffs and the removal of embargos preventing diseased foreign animals from entering this country would further cripple the live stock industry, and tend to defeat the recovery program.

Queen Astrid of Belgium Killed in Auto Crash

BOWED down by deep grief, the Belgian people laid to rest their beloved queen, Astrid, who was killed near Lucerne, Switzerland, when the automobile driven by King Leopold swerved from the road and dashed against a tree. Astrid's skull was crushed and she died almost immediately in the arms of her husband, who was cut painfully by the smashed windshield.

The queen's body, taken back to Brussels, was taken to the cathedral of St. Gudule for the funeral ceremony and then was interred in the royal crypt at Laeken, where lie the remains of the late King Albert. The services were simple, in accord with the characters of Astrid and Leopold.

Astrid, a princess of Sweden, became the wife of Leopold in 1926 when he was the duke of Brabant, and the marriage was a genuine love match. She immediately endeared herself to the people of Belgium. Three children were born to her and Leopold.

King George's Third Son Engaged to Marry

KING GEORGE of Great Britain announced the engagement of the duke of Gloucester, his third son, to Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott. The duke is thirty-five years old and is the soldier of the royal family. Lady Alice, who is thirty-three, traces her descent from a natural son of Charles II. The date for the wedding has not been set.

With his brother's marriage the forty-one-year-old prince of Wales will be the last bachelor among the king's sons.

German Catholic Prelates Boldly Defy Herr Hitler

BOLDLY defying Reichsfuehrer Hitler, the three cardinals, 23 archbishops and other prelates of the Catholic church in Germany, issued a pastoral letter, which was read in every church, strongly criticizing the anti-religious policies of the Nazi government and intimidating that the Vatican may enforce an interdict for other nations to break off relations with Germany.

J. A. Moffett Resigns As Federal Housing Chief

JAMES A. MOFFETT has resigned as federal housing commissioner, carrying out his long-expressed desire to return to private business. It was presumed in Washington that he would be succeeded by Stewart McDonald.

In his letter of resignation Mr. Moffett told the President that despite necessary delays in getting the housing program under way, the housing administration was insuring construction and repair loans at the rate of $60,000,000 a month.

Redwood Falls—Plans for the state Sunday school convention October 24 and 25 were furthered at a meeting here between city officials and H. L. Stright of St. Paul, general secretary of the state unit. The Methodist Episcopal church will be headquarters of the convention.

St. Paul—Shooting of mourning doves in Minnesota this year has been prohibited by the conservation commission, Erling Swenson, director, said. The commission took this action at its last meeting and at the same time ordered upland plover and woodcock protected.

Chatfield—At a special school election, a $44,000 bond issue was authorized, for the purpose of building an $80,000 school auditorium. A federal grant will furnish the remaining $36,000. The bond issue carried by 10 votes, with a total vote of 538 cast out of a possible 700.

Faribault—The Faribault city council voted to reject and to refuse further consideration of the plan to ask the United States government for a grant of 45 per cent of the cost of a new municipal electric plant. The proposal was for the city to sell bonds to pay the remaining 55 per cent of construction cost.

St. Paul—Approval of a batch of 235 work relief projects here by the state WPA administration, brings the total work relief program for Minnesota up to $32,104,000, according to Victor Christgau, WPA head. Eighty of the state's 87 counties share in the projects which have been approved and forwarded to Washington up to this time.

St. Paul—Between March 15 and Aug. 1, the SERA provided employment for 110,000 persons on work projects costing $33,711,101, L. P. Zimmerman, administrator, reported to the state executive council. Of the total expenditures, $28,556,695 went for labor, $3,899,288 to livestock relief clients and $1,683,865 to non-relief clients.

Ortonville—A new corn eating champion rules the world, because the defending titleholder didn't take his training seriously. Berge Simonson, 178 pound farmer living near here, dethroned the reigning corn chewer, Ed (King Korn) Kottwitz, by the margin of a single ear, 58 to 57, and assumed the latter's title of "Champion corn eater of the world."

Two Harbors—Lake county became one of two counties in the state having no bonded indebtedness as a result of the clearing up by the local school district of $18,000 in obligations during the past year, C. E. Campton, superintendent, said in his annual report. Not only was the school district able to pay up its debts, but it closed the year August 1 with a cash balance of $79,191.60.

Duluth—An increase of 203 quarantines last week for equine encephalomeylitis, commonly known as sleeping sickness, discloses a further spread of the malady from northwestern Minnesota into southern counties, officials of the state livestock sanitary board have announced. The total number of premises under quarantine is 853 and in the majority of cases from one to three horses are afflicted.

Aitkin—Only one of Minnesota's 7,200 rural schools and none of its secondary public schools failed to open its doors to pupils as the school districts of the state began another year in the most promising financial condition for the past three years. The school that failed to open because of a tax delinquency of 99 per cent in its district was at Arthide, in Aitkin county. Mr. Engum hopes to work out a merger plan whereby the pupils of the district can be accommodated in two neighboring districts.

Proper Seating Will Help Keep Wholesome Posture

"If posture is not comfortable it is not good, and a chair that does not make good posture comfortable is not a good chair," declares Henry Eastman Bennett in "Toward an Upsitting Generation," an article in Hygeia in which he gives the essentials of good posture and describes a study of proper seating in the schools.

Good posture is essentially relaxed. As soon as one loses the balance of erectness one can sustain oneself only by strain on the back muscles against an adverse leverage, which increases as the degree of stoop increases until one is actually hanging by the back muscles and leaning on the viscera. This is both fatiguing and unwholesome.

A simple posture test for a seat is to sit as far back in it as you can and relax against the back. If there is the slightest tendency either to slide forward on the seat or to pitch forward at the shoulders it will require an increasingly hard fight against gravity to maintain erect posture in it.

Quick, Pleasant Successful Elimination

Let's be frank—there's only one way for your body to rid itself of the waste material that causes acidity, gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Your intestines must function and the way to make them move quickly, pleasantly, successfully, without griping or harsh irritants is to chew a Milnesia Wafer thoroughly, in accordance with directions on the bottle or tin, then swallow.

Milnesia Wafers, pure milk of magnesia in tablet form, each equivalent to a tablespoon of liquid milk of magnesia, correct acidity, bad breath, flatulence, at their source, and enable you to have the quick, pleasant, successful elimination so necessary to abundant health.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles at 35c and 60c or in convenient tins at 20c. Recommended by thousands of physicians. All good druggists carry them. Start using these pleasant tasting effective wafers today.

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

DO you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination; backache, headache, dizziness, swollen feet and ankles? Are you tired, nervous—feel all unstrung and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly, for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store.

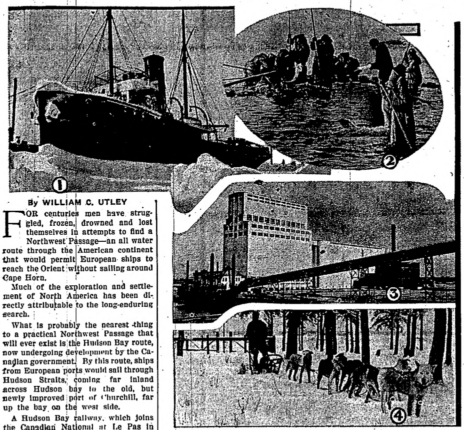
"Northwest Passage" Awaits Trade



Shown here is a graphic cross-section of life at the new port of Churchill. 1. A ship at one of the wharves in winter. 2. Native Eskimos fishing along the flat, barren coast. 3. The new 2,500,000-bushel grain elevator. 4. An Eskimo dog-team, principal mode of travel, with the exception of the new Hudson Bay railway.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

FOR centuries men have struggled, frozen, drowned and lost themselves in attempts to find a Northwest Passage—an all water route through the American continent that would permit European ships to reach the Orient without sailing around Cape Horn.

Much of the exploration and settlement of North America has been directly attributable to the long-enduring search.

What is probably the nearest thing to a practical Northwest Passage that will ever exist is the Hudson Bay route, now undergoing development by the Canadian government. By this route, ships from European ports would sail through Hudson Straits, coming far inland across Hudson bay to the old, but newly improved port of Churchill, far up the bay on the west side.

A Hudson Bay railway, which joins the Canadian National at Le Pas in Manitoba, has been built with its northern terminus in Churchill. This will now allow ships unloading at Churchill to transfer their cargoes to railway cars there, which will carry them across western Canada to Vancouver, where they may be placed aboard ship again and sent to sea on the final lap of its journey to Japan, China, India or other Oriental markets.

Such a route has several distinct advantages over the recognized routes of today, it is claimed. The distance of travel from Churchill to Liverpool is about the same as that from Montreal, Quebec, St. John and Portland, and less than from New York, yet Churchill is much farther into the heart of Canada and North America. To wheat farmers of Manitoba and western Canada it could be made vastly important, for its supporters claim that it could lower the price of Canadian wheat four cents a bushel. This, of course, would be of vital importance to wheat farmers in Minnesota and the Dakotas, for it would make Canadian wheat a much more serious competitor, although it is possible that some American farmers would also find it cheaper to ship their wheat though Hudson Bay than through Duluth and the Great Lakes as so many of them now do.

Needs Oriental Trade.

But to make it profitable for shipping companies to pick up cargoes of wheat at Churchill, bound for Liverpool and European ports, their ships must be able to bring pay loads into Churchill as well as take them out. It would hardly be worth while for many ships to enter Hudson Bay only under balance to pick up a cargo for the return trip.

The answer seems to be for the shipping companies to develop the Oriental trade, so that ships can bring European manufactured goods to be transferred to rail for Vancouver and the Orient, and pick up wheat at Churchill for the return trip. That this development will eventually come about is not at all unprobable, for the Canadian government has spent more than $57,000,000 in developing the Hudson Bay route in the past few years and it is doubtful that such an outlay of capital will be satisfied with the handful of ships which have cleared Churchill harbor since the completion of the Hudson Bay railway five years ago.

The history of this development is fascinating because it is heroic. Although he was really not the first adventurer to poke the nose of his ship into Hudson straits, it is Hendrik Hudson to whom goes the honor of actually discovering the bay which now bears his name. He found it in 1610 and wintered in the part of it known as James bay. With a few sick sailors he was cast adrift in an open boat and that was the last ever heard of him.

The first real occupation of the site of the present Churchill occurred nine years later and was incidental to the search of Jens Munck, a Danish nobleman, for the Northwest Passage. There were two ships in his company, but during the winter he was forced to spend at Churchill, all but Munck and two sailors perished. When the ice cleared in 1620—the same year the Pilgrims landed on Plymouth Rock—the three of them sailed back to Europe, leaving at Churchill as evidence of their visit a brass cannon, stamped with the Danish royal mark. In 1931, more than 300 years later, a cairn, built of beach stones, was erected to Munck's honor in Battery park, Churchill.

Two Frenchmen, Radisson and Groseilliers, spent the years from 1658 to 1662 in the country about Churchill and returned home with tales of the wealth in furs that existed there. Failing to interest their countrymen, they told their stories to Prince Rupert of Great Britain, and under his direction, the Hudson Bay company was formed. Most of the subsequent exploration was the result of this company's successful efforts to build up the fur trade.

History of Exploration.

Capt. James Young, under the auspices of the Hudson Bay company, established a post at Churchill in 1689, but it burned down shortly afterward. In the following two decades, Hudson Bay developments suffered from the wars between England and France, but in 1717 another post was built at Churchill. Over a period of years following, the stronghold, Fort Prince of Wales was constructed, and the ruins of the fort are still a Churchill landmark.

An Irishman, Sir Arthur Dobbs, sailed from Churchill in 1735 in another of the many efforts to find the Northwest Passage which are linked with the poet's history, but after several attempts he, too, was disappointed. On the rock near the port may still be seen the names of his two ships, Furnace and Discovery, carved there by the sailors. Another name hewn from Churchill rock is that of Samuel Hearne who, operating from Churchill as a base in the years from 1769 to 1772, uncovered much of the vast mineral wealth of the Hudson Bay country.

Further development of the territory under the leadership of Mathew Cocking and Lord Selkirk followed, but the next really important historical character in Churchill annals was another seeker for the elusive Northwest Passage. He was Sir John Franklin, who spent the better part of three decades exploring the Arctic and Hudson Bay. On his third expedition, which left Churchill in the ships Erebus and Terror in 1845, he found it—to his sorrow. The log of the Terror revealed that a Northwest Passage had been found to exist at last, but Franklin and all of his crew perished in the Arctic cold.

With the growth of population in Western Canada and the increasing importance of the territory's agriculture, need began to be felt for larger markets. The best market, of course, was Europe, but it was hard of access because of the lack of railroads connecting the western farm lands with a port.

In 1908 the department of railways and canals began surveying the right of way for the railway, deciding to extend it from Le Pas to Port Nelson, rather than to Churchill, because the cost of a line to Port Nelson was estimated at $4,000,000 less than one to Churchill. While the line was started from the south end, activity was begun to complete port facilities at Port Nelson, but during the World war the project was abandoned

Port Nelson Is Abandoned.

It was not taken up again until 1926. During the eight years of inactivity the line had deteriorated beyond use. It was decided that before beginning again, another survey should be made of the relative merits of the Churchill and Port Nelson terminals, this time by an impartial engineer. The Churchill terminus won out.

It had been thought earlier, on incomplete data available, that the line to Churchill was virtually impossible of construction. It would have to be longer than the line to Port Nelson, and 75 miles of it would be through the frozen muskegs, which it was believed would thaw out during the summer, thus damaging the roadbed beyond repair. But in 1927 it was discovered that a gravel fill over the muskeg would act as a heat insulator and prevent it from thawing.

Harbor possibilities were much better at Churchill. Port Nelson could be entered only at high tide, and then would not admit ships of more than 26 feet draft, while at Churchill provision for 30-foot could be made at any tide. The cost of completing the work at Churchill was estimated to be less than at Port Nelson, and the engineers estimated that it could be accomplished in three years less time.

A permanent wharf was built, mooring buoys installed, the channel deepened and the harbor otherwise improved. With the completion of the railway, great freight sheds were constructed and cattle pens set up.

Today the one outstanding landmark of Churchill from any approach is the giant grain elevator. It is a towering white skyscraper that seems oddly out of place along the flat and barren shore, which is frozen the year round. It holds 2,500,000 bushels, and provisions have been made for enlarging this capacity to 10,000,000 bushels. Wheat stored there will "keep" almost indefinitely because of the year-round low temperatures that produce natural refrigeration.

Patrol Ice Areas.

Another imposing building is the power house, with its three generators capable of carrying a load of 3,600 kilowatts. It takes power to operate the four grain car unloaders at the elevator, each capable of emptying eight cars, a total of 10,000 bushels, every hour. After the grain has been elevated it can be delivered to the deep-water wharf by a four-belt conveyor system which runs in a gallery. The shipping gallery in its 1,462 feet of length, provides berths at the wharf for three ships at one time under the gallery spouts. Twenty-three boat spouts make it possible to deliver four streams into ships at the rate of 20,000 bushels an hour for each stream.

All of the port facilities are complete for present use. The next step in the development of the Hudson Bay route is the improvement of navigation in the bay itself and in Hudson strait. The waters are patrolled by a sea-going, ice-breaking tug, the Ocean Eagle, which makes scouting trips each year at the time the ice breaks up. It must be remembered that it is very cold in this part of the bay territory; the mean yearly temperature is about 17 degrees, and the strait and bay are navigable without ice-breakers only about six weeks of the year. The ice in Churchill harbor usually breaks up about the middle of June and closes up again during the last two weeks of October.

The Canadian government operates an ice-breaker, the Stanley, to keep the strait and bay open as long as possible and maintains an aerial scouting patrol to keep navigators posted on the ice conditions with which they are likely to meet.

About the only thing this new Northwest Passage route needs to become an important factor in world commerce is shipping. In 1931 two ships cleared Churchill harbor; in 1932, 10 ships; in 1933, 10 ships; in 1934, 15 ships. At the time of this writing only two ships had cleared Churchill harbor in the entire summer of 1935.

Should European interests see fit to build up Churchill as a shipping point for manufactured goods bound for the Orient, the shipping should multiply many times. The facilities—rail, harbor and return pay-loads—are there. The Canadians who built the Hudson Bay Route are confident that eventually the new Northwest Passage will be a busy one.

Peninsular War Relics

Workmen have discovered heirlooms believed to have been hidden by Queen Carlotta Joaquina of Portugal to save them from looters during the French occupation of Lisbon in the Peninsular War of 1808-14. The men were installing electric lights in the ancient royal palace at Queluz, and found the heirlooms behind a panel in the wall of Queen Carlotta's bedroom.

One of the articles, an exquisitely worked altar crucifix of solid silver, weighs more than ten pounds. There are also six altar candlesticks of silver. All the articles belong to the period of King John V, 1706-1750.

Long Time Between Drinks for Many Hawaiian Cows

Reports on cattle in Hawaii that do not drink water for long periods are verified by a representative of the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, in Honolulu, who tells of a number of cases where ranch cattle in the dry regions get along for months in spite of the lack of streams, springs, water holes, and artificial water supplies. The animals get the needed moisture from the succulent leaves of cactus or other plants, from dew and rain on leaves, and from occasional small pools that remain after rain.

There have been stories that some of these cattle refuse to drink water from a pool or tank and that they are even afraid of water. The bureau man reports that ranchers do not corroborate such statements. Ranchers say that cattle find pools often enough so that they are acquainted with the appearance of water in that form.

On one large ranch on the Island of Hawaii, only 6 inches of rain fell in 1933 instead of the usual 20 to 40 inches. The cattle were turned in on a large cactus area where there was no available water except that in the plants, and very few deaths of animals were reported.

Hawks Battle Rescuer

Running to the rescue of a lamb being attacked by two hawks near Gunnindaddy, New South Wales, M. Doyle, a farmer, had to fight for his life. As he approached the lamb one bird swooped savagely at him. Doyle stunned it with the handle of his whip. Seeing its mate on the ground the second hawk dropped its prey and attacked Doyle. The man swung his whip and the lash coiled around the bird's legs. A sharp jerk brought it to the ground. Both birds were killed.

The After-Service

After accurate fitting, next in importance comes the after servicing of glasses during the entire period thru which they are worn. Glasses often become loose, bent, and twisted before the eyes so they cannot give the proper service, and may even be a new source of eyestrain. Dr. Spofford's frequent and regular visits give ample opportunity for this after-service not obtainable in any other way. Investigate and tell your friends of this extraordinary service which is brought regularly almost to your very door.

HUNTING SEASON STARTS SATURDAY

Sportsmen of St. Hilaire and community who enjoy getting out in the fields each fall are anxiously marking time until Saturday noon, September 21, when Minnesota's annual open small game hunting season gets under way. At that time it will become legal to take prairie chickens or pinnated grouse and white-breasted or sharp-tailed grouse in 14 Minnesota counties.

The open season on these species of upland game birds will continue each day until sunset Sunday, September 29, with shooting permitted from sunrise to sunset daily except on the opening day when 12:00 o'clock noon is the starting time.

Open counties are Kanabec, Pine, Carlton, Aitkin, Lake, St. Louis, Itasca, Koochiching, Beltrami, Lake of the Woods, Pennington, Marshall, Roseau and Kittson. All other counties of the state are closed.

A daily bag limit of five birds, possession limit of 10, and a season limit of 18 birds was established by the Minnesota Conservation Commission upon recommendation of Erling Swenson, Director of the Division of Game and Fish, following a careful survey.

A resident small game hunting license costing one dollar is required of all citizens of the state 16 years old or over.

AUCTION SEPT. 27TH

Miss Eliza Hendrickson announces she will have an auction sale of household goods belonging to her mother, the late Mrs. Nels Johnson, at her residence a block east of the postoffice in St. Hilaire, on Friday, Sept. 27th. A complete set of household goods including stoves, tables, chairs, beds besides garden tools and many other articles, will be offered for sale to highest bidder. The sale will start at 1:00, and terms are cash.

Hilmer Nelson suffered the loss of the tip of his index finger, and had tip of another badly smashed last Friday as the result of having them caught in the chain of a corn binder. The wound will necessitate his being laid up for several weeks.

IS 91 YEARS OF AGE

Mrs. E. E. Anderson, one of the sturdy pioneer residents of this community, observed her 91st birthday anniversary last Thursday. About a year ago she was so ill that very little hope was entertained for her recovery, but she regained strength and is now able to be about as well as before. During the past summer, she insisted on going to her farm east of the village to live alone, and care for her home, for several weeks. She is able to cook, bake and attend to household work despite the fact that she has long since passed the allotted three score and ten years of age.

MRS. ALB. JOHNSON DIES IN CROOKSTON

Mrs. Albert Johnson, for many years a well known resident of Rocksbury township, and more recently of Warren, died Sunday at a Crookston hospital following an operation. During her years of residence in this county, Mrs. Johnson took an active part in social and other activities, and was very highly esteemed by all who knew her. For the past few years, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson resided on their farm south of Warren, and recently moved to that city to make their home. Besides her husband, Mrs. Johnson is survived by two sons, Perry at Omaha, Neb., and Guy at Minneapolis, and by one daughter, Mrs. Ross Noper of Aurora, Ill.

A large number of friends of the family from Thief River Falls, Warren, and including Mrs. N. E. Beebe and Mrs. O. Gunstad of this village, attended the funeral service which was held Tuesday afternoon at the Presbyterian church at Crookston. From there, the remains were shipped to the former Johnson home at Aurora, Ill., for burial. Heartfelt sympathy of friends in this section is extended to Mr. Johnson and family in their time of sorrow.

Ben Rosendahl has a foundation in and will soon commence erection of a new residence. His place will be located in Northside Addition and will be the first house to go up there since the addition was platted some years ago.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Clifford Schantzen is busily engaged this week at brightening up his garage building with a coat of paint.

Mr. and Mrs. Charley Christensen and family of Plummer were guests Saturday evening at the Emil Just home.

Mrs. Duncan McAllister of Grand Forks, was here this week for a visit at the home of her sister, Mrs. Fred Hanson.

Orville Gulseth returned home a few days ago after spending several weeks harvesting and threshing out in North Dakota.

Manford Dahle left Monday for Grand Forks to resume his studies in the medical department of the University of North Dakota.

Rev. and Mrs. H. A. Larson, their son, Douglass, and the younger children, left this week for a visit with relatives and friends at Minneapolis.

Harry Winter was taken ill Friday while out assisting with bringing in some honey. He was a very sick man both Saturday and Sunday, but is feeling much improved now.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Johnson, accompanied by Mrs. R. L. Hauge, Andrew Hauge, and by Mrs. Joe Hauge of Bemidji, left Saturday on a motor trip to points in Iowa and South Dakota. They planned to be gone several days.

Mrs. B. E. Burkee returned home last week after spending several days at the home of her son, E. O. Burkee, at Moorhead. The latter had been ill about a month but is now so much improved that he has been able to resume his work as appraiser for the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul.

HIGHWAY PATROL REPORTS DRIVERS SLOWING DOWN

Members of the state highway patrol report a noticeable tendency away from excessive speeds on the trunk highways since the patrol began making arrests for speeding recently, says a highway department bulletin. The patrol is not enforcing any absolute limit, but is making arrests where the speed is obviously dangerous to other traffic. One of the first arrests made was of a Minneapolis man who drove through the village of Moose Lake at 80 miles an hour.

Ferdie Swenson and Ed. Peterson motored Sunday to Annandale for a visit at the home of Rev. and Mrs. A. Sand.

The Community Ladies Aid will be entertained at the church Friday afternoon, Sept. 27, by Mesdames W. Olson, A. Brink, W. Corbet and R. Collins.

Mr. Isaac Teigen and Miss Huldah Gigstad motored here Sunday from Moorhead and spent the day at the Mrs. Hilda Gigstad home, returning to Moorhead that evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Just have had as their guests the past week, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Carr and children, Evelyn and Robert of Orr, N. D. Mr. Carr is Mrs. Just's foster son.

Mrs. Fred Boltman and daughter of Grand Forks, motored here Monday and visited until Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Olson. Mrs. Boltman is a sister of Mrs. Olson.

The Womens' Club will have its first meeting of this season at the club rooms this evening. As has been customary in years past, the club has held no meetings during the hot summer months.

Mrs. B. E. Burkee was honored Monday by a visit from a large number of neighbors and friends, the occasion being her birthday anniversary. Mrs. Burkee was the recipient of a number of gifts, and a bountiful lunch was served.

A well outfit belonging to A. Nyhagen was brot in Tuesday to recover a cylinder that had dropped into the village artesian well at the postoffice corner. The cylinder was taken out without much difficulty and the well is again functioning as it has done for many years.

Many interested people have asked why it was not possible to ascertain the standing of the local band in the state-wide competition at the State Fair recently before the band returned home. This was because 4-H bands from different sections of the state appeared on different days. We are informed that the band which placed first in the state, played its competition selection on Friday which was the day after the local band returned home.

Land O'Lakes, Inc., set men at work Monday morning at installing a new front in the former Spectator shop. According to information received, a new service station is to be built on the corner in a short time.

Regular meeting of the Business Mens Club was held at the club rooms Monday evening this week.

25 Years Ago

A baby son of Mr. and Mrs. Axel Jacobson died Monday, Sept. 12, after a brief illness.

A Great Northern carpenter crew was here repairing the station platform, and making some bridge and culvert repairs.

Henry Olson was named to serve as petit juror at the October term of district court at Red Lake Falls.

Herman Anderson was here from Devils Lake, N. D., for a visit with his sister, Mrs. H. O. Jackson, and other relatives.

Carl Krueger of Red Lake Falls decided to locate here with a harness shop. He expected to have the place open in two weeks.

H. B. Borneman, local station agent for several years, was transferred to Hallock. J. A. Bahan, formerly agent at Tilden, succeeded Mr. Borneman here.

H. M. Babcock leased the Imperial building and was to occupy it with his drug stock that month.

Willie Smith, Oiler in the mill at Thief River, was killed when he became entangled in a swiftly moving shaft.

Miss Sadie Power of Wylie, and David Collins of Warroad, formerly of St. Hilaire, were married Sept. 21st at Red Lake Falls.

Rev. and Mrs. E. E. Thompson went to Fergus Falls at attend the annual M. E. Conference. They did not expect to return here.

Mark Harder of Hettinger, N. D., was here looking after his farm interest in Sec. 30 of Rocksbury. He planned to move his family here that fall.

Mrs. Siri Lunde, age 86, died Sept. 20 at home of her stepdaughter, Mrs. R. L. Hauge, after an illness of three months.

The last rail was laid and connections established on the new Soo Line extension from Plummer to Duluth. Several booming towns along the new line were making a bid for those seeking business and professional locations.

THIEF RIVER FALLS PLANNING FESTIVAL

With civic groups and the American Legion co-operating, Thief River Falls will stage a three day fall festival, the dates being October 10, 11 and 12. The Legion Auxiliary drum corps of Thief River, the Crookston auxiliary drum corps, the Ninth district band will take part in a big parade to be staged the first day. In addition to a program now being arranged, a banquet will be given on evening of the second day at which Soo Line officials will be present.

Saturday's events will be built around completion of the new parkway approach to the new bridge spanning the Red Lake river. The parkway has been laid out as a scenic beauty place and will prove a splendid attraction to Thief River Falls in years to come. There will be dances each evening of the festival, and many other forms of entertainment and amusement also have been provided. On the final day, four popularity queens, representing Thief River Falls, Pennington county, Marshall county and Red Lake county will be selected and crowned.

THREE PLACES BURGLARIZED

Parties who evidently were familiar with the premises, gained entrance to Walter Olson's cafe early Sunday morning by prying out a board covering a broken window in the door. A careful check-up indicates very little was taken except some change. From there the same parties broke into Pearson's meat market thru the door connecting the two places, and made away with a few dollars in change from the till. Following the two depredations mentioned, someone forced entrance thru rear door of Johnson's Cafe but were frightened away before securing any loot.

SCHOOL NOTES

School is well under way, but a number of the High School boys are still engaged in manual toil. A suggestion, it won't be long until basketball season, so let's see you soon.

Parents cooperation is necessary in order that none are absent unless absolutely needed.

Office hours (telephone hours) 10:30-11:15 A. M., 2:30-3:15. School will dismiss on Fridays at 3:45.

The Band will make their first appearance of the season at P. T. A. this Friday.

M. R. Graham,
Supt. of Schools.

Sam Hauge, manager of the creamery at Bagley, was here last Sunday for a visit with relatives and friends.

Senator Long Assassinated by Political Opponent

HUEY P. LONG, United States senator and political dictator of Louisiana, is dead, the victim of an assassin's bullet. As he passed through a corridor of the state-house in Baton Rouge, where the legislature was passing more laws to solidify his control over the state, he was shot once through the body by Dr. Carl A. Weiss, Jr., of Baton Rouge, one of the "Kingfish's" political opponents. The assassin was immediately shot to death by the senator's ever present bodyguards.

Huey P. Long

Long was hurriedly taken to a hospital and eminent surgeons were summoned. They found the bullet had gone through the base of the right lung and passed out of the back, puncturing the colon and causing internal hemorrhage. After the wound had been cleansed, two blood transfusions were given, the blood being supplied by Lieut. Gov. James A. Noe. Mrs. Long and her daughter Rose were brought from New Orleans and sat at the senator's bedside.

The surgeons and physicians worked unceasingly to save Long, but his strength steadily waned and shortly after 4 o'clock Tuesday morning, about thirty hours after the shooting, he passed away.

The motive of Doctor Weiss, an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, apparently grew out of the high-handed political methods of Senator Long in Louisiana. The position of his father-in-law, District Judge B. H. Pavy of Opelousas parish, an anti-Long leader, is jeopardized by a law introduced in the present special session to gerrymander his district. The law would put the home of Judge Pavy in Landry parish.

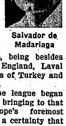
In August, Senator Long told the senate that at a conference in the Hotel De Soto in New Orleans last July 21 his foes had discussed a plot to kill him. He presented excerpts from what claimed was a record of a sound recording device revealing the plot.

Long's opponents laughed at this story, just as they always have ridiculed his practice of having an armed guard accompany him everywhere.

Political leaders of all parties expressed their deep regret for the assassination of Senator Long. His devoted followers in Louisiana and elsewhere mourned his death. He had been one of the picturesque figures in America's political life, creating innumerable enemies but persistent in advocating his ideas which appeared fantastic to most citizens. A Democrat, he had broken with the administration and often bitterly attacked President Roosevelt and the New Dealers. It was the belief of many that he intended to become the Presidential nominee of a third party comprising his own "share the wealth" crowd and various other groups dissatisfied with the policies of the old parties.

Efforts of Statesmen to Prevent War in Africa

MUSSOLINI tacitly consented to the appointment of a committee of five nations by the League of Nations council to handle the Italo-Ethiopian embroglio, and after protest agreed that Great Britain and France should be among the members of that body. The other members are Spain, Turkey and Poland. Senor Salvador de Madariaga of Spain is the chairman, and he and his associates at once began the task assigned them. Each country is represented by its chief delegate, being besides Madariaga, Eden of England, Laval of France, Rustu Arras of Turkey and Josef Beck of Poland.



Salvador de Madariaga

The assembly of the league began its sessions in Geneva, bringing to that city many of Europe's foremost statesmen, and it was a certainty that the assembly would be definitely hostile to Italy and ready to consider the imposing of penalties on Italy the moment any overt act occurs. The Italians hoped to prolong the inquiry by the committee of five until after the adjournment of the assembly, and their opponents were building up a solid front, preparing for the application of sanctions against an aggressor as provided for in article 16 of the league covenant. Baron Aloisi told Captain Eden that the African campaign would not begin while the assembly was in session.

In two speeches in Rome Mussolini gave indication that he would not be diverted from his purpose to conquer Ethiopia. Though in one he said "the Italian people want peace provided it is accompanied by justice," in the other he declared "we shall march straight on." The Ethiopian government announced that "telegrams from the northern frontier show that the Italians are making important troop movements on the Ethiopian and Eritrean frontier, indicating an early offensive against Ethiopia."

Accepting the advice of his "brain trust," which includes Everett A. Colson of the United States, Emperor Haile Selassie instructed his representatives in Geneva to reject all solutions thus far offered by the powers for settling the quarrel with Italy. These are a tripartite mandate over Ethiopia, as suggested by France, with the League of Nations guaranteeing Ethiopia's independence and territorial integrity; France's proposal for an Italian protectorate similar to that of the British in Iraq, and an international police force similar to the one that occupied the Saar before its restoration to Germany.

Aloisi Presents Italy's Case Against Ethiopia

BARON POMPEI ALOISI, cold and sardonic, stood up before the League of Nations council in Geneva and presented Italy's case against Ethiopia, denouncing that empire as utterly unworthy to be classed with civilized countries. In addition to his speech, he laid before the council a long memorandum detailing the alleged conditions of slavery that still prevail in Ethiopia and the participation of its government in the slave trade. This memorandum was elaborately documented.

Baron Aloisi

Addressing the council, Aloisi said in part:

"The Ethiopian government does nothing to make itself worthy of belonging to the community of civilized nations. Even today that country has to be represented by European advisers in order to make its voice heard in the League of Nations.

"The Italian government considers, in these circumstances, that a state such as Ethiopia cannot have either equality of right or equality of duties as compared with civilized states. To claim that members of the league are required to observe rules of the covenant in their relations with members who have always and constantly been outside those rules is contrary to all the principles of right and justice."

To the press correspondents the baron was even more explicit. "You have heard the Italian thesis," he said. "That is final. Italy has asked nothing, not even the withdrawal of Ethiopia from the league. From now on Italy will play a passive role here. We are not going to discuss anything with Ethiopia, but we will discuss Ethiopia with the league.

"It is up to the members of the league council to decide whether they want to expel Ethiopia or expel Italy."

Reactions to President's Letter Are Various

REACTION of American business and financial men to President Roosevelt's latest public statement that his basic program has reached substantial completion and industry will have a breathing spell ran the gamut between mild hope and downright unbelief. Those who permitted themselves to be quoted were generally extremely cautious in their expressions, but there was usually a vein of skepticism in their remarks. Wall Street brokers were gladdened by a spurt of trading at higher prices, but bankers were more than doubtful, and economists insisted that a balanced budget, which wasn't mentioned in the President's letter to Roy Howard, publisher, was a prime requisite.

Silas Strawn, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, said: "Business men generally will say that the improvement in some lines of business has been in spite of, rather than because of, the activities of the administration."

Politicians regarded the letter as Mr. Roosevelt's opening of his campaign for re-election, and praised or decried it according to their party affiliations. Frank Knox of the Chicago Daily News, a potential candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, called it "just another promise" and set forth the many campaign promises which Mr. Roosevelt has failed to keep. Senator Black of Alabama said the statement was "a wonderfully clear explanation of his program, its original aims and its execution. It should be a call to those engaged in business to co-operate in further national progress."

Howard had written the President that many business men had become convinced that there could be no real recovery "until the fears of business have been allayed through the granting of a breathing spell to industry and a recess from further experimentation until the country can recover its losses."

In a long letter the President replied that the legislative program of his administration had reached substantial completion and "the breathing spell of which you speak is here—decidedly so."

Germany Protests Language of a New York Judge

GERMAN Ambassador Hans Luther called on Secretary of State Hull and entered formal protest against the language used by Magistrate Louis B. Brodsky of New York in dismissing charges against five persons arrested for tearing the Nazi flag from the liner Bremen in July. The magistrate justified the action of the rioters on the ground that the display of the flag carried, in their minds, "the same sinister implications of a pirate ship, sailing defiantly into the harbor of a nation, one of whose ships it had just scuttled, with the black flag of piracy proudly flying aloft."

Judge Brodsky also characterized the Nazi state as "an atavistic throwback to pre-medieval, if not barbaric, social and political conditions."

Ambassador Luther, who was acting on instructions from Berlin, must have known that Secretary Hull couldn't do much about it, having no control over a city magistrate. However, Mr. Hull tried to mollify an angered Germany by intimating to Governor Lehman of New York that an apology from Brodsky was in order.

Hundreds Die in Hurricane That Sweeps Florida

FLORIDA was the victim of another terrific hurricane that swept up from the Caribbean across the keys and the southern end of the state, then along the west coast and into Georgia. The total of fatalities was uncertain but at this writing the number of dead is estimated at more than 500. Of these perhaps 300 were war veterans in labor camps on the keys where they were employed in construction work. All buildings on many of the keys were demolished and a relief train that had been sent to take the veterans away from the danger zone was smashed to pieces. The survivors on the islands were without shelter, food and medical supplies, but relief expeditions were quickly sent by the Red Cross and other agencies.

Responding to assertions that the great loss of life in the veterans' labor camps was due to lack of preparation against such a disaster, President Roosevelt ordered a thorough investigation by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs. Harry Hopkins, head of the FERA which set up the camps, also started an inquiry, and so did the American Legion. The affair promised to attain the bad eminence of a national scandal.

Caught in the fury of the storm, the Morgan liner Dixie, from New Orleans for New York, was driven aground on French reef, about 60 miles south of Miami. Her passengers and crew, numbering 372, were in great peril for three days, but various steamers and coast guard cutters rushed to the rescue in response to her SOS call and as soon as wind and seas abated enough all were taken off the stranded vessel and conveyed to land, most of them to Miami. Passengers on the Dixie warmly praised the gallant work of the ship's officers and crew.

Americans Cancel Big Ethiopian Concession

WHILE the European statesmen were struggling with the Italo-Ethiopian question, Secretary of State Cordell Hull quietly took a hand in the game. He did not in any way involve the United States in the wrangle, but he put an end to the deal whereby Haile Selassie was giving a great development concession to Americans. Officials of the Standard-Vacuum Oil company went to Mr. Hull's office and admitted ownership of the grant. The secretary admonished them that the concession had been "the cause of great embarrassment not only to this government but to other governments who are making strenuous and sincere efforts for the preservation of peace."

Sec'y Hull

The oil men thereupon announced their intention of withdrawing from the deal with Ethiopia, and the big concession sensation was entirely deflated.

Bar Associations to Have Aid in Ousting Shysters

STATE and city bar associations are to be aided vigorously in their efforts to rid the profession of shysters by the American Bar association, and President William L. Ransom has appointed Robert T. McCracken of Philadelphia chairman of a new committee to direct the work. Mr. McCracken performed a similar task for the Philadelphia bar. He is a member of the law firm of Montgomery & McCracken, of which Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts was a member before his elevation to the United States Supreme court.

Death of Edward L. Doheny, Rich Oil Magnate

EDWARD L. DOHENY, one of the wealthiest of America's oil magnates, died in Los Angeles at the age of seventy-nine years, after a long illness. His oil interests were mainly in California and Mexico. In 1924 Doheny and his old friend, Albert B. Fall, secretary of the interior under Harding, were involved in the investigation of the government's leasing of the Elk Hills naval oil reserve in California to Doheny for exploitation.

Doheny was twice tried and twice acquitted, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government and of giving a bribe of $100,000 to Fall. The latter, however, was found guilty of taking a bribe and went to prison.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Mankato—More than 15,000 persons are expected at the annual conventions of three Catholic organizations here September 22-24.

Hopkins—Racing to can vegetables raised on SERA garden projects, a crew of 50 men and women are busy as bees at the SERA canning factory.

Fergus Falls—A project to improve 1,000 miles of farm-to-market roads in Otter Tail county at a cost of $1,500,000 has been forwarded to Washington.

Duluth—Duluth's business district was transformed into a gala sight as visitors arrived here for the seventieth annual conclave of the Knights Templar of Minnesota.

Austin—A unanimous vote of the Austin Izaak Walton league has approved the state conservation plan to sell the Kabetogema and Grand Portage forest areas to the federal government.

Minneapolis—Police and a mob of pickets engaged in a pitched battle near the plant of the Flour City Ornamental Iron Co., resulting in the death of two men and the serious wounding of 36 more.

Harmony—The Scotland Presbyterian church, near here observed the seventy-fifth anniversary of its founding. Rev. C. W. Hubanks is pastor of the church, which has been served by 13 pastors during the 75 years.

Minneapolis—The Maroon and Gold Gophers at the University of Minnesota began their fall football campaign with the opening of practice on Northrup field. Bernie Bierman, coach, thinks he has some promising material this year.

Wadena—Study of traffic conditions at the intersection of federal highways No. 10 and 71, in the heart of the Wadena business district, has been promised by N. W. Elsberg, state highway commissioner, with a view to reducing accidents.

Cannon Falls—Samuel Bancroft observed his eightieth birthday anniversary. He has resided here since 1857, when he came here at the age of 18 months. He has served as leader of the Cannon Falls band and as one of the players for 63 years.

Cass Lake—More than 300,000 acres are added to the National Forests of Minnesota as result of action by the Forest Reservation Commission at Washington. The Chippewa forest has been increased by 71,334 acres, the Superior 242,584 acres and the Mesaba 640 acres.

Excelsior—With one of the biggest apple crops in history burdening trees in the Lake Minnetonka district this year, citizens of Excelsior decided something in the way of a celebration was in order. The thought was father of the deed and presently an organization was completed to make Saturday, September 21, the first annual Excelsior Apple day.

Minneapolis—The works progress administration and the Minnesota department of conservation plan to spend about $1,500,000 on statewide water conservation projects, Conservation Commissioner E. V. Willard said. A total of 173 individual projects representing the most comprehensive public water conservation program in the history of the state has been approved by the war department. There remains only approval by national WPA officials and allotment of funds before actual work can be started. The state would be expected to furnish about $100,000 of the total cost to defray part of the material charges.

St. Paul—Immediate steps will be taken to appeal to the State Supreme Court from the judgment of District Judge Arthur W. Selover, who ruled the corporate excess tax law is invalid and the enforcement of it unconstitutional. At stake in the appeal, as it was in the suits heard by Judge Selover, is the right of the Minnesota tax commission to collect $100,000,000, more or less, from corporations doing business in the state, under a statute enacted 57 years ago. The law taxed the "intangible assets" of a corporation; technically, the difference between the market value of the corporation's stock and the actual value of its physical assets. It has been termed a tax on the good will of a business.

Hallock—State trust fund lands are to be offered at auction in 18 counties, F. A. Wildes, director of the division of lands and minerals, Minnesota department of conservation, announced. The lands are sold on basis of cash for timber and improvements, a payment of 15 per cent of the purchase price of the land itself and 40 years time on balance with interest at 4 per cent. The sales will be held at Hallock, Oct. 7; Roseau, Oct. 8; Warren, Oct. 10; Crookston, Oct. 11; Ada, Oct. 12; Moorhead and Breckenridge, Oct. 14; Detroit Lakes and Mahnomen, Oct. 15; Bagley and Bemidji, Oct. 16; Park Rapids, Oct. 17; Aitkin and Carlton, Oct. 21; Duluth, Oct. 22; International Falls, Oct. 23; Grand Rapids, Oct. 24, and Walker Oct. 25.

Minneapolis—Minnesota will have 310,000 persons on direct relief by early winter, L. P. Zimmerman, acting SERA director said in pointing to the situation faced by municipalities and the state as a result of federal withdrawal from the direct relief field. Zimmerman estimated that it will require $2,500,000 to cover relief costs in October, $3,000,000 in November and $4,000,000 in December, and pointed out that unless the federal government comes to the aid of the municipalities, a serious situation will result.

ROMAN COINS TELL HISTORY

The first Roman coins were cast about the middle of the Third century, B. C. They were of bronze, generally showing the prow of a ship on the reverse and heads of various divinities on the obverse. The "as" or "aes," one pound of bronze, was the unit of the Roman mint and its multiples and parts formed the Roman coinage. The value was placed on both sides in different manners. The mark of value of the "as" was 1. Its type was the head of Janus. The letter "S" indicated the value of the semis, four globules the sextans and one globule the unica. These were all parts of the "as," the unica being about one-twelfth.

Fear Fat?—Count Calories

Anti-Fat claims that blacken the nutritional reputation of certain foods may be grossly misleading. Average individuals grow fat or thin according to the total number of calories they eat a day. The one rule for reducing is to cut down on the calories but include enough of all the food essentials.—Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

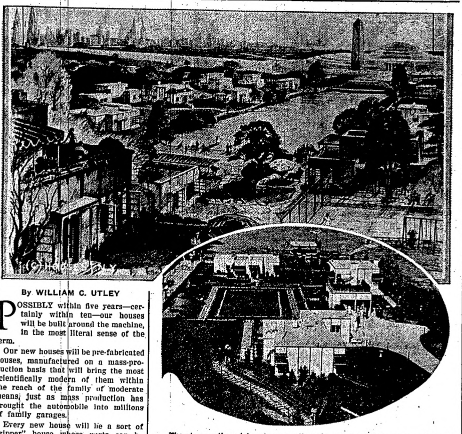
Motorized "Zipper" Houses of Future



The above rather elaborate conception of a colony of the new pre-fabricated, motorized houses, drawn by Hugh Ferriss, has been offered Purdue university for study in its new housing course. Inset: Part of the colony of motorized homes which is being visited by 1,000 persons an hour at Cambridge, Mass.

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

POSSIBLY within five years—certainly within ten—our houses will be built around the machine, in the most literal sense of the term.

Our new houses will be pre-fabricated houses, manufactured on a mass-production basis that will bring the most scientifically modern of them within the reach of the family of moderate means, just as mass production has brought the automobile into millions of family garages.

Every new house will be a sort of "zipper" house whose parts can be "buttoned" together and "unbuttoned" again with the greatest of ease. All houses will be of a pleasing simplicity of design. All will have flat roofs that will be so much more "living surface" in pleasant weather. All houses will be air-conditioned in all kinds of weather.

In the center of every house will be a compact, electrically driven motor unit which will furnish power for the hundreds of tasks which make housekeeping a chore today, will heat the house in winter and cool it in summer.

These are not idealistic fancies, framed in fragile smoke rings from the dream pipes of impractical social planning bugs. They are facts.

For such houses already exist; both individually and in communities. Their manufacture and design is being fostered by some of the biggest and most progressive industrial giants of the day.

Houses for Low Incomes.

For the principal strides in developing houses of this sort the credit must go to Owen D. Young, head of General Electric company and to Foster Gunnison, president of Houses, Inc. Houses, Inc., has been formed not to build houses, but to conduct research for the entire building trade "through which new ideas in home building will be tested and cleared and also to culture, assist in the management of, or help finance any worthy project designed to produce modern homes that will be within easy financial reach of those with low incomes."

Houses, Inc., has been subsidized by General Electric. Mr. Gunnison has been one of the leaders in the pre-fabricated housing movement. Motorized, pre-fabricated houses, already past the experimental stage, have been assembled at White Plains, N. Y., Garden City, L. I., New York city, Boston and Philadelphia. At Boston there is a whole colony of such houses which is visited by thousands of persons daily.

Purdue university, at Lafayette, Ind., for the administration of its new course, "The New Science of Better Living," is preparing to start a whole modern community to use as a gargantuan laboratory for the study of tomorrow's scientific housing.

David Ross, chairman of the board of trustees of the university, has donated 143 acres of land where the new village will be assembled. Here every house will be subjected to extreme temperatures and weather conditions and even man-made earthquakes and cyclones. In thirty days it will go through the same rigors that the ordinary house suffers in the course of twenty years.

What interesting possibilities these new houses offer!

Suppose Jack Edwards of Chicago and Mrs. Edwards have just finished paying for their new house. At last, after long saving and struggle their ambition to "own their own home" has become a glorious and happy reality. Then, suddenly, Jack's firm decides to transfer him to New Orleans. Must they give up the lovely dwelling they have worked so hard to own?

House-Moving Is Easy.

No, indeed. Jack simply calls the movers. They take screw-drivers and unbutton the little house, lift it aboard their truck and soon it is rolling gaily along to Dixie. Only a new cement foundation need be built. That is a simple matter that should take no more than a couple of weeks.

Should the new climate suggest a different way of laying out the rooms, why that is a simple matter, too. They can be buttoned together again in whatever arrangement its owners desire. And if the young couple would like to have a guest room to make it more convenient for his or her folks to visit them in New Orleans next winter, a couple of new panels can be bought, buttoned on and made into a new room. When the Edwardses feel affluent enough to own something more on the scale of a southern mansion, they can add a whole new story just as easily.

Fresh air fiends and those of us who like to feed poetic souls by flinging windows open to the balmy breezes of spring are likely to be a little chagrined with the new type of house. Here the spring breeze is not a pleasant zephyr, but an annoying draft. For this is an air-conditioned house, remember. The motor unit draws in the outside air with a central fan, washes it, purifies it and heats it or cools it. For that reason complete insulation from the outside temperatures is essential. The air supplied by the motor unit is in reality fresher and better to breathe than the outside air, no matter what the weather.

Roofs of the new houses can be flat for sun decks and play areas because these buildings, even though they be only one story high, are built like skyscrapers. So complete will be the insulation from heat and cold, you can invite friends over whenever you want to for a weiner roast—with the bonfire built on the roof! The houses will also be lightning-proof, cyclone-proof and even earthquake-proof.

The pre-fabricated walls are proof against sound and termites. They are made of steel, with panels of pressed asbestos and cement. They are practically indestructible. They feel like stucco and yet nails can be driven into them.

Modernists Make Concession.

Only the front door will be made of wood—a true concession on the part of the designers to allow for some little shred of the home-maker's sentiment to remain. Mr. Gunnison explains it:

"We don't want to be too modernistic. The housewife wants the 'feel' of wood on the door as she enters. It's more domestic—not so mechanical, somehow. Everything in the house has been done from her point of view."

It is easy to suppose that the housewife will really be more interested in the "feel" of machinery at her finger-tips, ready to do most of her work for her. From that standard, certainly the house has been designed with her in mind. Despite the fact that it may be located in the remotest suburb or on a farm, the house is more like an efficient metropolitan apartment, set off by itself and a roof placed over it.

Everything is easy to do. Walls are of washable fabric. Closets are cedar lined. Floors are made of compressed hardwood panels. Windows are of the steel casement type, which open with a little crank, like those in an automobile. There are metal storm windows and screens.

There are no cellars in this house. There is nothing to go into the cellar. All the heating, plumbing and domestic mechanical equipment is contained in the motor unit on the first floor. This mechanical nerve center of the home has been called one of the most important scientific contributions to the building industry in years.

Machines Do It All.

A steel cabinet, hardly larger than a pantry, contains the motor unit. If there are two floors, this "core" extends also to the second floor to serve additional baths there. The front of the unit forms one wall of the kitchen. Along this wall is the kitchen "work-bench." It is a single, streamlined unit of monel metal and enamel, which contains a range, an electric refrigerator, electric clock, mechanical dishwasher and dryer, shadowless indirect lighting unit, basin and work table with drawers and cupboards scientifically arranged to save steps for the housewife. There are no cooking odors in this kitchen, for, in addition to the air-conditioning, there is an exhaust fan.

On the other side of the kitchen wall, inside the unit, is all the heavier equipment—the water heater, air-conditioning machine and the furnace (which is much smaller than furnaces we are accustomed to today), all of them automatic, of course.

Next to the kitchen is the bathroom, and, this, too, has one wall facing the motor unit. From this wall come the bathtub with shower attachment, an electric heater for the extra warmth that is sometimes desirable in the bath on chilly mornings, and a lavatory big enough to bathe the baby in. The toilet also projects from this wall; it does not touch the floor, leaving plenty of room for brush and mop.

Perhaps the most wonderful thing about such a house is its cost. The five-room bungalow type can be built, with all mechanical equipment, for only about $3,800; the scale is graduated to two-story affairs which cost less than $10,000.

The advent of pre-fabricated, motorized houses at lost cost may, or may not, have an immediate noticeable effect upon the building industry. Mr. Gunnison thinks it will.

"They will open up an immediate market for hundreds of thousands of homes, create a demand for much labor in the building trades, stimulate the buying and production of materials and make modern, economical and proper housing available to hundreds of thousands of families now anxious to own their own homes, but financially unable to do so because of prices far beyond the reach of their reduced incomes," he said.

Likened to Automobile.

"The application of modern industrial methods to the framework of our antiquated building practices, their inherent economies, mass production and buying of materials and equipment have been correlated in production of the motorized home so that it has been brought to the same high plane of scientific design, engineering perfection, mechanical efficiency and economical production that removed the automobile from the 'millionaire's plaything' class of less than twenty years ago to make it standard and very necessary equipment of almost every American family."

It must be remembered that Mr. Gunnison's Houses, Inc., is not engaged in the manufacture or sale of houses of this type, but is merely conducting research, in an effort to show how better low-cost houses can be built. The motive is not altogether altrustic, of course, for Houses, Inc., is subsidized by General Electric and is assisted by American Radiator and Sanitary, both of whom will have plenty to sell when the pre-fabricated, motorized house becomes the general thing. But the work, in merit and in interest to you and me, is worthy of publicity, in the opinion of this writer.

Meanwhile, building is on the upturn. Picking key cities, it is up 100 per cent for August of this year over last in Boston; 24 per cent in New York; 14 per cent in Philadelphia; 234 per cent in Pittsburgh; 990 per cent in Atlanta; 110 per cent in Chicago; 315 per cent in Kansas City, Mo.; 210 per cent in Memphis; 255 per cent in Fort Worth; 88 per cent in Denver; 180 per cent in Los Angeles, and 135 per cent in San Francisco.

On the recent Better Housing day, celebrated throughout the nation, 3,500 new and better homes were started on a single morning. Conferences are being held at important cities throughout the world in efforts of many nations to help their people build homes.

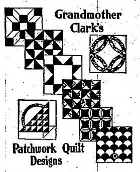
Old Fashioned Patchwork Quilts



By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

From all indications quilt makers will be busy this winter making more quilts. Quilts are still very attractive for needle workers, and any suggestion on this work will be welcomed.

Patchwork Quilt making is much easier today than during Colonial days. Patches are more easily obtained. Diagrams and cutouts for patches and books of instruction are printed. All of these make the work easier and more quilts are being made.

Grandmother Clark's Book No. 20 on Patchwork Quilts contains 30 quilts with cutting diagram for patches, also several ways to assemble 12 and 18-inch quilt blocks.

This book contains information and diagrams for the quilts shown above and many other old designs. Send us 15 cents for this book No. 20 and receive it by mail.

Dynamite

In Fort Myers, Fla., O. J. Hall, fifty-one, superintendent of a light and power company, placed a stick of dynamite in his mouth and lighted the fuse. It blew his head to bits.

In Estherville, Iowa, Burt Bloom, sixty, retired farmer, placed dynamite in a rock bed, lighted a fuse and stood back. Nothing happened. Bloom waited. At last he cautiously approached the charge. As he bent over the dynamite exploded and killed him.

MEDICINE AMONG THE ZULUS

Superstition seems to be the most important ingredient of the Zulu pharmacopeia and may explain the success of many of their remedies, according to Raymond B. Cowles, "Primitive Medicine" in Hygeia where he discusses the Zulu's faith in charms, countercharms and witchcraft.

The Zulus have a remedy for every ill. They choose their cures from inorganic and organic substances, selecting freely from both plant and animal life. Many of the more potent remedies are supposed to cure not one but many evils and one, at least, is supposed to be a sovereign remedy with power over every known disease.

Quick, Pleasant Successful Elimination

Let's be frank—there's only one way for your body to rid itself of the waste material that causes acidity, gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Your intestines must function and the way to make them move quickly, pleasantly, successfully, without griping or harsh irritants is to chew a Milnesia Wafer thoroughly, in accordance with directions on the bottle or tin, then swallow.

Milnesia Wafers, pure milk of magnesia in tablet form, each equivalent to a tablespoon of liquid milk of magnesia, correct acidity, bad breath, flatulence, at their source, and enable you to have the quick, pleasant, successful elimination so necessary to abundant health.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles at 35c and 60c or in convenient tins at 20c. Recommended by thousands of physicians. All good druggists carry them. Start using these pleasant tasting effective wafers today.

The following subject will be discussed and presented as to its different aspects. "Conversion." What is Conversion? Who must be Converted? Thru Jesus Christ Conversion made possible, Thru the Holy Spirit Conversion is wrought in the heart of man, What is man's part in Conversion? Blessings bestowed upon the converted, and Assurance that I am converted.

Meetings will be conducted in the three congregations simultaneously.

Monday, 8:00 P. M.; Tuesday 10:00 A. M., Swedish; Tuesday, 2:00 P. M. and Tuesday, 8:00 P. M. Communion service. We extend a hearty welcome to all.

OPEN CONDEMNATION OFFICE AT MUD LAKE

Thief River Falls, Minn., Sept. 23.—An office was opened here by Attorney General Harry Peterson to facilitate condemnation proceedings in the Mud Lake game refuge area. The condemnation program contemplates acquisition by the state of 53,000 acres for later sale to the federal government. Approximately 600 land owners are affected. In charge of the office are David Erickson, deputy attorney general, and Armand Brattland and O. J. Randlie, assistant attorneys general.

BIG ATTENDANCE AT P. T. A. MEETING

A large crowd attended first meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association for the present school term, which was held at the school Friday evening. The band and an orchestra from River Falls gave a very pleasing concert as main numbers on the program.

SCHOOL NEWS

Word has been received from the WPA that the quota for the St. Hilaire high school will be one pupil whose parents are eligible for relief. Choice of the student must be based on his or her scholastic ability and fitness for the work. The work will be designated by the Superintendent. Students wishing aid in attending college must write to the college they wish to attend, and will receive blanks from there if the quota for that school is not filled. Before filling such blanks, consult with the local superintendent.

In a short time tests in Grammar Essentials will be given in the eighth and ninth grades. These survey tests will be the basis for a study of the rank of students in our school as compared with other schools.

Workbooks

Students will be required to pay for workbooks in courses which require their use. This practice is logical as workbooks remain the property of students when paid for. Many students desire to keep their workbooks as a memo of high school days. This does not apply to seat work in the grades.

Excuses for Absence

Students having been absent from school, are requested to bring written excuses signed by parents, stating reason for absence and the date of such absence. This is necessary as we need them for our records.

P. T. A.

A large crowd attended meeting of the P. T. A. last Friday. An organization of this sort functions up to par only when all attend. In the future we have prospects of a speaker from the University and you can all be assured future programs will be well worth attending.

Band News

Parents are requested to communicate with Supt. Graham if they are interested in having their children enter the band. A beginners class will be started soon. All beginners must be ready with their instruments, and will need to buy instruction material which will cost about 75 cents.

FORGET-ME-NOT

September 27-28 has been set aside as Forget-me-not day. Ruth Brink, Hazel Huff and Doris Hagglund will be the local committee to sell forget-me-nots for the disabled American veterans. A percentage of the receipts will go to the local organization. Give what you feel you can to assist the disabled veterans to make a living.

CONFERENCE AT WARROAD OCT. 5

The fourth annual conference of Dist. 16 of the Minnesota Congress of Parents and Teachers will be held at the high school auditorium at Warroad, Saturday, Oct. 5th.

An instructive as well as recreational program has been prepared. The state president, a graduate of Ann Arbor, Mich. Mrs. A. L. Lathers of Duluth is an inspiring speaker. Her theme will be "Home is the Index of Our National Life." Mrs. Geo. Cashman, representing the Federal Home Administration, will appear on the program. H. A. Whittaker, from the State Department of Health, will speak on the subject "Milk and its relation to Public Health." Mrs. Hazel Halgrim of Thief River will discuss "Good Books."

Several educational features and musical treats will afford variety and interest. A boat ride on Lake of the Woods is a possibility. All local P. T. A. officers and members are urged to attend.

BLACK RIVER NEWS

Messrs. Elmer and H. McKercher of Burlington, Wisc., were guests last week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. McKercher southwest of the village.

Mrs. Martin Rux and son, Larry, Mrs. Chas. Bengtson, Evelyn and Gladys visited Thursday the O. Larson home.

Donna Anderson of Wylie, spent the week-end with her friend, Vivian Lindquist.

Vera Almquist, who teaches the Mavie school, spent last week-end at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Haakon Olson and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Erickson and daughter of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Jensen and son, Garmo, visited Wednesday evening at the V. Brink home.

Vernon Lindquist visited Sunday at the home of his uncle, Chas. Lindquist.

Mes. E. Jensen, L. Beebe and N. E. Beebe were guests Wednesday at the Chas. Lindquist home.

Miss Effie Frederickson was a caller Saturday at Thief River Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. James Regan and daughter returned last week to their home at Monterey, Calif., after spending a couple of weeks here with relatives. The four children of the late James King, brother of Mrs. Regan, accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Regan to California and will make their home with them.

Anton Anderson of Wylie, had the misfortune to suffer a fractured leg recently while assisting in operating a threshing machine. He is now a patient at a Thief River hospital and is getting along well.

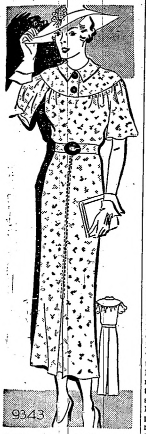
Frock That Puts Accent on Youth

PATTERN 9343



Always a good beginning, this youthful tailored collar on the simple yoke makes a demure foil for the dainty softness of the bodice. The prettiness of the chic frock is furthered with a graceful flare sleeve—or it may puff, if you prefer. The results are so satisfying you'll find it real fun to run up this little dress in a dainty printed silk or cotton. A soft handkerchief linen would be stunning, too, and so easy to tub. Buttons and belt can pick up a color in the print and make a striking accent.

Pattern 9343 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3½ yards 39-inch fabric. Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to the Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 232 West Eighteenth Street, New York, N. Y.

Crisis Is Near in Geneva Over Italy's Adventure

MATTERS in Geneva were rapidly approaching a crisis—a crisis for Italy and Ethiopia, for European peace and for the League of Nations itself.

Benito Mussolini

The Italian cabinet, in which Mussolini holds eight portfolios, announced in Rome that Italy would accept no compromise and would not retreat from the course it has laid out in East Africa; that its military preparations were being intensified, and that its forces were adequate "to respond to any menace whatever." Still more important, in the light of developments, was the cabinet's announcement of strengthening its military forces in Libya, where General Balbo has been establishing a strong line of air repots. This colony borders Egypt on the west, and there was immediately a lot of speculation as to whether Mussolini planned to attack the British empire in that region. Italian forces in Libya have received reinforcements of 40,000 men with tanks and field artillery, and are much stronger than the British forces in Egypt. If economic sanctions were imposed on Italy, Mussolini might well reply by threatening Great Britain in that quarter, by invasion and by arousing the native population to revolt.

Premier Laval's speech before the League of Nations was exceedingly clever but did not clear the situation sufficiently. While he gave assurance that France would abide by the league covenant and fulfill its obligations, he hinted that his government would demand in return that Britain enter a definite engagement to carry out the program agreed upon in London on February 3—an air Locarno with automatic enforcement and the conclusion of Danubian and Baltic security pacts.

One after another the nations represented in the league announced their support of the British stand against Italy. If the British do not back down—and that seems unlikely—and if Italy persists in its adventure, the league will be called on to apply article 15 of the covenant. This requires the submission of any dispute, likely to lead to a rupture, to the council which must then try to effect a settlement. The council also will adopt as its own the report of the committee of five, which has failed to find a solution acceptable to Italy. The parties to the dispute are obligated to keep the peace for three months in any event, which would prevent an Italian campaign before the rains set in again in Ethiopia.

If in the next three months either side accepts the council's decision, the other party is automatically outlawed if it starts a war at any time in the future. In that case, the penalties against an aggressor as provided in article 16 must take effect automatically.

It is believed in Geneva that the penalty easiest to apply would be a general boycott of all trade with Italy. In that case the course followed by the United States would be all important. The European statesmen feel confident that they can count on President Roosevelt, once a war breaks out, to interpret cotton, wheat, and other raw materials as war material and under the American neutrality legislation forbid direct shipment to Italy and Ethiopia.

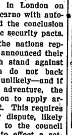
Mr. Davis Tells President of Conditions in Europe

NORMAN H. DAVIS, American "ambassador at large," called on President Roosevelt at Hyde Park and gave him a clear picture of the situation in Europe. After leaving the conference, Mr. Davis said to reporters that war in Europe is extremely probable but he sees no reason why the United States should become involved.

There had been hopes, Mr. Davis said, for a conference on naval disarmament this fall. But the Italo-Ethiopian dispute has removed any such possibility.

New German Laws Bear Down on the Jews

SIX hundred members of the German reichstag, all fervent Nazis, met in special session in Nuremberg and at the demand of Reichsfuehrer Hitler passed two laws bearing down hard on the Jews in the reich. The first of these new statutes prescribes prison sentences as penalties for marriages between Jews and citizens of German or kindred blood, and declares such marriages void if performed in a foreign country. Extra-marital relations between Jews and Aryans also are punishable by prison sentences. Jews are forbidden to employ women under forty-five years in their households after January 1, on penalty of imprisonment. Jews are not allowed to hoist the national flag, being limited to the Zionist blue and white emblem.



Adolf Hitler

The second law provides that only a person who "belongs to the protective association of the German empire and is especially obligated to the reich" may be a citizen of Germany. This citizen must be of German or kindred blood and show that he is willing to serve the German people. Thus Jews and Germans of whom the Nazis disapprove may be excluded.

Hitler also put through a third law establishing the Nazi Swastika as the national and trade flag of Germany. The war ministry was instructed to adopt a war flag of black, white and red.

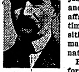
In his address to the reichstag Hitler said that by the laws adopted he hoped to deliver a fatal blow to Communism and Jewry. He also discussed the Memel question and warned Lithuania that justice must be done to Germans in Memel "before events take forms that one day may be only regretted."

Secretary Hull's Reply on Brodsky Protest

OFFICIAL annoyance in Germany over the remarks of Magistrate Brodsky of New York who called the Hitler regime "a throwback to barbarism" probably was allayed by the note from Secretary of State Hull. This explained that the federal government had no control over the magistrate, but Mr. Hull in it gave a sound verbal spanking to Brodsky for "indulging in expressions offensive to another government with which we have official relations."

Smetona Says Lithuania Will Fight for Memel

CHANCELLOR HITLER'S remarks about Memel aroused President Antonas Smetona to putting out the first interview he has granted in six years. In it he declared that Lithuania, relying to the utmost on the legality and justice of her stand and action in Memel affairs, is ready at any time to defend her position before the permanent court of international justice.



President Smetona

But should an effort be made to disregard legality and justice, in favor of force, Lithuania is prepared, stated President Smetona, to "defend Memel with all the means at her command."

He regards Lithuania's chief problem in Memel today the action of Germany in practically stopping all imports from Lithuania with "resultant economic pressure" and what he terms the "relentless influence of foreign propaganda."

Continuing, President Smetona said: "Memel is to us an economic necessity, not a political issue. We are too small a nation to engage in political bargaining, as we are too small a country to engage in contra-propaganda. Our only point is that Memel, containing Lithuania's only seaport, is an essential part of Lithuania. And the freedom and preservation of Lithuania is to her people a precious thing.'

Soft Coal Strike Averted for Another Week

STRIKES that would have closed down a large part of the country's soft coal industry were averted for a time at least by the vigorous action of President Roosevelt and Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady, the Labor department's best conciliator. The controversy between the miners and operators has been going on for eight months and many negotiations have been attempted. In a meeting with the President and McGrady at Hyde Park the United Mine Workers agreed to permit existing wage pacts to continue in force seven more days, thus averting the walkout that would have started September 16. Negotiations toward a new wage contract were then started, with McGrady representing President Roosevelt.

F. C. Hoyt Is Appointed New Alcohol Administrator

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT appointed Franklin Chase Hoyt, former judge of the Children's court in New York city, to be federal alcohol administrator to succeed Joseph C. Choate, who administered the federal alcohol control act until that legislation was knocked out by the Supreme court's NRA decision.

Ball Player Is Killed in Fight on Flying Plane

LEN KOENECKE, outfielder for the Brooklyn Dodgers, was killed in an airplane over the Long Branch race track near Toronto in a fight with Pilot W. J. Mulqueeney of Detroit and his helper, Irwin Davis. Koenecke had chartered the plane at Detroit to go to Buffalo and it is said had been drinking. The pilot said the ball player persistently annoyed him and then engaged in a wild fight with Davis, and to save the plane from a crash Mulqueeney hit Koenecke on the head

Kentucky Operators Fight Guffey Coal Act

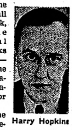
LEGAL attack on the Guffey soft coal act has been opened by 16 coal companies operating in Harlan county, Kentucky, in Federal court at Louisville. They brought suit for injunction against its enforcement, charging that it violates the federal Constitution in these ways:

1. It violated the fifth amendment, which forbids taking property without due process of law.
2. It violated the tenth amendment, which reserves to the states, or to the people, all rights not granted the federal government or forbidden the states.
3. It attempts to delegate legislative power.
4. The section levying a 15 per cent tax on all coal production, with a 90 per cent refund to producers submitting to the code provided by the act, is "an unconstitutional attempt on the part of congress, under the guise of taxation, to punish those producers of bituminous coal who are unwilling to surrender their constitutional rights."
5. Congress has no jurisdiction over and no power to legislate upon certain matters covered by the act or the code.

The companies declared they would refuse to submit to the act and the code it authorizes.

President Settles Warm Hopkins-Ickes Dispute

PUBLIC WORKS ADMINISTRATOR ICKES and Work Progress Administrator Hopkins got into such a quarrel over the spending of the $4,000,000,000 fund that the President had to call them to Hyde Park, together with the third and neutral member of the works relief triumvirate—Frank G. Walker, the director of the national emergency council and administrator of applications.



Harry Hopkins

Others called to the important works relief parley included Daniel Bell, director of the budget; Charles West, under-secretary of interior; Corrington Gill, assistant of Hopkins; Fred Ironsides, administrative assistant of Walker, and Col. Horatio Hackett, chief of housing in the public works administration.

Mr. Roosevelt was determined to have peace, and told those present that the prime necessity at this time is to make jobs quickly, always keeping in mind the idea of turning workers back to private industry as business warrants. This looked like a victory for Hopkins, who favors quick jobs, over Ickes, champion of permanent public works. The President has declared that he hopes 3,500,000 persons can be removed from the relief rolls and put to work by the first of November.

Gift of $5,000,000 for University of Michigan

UNIVERSITY of Michigan is rejoicing over a gift of $5,000,000 for enlargement of its graduate school. The money is donated by the Horace H. and Mary A. Rackham fund, based on the bulk of the estate of the late Horace H. Rackham, Detroit philanthropist.

One million dollars will be spent to purchase a square block of land adjoining the present campus and for a new building. The remainder will be employed as an endowment. The income will be used to promote research. By the terms of the agreement the school will be known as the Horace H. Rackham School of Graduate Studies.

Dame Madge Kendall, Once Famous Actress, Dies

DAME MADGE KENDALL, one of the best English actresses of the Victorian age, died at the age of eighty-six at her home in Hertfordshire. She was not only an accomplished actor but also a great producer and teacher of acting, and after her retirement from the stage in 1908 she did much excellent writing. Dame Kendall was well known to American theater goers of the late 90's.

Communists Are Barred by Commercial Telegraphers

THE Commercial Telegraphers' Union of North America, at its annual convention in Chicago, voted to bar Communists from membership. International President Frank B. Powers of Chicago and Secretary-Treasurer W. L. Allen of Winnipeg were re-elected.

Remnants of Grand Army Parade in Grand Rapids

"WE WENT to war on foot, and we're joining the parade the same way," declared about 150 of the grizzled veterans who attended the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic in Grand Rapids, Mich. So these sturdy old men marched in the big parade while the rest, numbering some 250, rode in automobiles. Here were all that remained of the hundreds of thousands who answered the call to the colors in Civil war days, save for a few who were kept at home by extreme age and illness. Some of the states had no representatives in the line, but their flags were carried nevertheless. From other states there were but one or two. It was a pathetic but inspiring procession.

Oley Nelson, ninety-one, of Slater, Iowa, was elected commander-in-chief, to succeed Albert E. Stacey of Elbridge, N. Y.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Pipestone—A belated heat wave struck this community last week with the mercury soaring to 93 degrees.

St. Paul—Governor Floyd B. Olson has set December 2 as the convening date for a special session of the legislature.

Marshall—The city of Marshall was granted a landing field license for the municipal airport, making it one of seven licensed fields in the state.

Thief River Falls—An office was established here by Attorney General Harry H. Peterson to give owners of land in the Mud lake game refuge area a chance to deal directly with the state in selling their property for the refuge.

Cloquet—Approximately 50 boys have been chosen to serve on the school police force by Chief of Cloquet Police Adolph Reed. Organized six years ago by Chief Reed, the patrol has had approximately 600 boys in its service.

Lake City—Three civic and service clubs will organize a chapter of the Minnesota Law and Order League here. Co-operating in the movement are the American Legion, Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Lake City Lions Club.

Milaca—Landscaping of the Mille Lacs lake highway will be the project for a concentration of CCC camps in this vicinity during fall and winter. Heavy underbrush along the lake shore will be cleared, unsightly road construction scars removed and scenic advantages of the highway improved.

Moose Lake—The state board of control voted to establish the new $2,165,000 state hospital for the insane on a 1,700-acre tract at Moose lake, across the lake from this village. Cost of the site was estimated at $78,450, of which the Moose Lake Commercial club will pay the amount in excess of $66,500.

Jasper—Folks for several miles around listened to the strains of "Home Sweet Home" again as Eleck Elverson drew them out on his steam engine whistle to mark the end of the threshing season here. Elverson has entertained the community for years at the close of each threshing with his musical whistle.

International Falls—The whispering pines of Minnesota's big woods have a story so devoid of fires this year that state forestry officials are crossing their fingers. Records for decades toppled when State Forester Grover Conzet disclosed the fire menace cost $3,200 this year compared with $150,000 over a similar period in 1934.

Little Falls—The boyhood home of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh at Little Falls is to be restored as a WPA project under the direction of Martin Engstrom, Lindbergh's friend. The federal government, through WPA, will donate $2,500 to restore the home and replace missing furniture and $23,700 to make a park of the famous flier's farm.

Redwood Falls—Lady Luck smiled on three occupants of an airplane that crashed on the railroad tracks southeast of here. A passenger train ground to a stop a foot from the wreckage as the flyers emerged. They were Ross Brand and Ray Schmeckel of Redwood Falls and Clinton Biggers, Renville pilot. None were injured.

Duluth—With the greatest tourist season in the history of the Minnesota Arrowhead country rapidly drawing to a close, resort owners already are making plans for next summer. Scores of the larger retreats along the lakes and streams in this region have announced extensive building plans for this fall and winter, according to S. V. Saxby, executive secretary of the Minnesota Arrowhead Association.

Slayton—The legislature should have been more liberal than it was in enacting the seed loan bill, but the language of the law requires that farmers make payment in grain of the same quality, Attorney General Harry H. Peterson said in a letter to State Senator J. V. Weber here. The letter was in reply to a telegram from Senator Weber asking Mr. Peterson to change his opinion relative to the payments so as to eliminate the requirement of equal quality.

Wilton—Twelve of the 30 state and national forest Civilian Conservation Corps camps authorized for Minnesota under the expanded forestry program are now in operation. State forest camps are now established at the Beltrami Island forest near here; at the Beltrami forest near Warroad; at Bay Lake state forests near Nisswa, and at Land O' Lakes state forest near Remer. Five of the nine camps on the Chippewa and three of the 12 on the Superior have also been established. The 18 other camps will be organiezd as rapidly as sufficient enrollment is obtained. Two hundred men is the enrollment necessary to establish a camp.

Wadena—Not to be outdone by other communities of the state with their annual sauerkraut, sweet corn, watermelon and kolacky days, Wadena businessmen are planning a pancake day, Wednesday, October 2.

St. Paul—The WPA (works progress administration) assigned jobs to 5,000 men and women on Minnesota's relief rolls and will continue to add at least 5,000 more persons each week to employment lists until the state relief load is taken up, Victor Christgau, WPA administrator for Minnesota, announced.

To Slice Bacon

Try slicing bacon this way: Place the rind down. Do not cut through the rind. Slice the number of pieces you want. Then cut them free from the rind. Cut as close to the rind as possible to avoid waste. You will find that you get the best results in this way.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen limbs; feel nervous, miserable—all upset.

Don't delay! Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are especially for poorly functioning kidneys. They are recommended by grateful users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG WASHINGTON D C

Washington.—When President Roosevelt entered the White House March 4, 1933, every dollar of federal money that was expended was accounted for and the vouchers reviewed by the general accounting offices. J. Raymond McCarl, comptroller general of the United States, occupied and still occupies an independent position in the accountings he directed and the reviews that were made under the budget and accounting law. But with the arrival of the New Deal and the crisis in government and the nation arising from the depression, scores of new laws were enacted, new agencies of government were created and billions of dollars were appropriated, the bulk of it being spent without reference to the accounting act or the bureau of the budget. Congress, under White House direction, did not make these new agencies or their spending accountable to the comptroller general.

Check on Spending

It was almost two years before President Roosevelt saw fit to make any of the emergency agencies, the alphabetical soup, amenable to the general accounting office. Consequently, millions upon millions of dollars were spent and only the spending agencies knew whether they were spent in accordance with law. Now, however, things have changed. Late last winter, the President began extending the broad wings of the general accounting office over emergency agencies and has continued to do so until, only the other day, the last of these were made responsible to the comptroller general. Thus an independent governmental unit—one with no axes to grind—again is in a position to say whether federal money is being spent as congress directed and in a manner which the taxpayers have the right to demand.

This spending of money in gigantic amounts always breeds suspicion. It causes people to inquire, whatever the form of government may be or whatever political party may be in control, whether there is waste or graft, whether the then office holders are feathering their own nests, and many another question of the like. It was true in the case of the New Deal. Observers here in Washington constantly were receiving information alleging that this individual or that had been displaying signs of unusual prosperity; that rumors were afloat concerning graft and crookedness in one agency or another and that "somebody ought to expose" the goings-on with respect to a named department of government. It was not an unusual circumstance because in every administration we here in Washington who attempt to see and to hear as much as we can, get the same kind of reaction. Only, it seemed to have been worse this time and well it may have been because the amount of money made available to President Roosevelt and his subordinates was so much larger. It is my belief, however, that there has not been more of this intangible thing called graft in government in the present administration than in most others. There has been some crookedness because there have been court convictions of some officials but I expect when and if the future lays bare all facts concerning the present administration and its handling of the vast sums of money available to it, it will be disclosed that most of the New Deal officials have been honest in their disbursement of funds. Their friends may have profited but, if they have, that is just a repetition of an old story, a circumstance always developing in a government managed under the two party system. To the victors always go the spoils.

Criticize Spending

If Mr. Roosevelt has been able to keep down straight-out crookedness, he is to be commended. It will remove from the forthcoming campaign some of the mud slinging that really has no place in national politics. But, while the President is entitled to commendation for the attempts at honest disbursement of funds, I hear more and more criticism of the way the money has been spent. Indeed, it appears now that the vast expenditures by the administration are likely to be as much of a campaign issue as is his proposal to alter the Constitution to fit New Deal plans.

Every one knows that when an individual's pocketbook is touched, he rises in revolt. By the time the next election comes around individuals will have had their pocketbooks touched rather forcibly by national and state and local taxes of an increased amount. Thus, it is easy to see how the criticism of Roosevelt's spending is growing and can continue to grow. The government has been pushed ten or ten or twelve billion more in debt and the end is not in sight, despite the fact that Mr. Roosevelt has intimated on several occasions lately that he proposes to curtail federal expenditures except for emergency purposes. Those announcements and any future declarations he may make are not going to soften the antagonistic feeling that people have for any public official who wastes money whether the motives be proper or improper.

From this point, one may look into the crystal of the 1936 campaign and it takes no stretch of the imagination to visualize what a pounding the New Deal opposition will give the Roosevelt administration on this question of spending.

When Mr. Roosevelt began spending, he declared it was justified because hundreds of thousands of citizens were starving. His next pronouncement on this subject by way of explaining continued expenditure was that if the government spent freely, it would serve as a priming of the economic pump; that the circulation of federal money would allow industry to sell and that industry would replace by manufacture the things sold. That, too, brought little or no result. Then we entered the current stage where the spending was to be closely supervised and only projects that held promise of actually developing manufacture and retail selling would be approved and financed by federal money. It is regrettable but it is a fact that almost nothing has come of this program.

And to make matters worse, lately, Secretary Ickes, public works administrator, and Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins have locked horns on the bulk of the projects on which federal money was to be used.

It is not strange that these two men should differ. Mr. Hopkins, being a trained, a professional, welfare worker, sees things only from the standpoint of the individual who needs food. Mr. Ickes has a conception of federal spending that embraces the use of money in ways designed to start the great industries in motion. He figures that if these industries get going, they will employ workers; the workers will spend their wages and the retailers will profit thereby and, as the retailers sell from their shelves, they seek replacements from the manufacturers. The controversy between Mr. Hopkins and Mr. Ickes, therefore, is not one to be settled by compromise or by soft words. In fact, it may never be settled until one or the other gets out of his place in the government.

Break for Taxpayers

The importance of the Ickes-Hopkins row to the reader of this column, however, lies largely in the fact that the particular reader is a taxpayer. The connection is simply this: the last congress appropriated $4,880,000,000 for use by the administration in public works and relief. If all of that sum were spent the public debt would be increased by that amount because internal revenue taxes are insufficient to offset more than the ordinary government expenditures. Therefore, if all of this money is not spent, and it cannot be spent if the Ickes-Hopkins dispute continues to hold back administration plans, then the taxpayers will have just that much less of a government debt to meet through this payment of their taxes.

So the President's order placing all administrative agencies under the general accounting office to see that their spending is honestly done and the developments within the administration over a difference in policy must be taken together as a break for the taxpayer.

Potato Control

Agriculture adjustment administration officials are about ready to present to the farmers of this country a detailed plan for control of potato production. It will provide means for boosting the incomes of the potato farmers something more than 100 per cent, and will increase the cost of this item of food to consumers by a proportionate amount, of course. Conferences soon will be held between the AAA and representatives of farmers' organizations to work out phases of the plan requiring farmer approval.

Various thoughts arise if one reflects upon potato control. First, control of potato production marks the fourteenth agricultural crop brought under regimentation and it presents, probably, the toughest of all of them in the matter of enforcing its provisions.

Adoption of the potato control program represents attainment of a point in the life of the AAA where one step has led to another until control of potatoes was essential, or the whole plan of crop control flops. It will be recalled that the declared purpose of the AAA at the beginning was only for the control of cotton. Land withheld from cotton then was planted to tobacco and tobacco had to be controlled; when tobacco was controlled, and the land withdrawn, farmers in some sections turned to peanuts and peanuts had to be controlled.

I understand the AAA is considerably worried about the job of enforcing the potato control law. That law provides compulsion against overproduction in the form of a tax club—a tax of 45 cents a bushel. In addition, there are penalties of an amazingly severe kind—$1,000 fine for the first offense and imprisonment for not more than a year for the second.

NOT YET READY FOR PRESIDENCY

Mrs. Roosevelt Says U. S. Does Not Want Woman for Chief Executive.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt answers the question, "Can a Woman Ever Be President of the United States?" in the Cosmopolitan.

"Certainly, a woman can be President," she states, "in all probability some time a woman will be, but she may not, in my opinion, be elected at the present time or in the near future. People in general do not like the idea of a woman as Chief Executive.

"Men and women in this country today would vote for a man against a woman for President no matter what her qualifications might be. I, for one, am glad this is so, for when a woman assumes this great responsibility, other women throughout the country should be qualified to help her carry the burden of that office. This will require a far more general development of interest in public questions, past and present, and more willingness to serve in public positions than we have yet seen."

Before they are Presidential timber, the First Lady believes women must not only possess the character, education and physical strength which the office demands of men, but they must mature politically. They must become leaders. They must conquer their emotionalism, and their too personal point of view. They must assume responsibility and take the consequences.

"Before a woman may serve the country usefully as President, not to speak of being elected," she goes on, "we women as a whole shall have to be more willing to master subjects which we have considered uninteresting; we shall have to be willing to perform tasks which we have shunned in the past; we shall, I believe, have to reach the point in industry and government where the sex line is practically removed.

"The vast majority of women have not yet attained the power to be objective about their work and impersonal in their business contacts. They must learn to stand criticism and disagreement without allowing personal feeling to enter into their evaluations of that criticism. They must freely grant the other person's right to a different point of view. . . . They must stand on their own feet and make no excuses. They should come up from the bottom and learn their jobs in public life step by step. Above all, they must learn to take other women with them. They must learn that only in proportion as women as a whole are educated in public affairs will individual women succeed in positions of importance.

"When women are prepared and do assume leadership and command a following, regardless of sex, I believe that the advance of the human race toward the goal of human happiness will be more rapid than it has ever been."

HITCH-HIKING FLY SPREADS DISEASE

The common house fly is a hitchhiker. However, the fly doesn't bother to jerk a thumb and ask a ride: it flies into moving autos or even trains or airplanes without permission and often travels hundreds of miles before leaving its chosen vehicle.

This habit of flies traveling great distances on other power than their own has made local fly eradication campaigns less effective than the campaigners hoped. Cases have been found where a fly carried disease germs on its legs and body for miles and infected people in the community where it settled. No previous cases of the disease were in existence in the new community and health authorities could find no other source of infection than flies.

Repeated warnings of physicians and health officials have apparently failed to instill a proper fear of the house fly in the average mind. However, a more thorough knowledge of the habits of a fly would increase the respect for this tiny insect, according to authorities on the subject.

Decent cleanliness in any home requires protection against the menace of flies. Whether a fly is homeborn or a hitch-hiking visitor, he is a danger. Fortunately, an effective fly-killing program can be conducted in any home by the use of a reliable fly spray containing an ample quantity of Pyrethrins, a product derived from Pyrethrum flowers, which is death to flies, when sprayed in a fine mist.

"I've discovered Calumet's big, new 10¢ can!"

"No more 'by-guess-and-by-golly' baking in this house now!"
says Mrs. Owen H. Fleming, 1235 Judson Ave., Evanston, Ill.

Mrs. Fleming was one of the first women to get the big, new 10c can of Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder.

"No need for any woman to take chances with her baking now," she says. "That new 10c can of Calumet certainly means that the very best can be bought at a bargain."

Ask your grocer to show you the new, bigger 10c Calumet can!

* * *

WHY DOES CALUMET give such astonishing "baking luck?" Why is Calumet different from other baking powders? Because Calumet combines two distinct leavening actions. A quick one for the mixing bowl. A slower one for the oven . . . And Calumet's famous double-action is so perfectly balanced and controlled that it produces perfect leavening—every time.

All Calumet prices are lower! Calumet is now selling at the lowest prices in its history. The Full-Pound Can now sells regularly for only 25¢. And if you want a smaller size—get the new, big 10¢ can—a lot of good baking for a dime—with Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder.

COMMUNICATION

To the Editor,
Dear Sir:

An election has been called for Oct. 14 to decide the question of opening Pennington county to the sale of intoxicating liquors. This election will cost the county in the neighborhood of $1,500.

In view of the fact that the county has so recently voted against the repeal of prohibition and in view of the fact that the persons who formulated and circulated the petitions undoubtedly have at heart the best interests of the county, some of us would like to know who caused the petition to be drawn and circulated and what are the benefits expected to follow the sale of intoxicating liquors in the county.

Yours truly,
E. A. COOKE, President,
Pennington County Dry League

Mr. and Mrs. John Joicho and daughter, Alice of Harris, Minnesota, Mr. Clarence Roese, Joyce and Stanley Roese of Hazel, Mr. and Mrs. Ary Roese of Thief River Falls visited Sunday at the Albert Priebe home in Thief River Falls.

SILO COLLAPSES ON BEEBE FARM

The big glazed tile silo on the N. E. Beebe farm adjoining the village, collapsed Friday noon soon after being filled to its top with feed for winter use. In falling, part of the silo as well as its heavy contents struck the west side of the new barn crushing in the wall and doing considerable damage to the structure. It is believed the heavy wind Thursday night weakened the silo to such extent it was not able to withstand its contents which amounted to some hundreds of tons. The loss is no small one. Besides the silo, which is a total loss, cost of repairing the barn will amount to a considerable sum.

A group of a dozen or more neighbors gathered at the farm last Sunday and assisted Mr. Beebe in removing the debris and making temporary arrangements for taking care of the silage which represents the main part of feed for his dairy herd for the coming winter.

Last week Nick Schalz inserted a small adv in the Spectator offering for sale No. 2 gradeout potatoes at ten cents a bushel. This week he came in and asked to have his adv discontinued because he had so many calls for spuds that he was unable to supply but a small portion of them. Nick says he finds it pays to advertise.

ANNUAL 4-H CLUB ACHIEVEMENT DAY

As an added feature of the fall celebration in this city next week, the annual 4-H club fall achievement day will be held at the fair grounds Saturday, October 12, E. B. Norum, assistant county agent, announced today.

Members of projects involving market lambs, baby beef, market pigs, poultry and potatoes will exhibit at the show, and three lambs, one baby beef, one pig, one chicken and one turkey exhibit will be selected to go to the Junior Livestock show at South St. Paul November 11 to 14, while the winning potato exhibit will be sent to the Moorhead potato show in November.

Entries will be judged not only on the basis of exhibits but also with reference to record blanks covering the year's work, Mr. Norum stated. All entries are scheduled to be in place by 11 o'clock in the morning, and appropriate prizes will be awarded.

OPTION ELECTION, OCT. 14

The special election to decide the liquor question in Pennington county, will be held Monday, October 14. While not a great deal has been said or done as yet, it is expected much activity will be shown by both sides during the next ten days.

Mussolini's Demands Ruin Plans for Peace

ETHIOPIA accepted as a basis for discussion the plan submitted by the League of Nations committee of five nations, of which Salvador de Madariaga of Spain was chairman, but Italy rejected it utterly. Then Premier Mussolini offered, in the form of "observations," his counterdemands. The committee considered these quite out of the question and prepared to draw up a report to the league council announcing that its efforts had proved futile.

Salvador de Madariaga

Thus Italy was left in the position of having rejected all peace proposals and Ethiopia had made its case stronger by having accepted as a negotiatory instrument a plan that called on her to make drastic concessions. The issue was in this way put up to the council, whose duty was next to proceed under article 15 of the covenant, leading to sanctions against Italy unless Mussolini yields.

The Italian demands were considered most extravagant. One was for a sort of mandate over all of Ethiopia except the relatively small area inhabited by the Amharic people, who constitute the ruling class. Another was that Italy be ceded land to connect Eritrea and Italian Somaliland, now separated by French and British Somaliland. A third was for demobilization and disarming of a considerable portion of the Ethiopian army, the remainder to be put under Italian commanders.

In the diplomatic jockeying that followed the communication of these terms by Aloisi to Madariaga, the Italian baron said the proposals were unofficial, and this left the way open for further discussion. It was reported that the French and Italian delegates to the league had persuaded the British representatives that the three nations should hold another Stresa conference to insure European peace.

Great Britain informed Italy that her tremendous naval concentration in the Mediterranean was not ordered with any aggressive motive but because of the violent anti-English campaign carried on by the Fascist press of Italy. The massing of the British warships at Gibraltar, Malta, Alexandria and the Suez canal continued, and Italy responded by rearranging her naval dispositions. Also the flow of Italian troops to East Africa was continuous, and it was announced in Rome that 200,000 soldiers of the classes of 1911, 1912, 1913 and 1914 had reported for duty. This brought to 1,000,000 the total Italian mobilization, which Mussolini some time ago promised would be the mark reached before October 1.

Officials in Rome declared that Italy was determined to press a military campaign in Ethiopia, feeling that only by such a campaign—in which modern weapons would be called into play—could Ethiopia be eliminated as a "danger." They explained that Italy would do everything in its power to avoid a clash with Britain, and if possible, would localize its conflict with Ethiopia in east Africa.

Secretary Hull Sets Up Arms Control Office

PREPARING for the imminent probability of war between Italy and Ethiopia, Secretary of State Cordell Hull established an office of arms and munitions control to carry out the provisions of the neutrality act and direct federal control of the munitions traffic.

The office is under the direction of R. Walton Moore, assistant secretary of state. Joseph C. Green is chief of the office and has as his assistant Charles W. Yost.

Strong, Swift Army Urged by General MacArthur

GEN. DOUGLAS MAC ARTHUR, retiring chief of staff, in his final report recommended a five-year plan for making the American army into an instrument of speed, fighting ability and destructive power unsurpassed elsewhere. Quality rather than quantity, he said, was needed, and he proposed that all implements of war be modernized and that the technical training of the officers be intensified. He said:

Gen. MacArthur

"Beyond all doubt, any major war of the future will see every belligerent nation highly organized for the single purpose of victory, the attainment of which will require integration and intensification of individual and collective effort.

"But it will be a nation at war rather than a nation in arms. Of this vast machine the fighting forces will be only the cutting edge; their mandatory characteristics will be speed in movement, power in fire and shock action, and the utmost in professional skill and leadership.

"Their armaments will necessarily be of the most efficient types obtainable and the transportation, supply and maintenance systems supporting them will be required to function perfectly and continuously. Economic and industrial resources will have to insure the adequacy of munitions supply and the sustenance of the whole civil population. In these latter fields the great proportion of the employable population will find its war duty."

French Croix De Feu Men in Big Mobilization

FRENCH Nationalists, whose organization is known as Croix de Feu, are preparing to take over control of the government—at some future time not yet determined. Just to show their strength, they were directed by their leader, Col. Francois de la Rocque, to "mobilize" the other night secretly in forests and fields throughout France, and it was claimed that 250,000 members gathered. Communists and Socialists attacked the "Cross of Fire" at Caen and other places and several men were injured. De la Rocque's followers, however, refrained from violence. To one of the meetings he addressed, the would-be dictator said: "We won't fight back until the time comes for mass mobilization; then we will fight as a single unit."

Remembering what Mussolini and his Fascists did in Italy, these Croix de Feu men may have to be reckoned with later in France.

Manuel Quezon Is Elected Philippines President

WHEN the new Philippines commonwealth is formally born on November 15 in Manila, with Vice President John M. Garner officiating as its godfather, Manuel Quezon, for 20 years the leader of the fight for independence, will be inaugurated as its first president. In the recent election he and his entire ticket were victorious. The defeated rivals for the presidency were Emilio Aguinaldo, who led the rebellion against American rule years ago, and Bishop Gregorio Aglipay. They were virtually snowed under.

Manuel Quezon

Sergio Osmena was elected vice president, and victory of Manuel Roxas, Quintin Paredes and Camilo Osias assured the new president ample leadership in the unicameral national assembly, where he also will have a clear voting majority.

Quezon's term of office is six years and his annual salary will be $15,000.

Aguinaldo charged fraud in the election and sent a protest to President Roosevelt. But all he obtained from that quarter was an indirect snub, for the President immediately sent to Quezon the following message:

"My most official congratulations upon your election to the highest office within the gift of the Filipino people. Your overwhelming choice by the electorate is a fitting culmination of your many years of patriotic labor in behalf of the country."

President Gets Ready for Western Trip

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT returned to the White House from his three weeks' vacation in Hyde Park and started in on a busy week of official duties and preparation for his trip to San Diego, Calif. Among the first things he did was the delivery of a radio address in behalf of the Annual Mobilization for Human Needs. In this he explained his position on taxing corporation gifts to charity. He also took up the matter of speeding up the expenditure of the huge work relief fund and discussed with advisers the problem of the soft coal miners' strike. Mr. Roosevelt will not make many speeches on his western jaunt.

By executive order the President added $800,000,000 to the sum which Harry Hopkins has to spend as PWA administrator, making the total at his command $1,375,000,000.

Flight to Lithuania Ends on an Irish Field

LIEUT. FELIX WAITKUS, young Chicago and Wisconsin aviator, made a gallant effort to fly solo and nonstop from New York to Kaunas, Lithuania, and failed, though he did get safely across the Atlantic ocean. Lost in fog and tired out, he made a forced landing on a rough field near Ballinrobe, Ireland. The machine was badly damaged but Waitkus was uninjured.

De Wolf Hopper, Comedian, Taken by Death

DEATH came suddenly in Kansas City to De Wolf Hopper, American comedian who for more than half a century had been a favorite of theater-goers. He was seventy-seven years old and of late had been giving weekly radio broadcasts. He succumbed to a heart attack.

Missouri Farmers Sentenced for Plattsburg Riot

TWELVE Missouri farmers have been convinced that it doesn't pay to interfere with Federal court proceedings and they were sentenced to Leavenworth for terms ranging from one day to three years. The farmers wept, and the judge relented, placing them on probation. Led by Sam Divelbiss, on whose farm a foreclosure sale was to be held, they disarmed and beat United States Marshal H. L. Dillingham and three aids and threatened them with hanging. The farmers were arrested and taken before Federal Judge Reeves in St. Joseph, who said they were guilty of holding federal officers captive, damaging a motor car, mayhem, felonious assault, robbery, disturbance of the peace, rioting and resisting an officer.

The defendants pleaded guilty and were promptly sentenced. The government charged that the Farmers' Protective association fostered the riotous gathering and so Clifton Gall, its secretary, was given the heaviest penalty

Pennsylvanians Against Basic Law Changes

WHILE all the nation was celebrating Constitution day, the citizens of Pennsylvania went to the polls and voted overwhelmingly against the calling of a Constitutional convention for the purpose of "modernizing" the state's basic law which was adopted 61 years ago. Since the proposed changes were to have a decided New Deal trend, the Republicans looked on the result of the referendum as a victory of national significance. The revision was strongly supported by Governor Earle and the state Democratic organization and also by organized labor.

Eccles Will Direct New Reform of Banking

MARRINER S. ECCLES, head of the federal reserve system, has been re-appointed by the President, and so will be chairman of the board that will put into operation the new banking reform law. Later the President will name six other members of the board. Mr. Eccles is the exponent of the theories that monetary control must be from a "national viewpoint," that the government should spend heavily in bad times to create employment and expand credit, and that it should tax in good years to reduce debt and prevent excessive accumulation of income.

Mercker, Potato Czar, Will Have His Troubles

A. E. MERCKER, who used to be secretary of the Interstate Early Potato committee, has been made head of the potato section of the Agricultural adjustment administration, and his troubles are just beginning. Control of the potato crop is considered a natural sequence in the policy that is being followed by the AAA, and, like other parts of Secretary Wallace's agricultural plan, it is supported earnestly and as seriously condemned. Among those who oppose potato control is Porter R. Chandler of Geneseo, N. Y., a gentleman farmer. He has advertised extensively his intention to grow and sell potatoes in defiance of the federal potato control act and invites prosecution.

A. E. Mercker

Now, co-operating with Mr. Chandler, comes Norman C. Norman, a New York jeweler who some time ago defied the jewelers' code. He sent to the gentleman farmer an order for six or more bushels of "strictly illegal potatoes," and the order was filled at once. Norman suggested that the potatoes be routed through New Jersey to make the offense interstate, and offered to make more than one purchase, "as it is my understanding that the second purchase will entitle me to go to the penitentiary."

McCarl Stops Funds for Reedsville Factory

COMPTROLLER GENERAL McCARL in a formal opinion held that there is no legal authorization for the federal government to pay out any funds for the construction of a furniture factory at Reedsville, W. Va. This has been a project especially favored by Mrs. Roosevelt. It was intended originally that the factory should make furniture for government offices and give employment to transplanted coal miners. A year ago McCarl refused to sanction an allocation to the factory from recovery funds. Then congress turned on the project on the ground that it descriminated against private industry. McCarl says the Department of the Interior went ahead with letting contracts for the construction, nevertheless, and the building is about 80 per cent completed.

Comittee of Lawyers Hits New Labor Law

"UNCONSTITUTIONAL" is the verdict of the American Liberty league's committee of 58 lawyers on the Wagner-Connery labor relations act.

"It is out belief," said the opinion, written in the form of a brief, "that the statute unnecessarily and arbitrarily infringes upon the individual liberties of the employer and the employee and is therefore invalid."

This is the first of a proposed series of opinions on recent federal legislation by the committee of lawyers.

Copies of the opinion were sent to all members of the full committee and dissenting opinions were invited, but none were offered.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Minneapolis—Approximately 2,700 freshmen have entered the University this semester.

Lester Prairie—Spread of equine sleeping sickness in this vicinity is indicated by farmers reports.

Mountain Lake—Contract has been let for razing of the old flour mill, familiar landmark and once the outstanding industry of Mountain Lake.

Hewitt—Three business establishments, including the Hewitt Banner were destroyed by fire. A hardware store and barber shop were also destroyed.

Ada—A $25,000 fire destroyed the Cargill elevator, a coal shed and box car and for a time threatened part of the business district. An explosion preceeded the fire.

Mountain Lake—A net profit of $600 has been made by the Mountain Lake municipal electric plant in its one month of operation, a report by F. M. Bang, superintendent, shows.

Montgomery—A crowd of 50,000 persons turned out for the annual Kolacky Day, a parade, with at least a dozen bands, and ten drum corps in addition to many industrial and organization floats featured the celebration here.

Duluth—Fire department chiefs and safety leaders throughout northern Minnesota wi join in the first regional fire school, which will be held October 12, as the concluding feature of the National Fire Prevention week observance in the area.

Fairmont—Fairmont voters have approved by a majority of 71, purchase of five acres of the school board for an athletic field. WPA assistance has been asked to put the land in shape for football, baseball and track activities. The total cost would be $19,000.

Long Prairie—A 17-year-old farm youth shot and killed his father after the latter, in an intoxicated condition, had severely beaten his wife. The victim was John Frank, 45, farmer, living 14 miles north of here. The son, Roy, was held in the county jail without charge.

St. Paul—County farm warehousing boards recently established in every surplus grain raising county in the state, will soon be ready to inspect supplies of farm stored grain and issue certificates which owners may use as collateral for government and private loans, E. J. Falvey of University farm, said.

Owatonna—A municipal swimming pool—a dream of city officials for years—will be a reality through construction of a second dam on Straight river. The city council provided a portion of materials and sanctioned the use of land in Morehouse park during operations. Labor will be provided by a CCC camp.

St. Paul—Frank B. Kellogg of St. Paul, former secretary of state and world renowned author of the Kellogg-Briand pact for the outlawry of war, resigned as a judge of the Permanent Court of International Justice—the World Court at The Hague—dispatches from the League of Nations secretariat in Geneva announced.

Anoka—Miss Doris Lee was one of three persons in the nation to win a trip to California i. a "Believe It or Not" contest staged by Robert Ripley. Her entry was a story of an Alaskan miner who pulled his own teeth, killeld a bear, used the bear's teeth to make himself a set of false teeth, then ate the bear with its own molars.

Moose Lake—Work was expected to get under way here immediately on the new $2,700,000 state hospital for the insane, members of the committee active in promoting the Moose Lake site, announced. The community is looking forward to a doubling of its population, within the next two years. Dr. Thomas Moe, president of the Moose Lake Commercial Club, said.

St. Paul—Demonstration of a futuristic, fabricated home, built around motorized units will be one of the outstanding attractions in the Twin Cities during the autumn months. A demonstration house, which has been erected at 1969 Jefferson avenue, St. Paul, will be open to the public beginning September 29. Volume production of factory-built homes will speed the return of the building industry to prosperity, Conrad Hamm, builder, believes.

Austin—A practical test of one of the New Deal's most ambitious projects—suburban homestead housing—got under way in this community when 44 families moved into dwellings erected by the federal government and for which their occupants will pay $15 a month for 30 years. Modern little structures, well built, well equipped, comfortably arranged and provided with plenty of garden space, are the homes to which Uncle Sam's tenants are moving. They represent part of the experiment in housing which the national administration has studied and nurtured many months.

Minneapolis—Plans for co-operating with the federal government in a religious education program in CCC camps throughout the nation were made by directors of the Luther league, international young people's organization of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America, at a meeting here. Under the plan the Luther league would provide library books and volunteer instructors, who would work with chaplains in the camps in an effort to create an improved moral atmosphere.

Billings Child Knew Just Where That Clam Went

The Billings child on her Sunday visit to the beach picked up a clamshell and regarded it meditatively.

"Now I wonder where that clam has gone to?" she inquired.

Neither parent responded. Four-year-olds are always wondering something, and Billings was busy resting in the hot sand, while Mrs. Billings was busy rubbing sunburn oil on her person.

"I wonder where that clam has gone to?" repeated the Billings child. No answer being forthcoming she demanded loudly:

"Mommie, do you want to know where that clam has gone to? Daddy, do you want to know where that clam has gone to?"

Both parents averred absently that they did.

The Billings child tossed aside the empty shell, picked up her pail and shovel and started for the water. In departing she remarked:

"It's crawled into an oyster shell and is going around fooling people."—New York Sun.

Find Out

From Your Doctor if the "Pain" Remedy You Take Is Safe.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

RADIO ALARM FOR HOMES

A new invention is a radio alarm system for houses, that, when turned on at night creates a sensitive electrical zone around the exterior of the dwelling, several feet deep. When an intruder steps into this "field," a circuit breaks, the alarm sounds, and floodlights brightly illuminate the walls and yards. Users fearing that their power lines might be cut can connect the device to a storage battery.

Party Backs Roosevelt

Washington.—I believe the trend of recent developments begins to indicate rather definitely that President Roosevelt is going to be able to hold a rather united Democratic party behind him in his next campaign. The chances of a split in his ranks are very small, indeed, and barring changes of which there are at present no hints at all, the New Deal will encompass the Democratic party which nominated and elected Mr. Roosevelt as President.

By those statements, it is not meant that no defections will take place. There always are some disgruntled and dissatisfied party men who break away. They have done it with Republicans and Democrats with equal abandon. There will be some in the 1936 campaign, but not very many. These statements are made by way of discounting offshoots of consequence under radical leadership and offshoots of equal consequence behind old-line conservative Democratic leadership. It is, of course, just possible that William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, and Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state under Woodrow Wilson, may succeed in development of a conservative alignment with major support but the situation is not one likely to cause the New Deal leaders any particular embarrassment. Likewise the death of Senator Huey P. Long removes what might possibly have been a radical party wedge. The late Louisiana senator was making some progress in development of a radical party but with him removed from the scene there is no longer any possibility of that group attaining a place of importance in the political structure. They are fighting among themselves and it is apparent now that the group will be split into a score of factions, none which will have any capacity to accomplish the purposes which Senator Long had outlined.

Long's Death Helps

Judged impartially, the death of Senator Long ought to enhance the Democratic prospects in 1936. This certainly is true unless the administration between now and the next election decides to court the conservative vote in the country and in doing so offends the progressive segment of voters to which Mr. Roosevelt largely owes his 1932 election. To reiterate, it is possible, of course, that Mr. Roosevelt or his party advisers may make mistakes which will throw the whole party machine out of gear, but they are not now in evidence.

The reason the passing of Huey Long is important from the political standpoint is pictured most reliably in the history of third party movements. While it is obvious that Senator Long could never have been elected President—and I believe he was too smart a politician to think that he could have been successful—there was the danger from the Roosevelt standpoint that he could alienate some part of the vote which elected Mr. Roosevelt in 1932. If he had been able to do this, it is certain that Republican chances would have been enhanced because the Republican vote would have remained solidly behind the Republican candidate.

Some years ago, Robert M. La Follette, then a senator from Wisconsin, ran for the Presidency on a third party ticket. He polled about five million votes. This happened at a time when the country was reasonably prosperous. Surely, the economic conditions were of a character that bred less discontent than those of this depression era. So, astute political observers tell me that, it takes little stretch of the imagination to conceive of a radical party, led by a man of the dynamic characteristics of Huey Long, being able to poll as many as ten million votes throughout the country despite the difficulties that always face the organization of a new political party.

Whatever criticism may have been or may be voiced of the late senator from Louisiana, everywhere one goes among political leaders, he obtains the same expression of opinion respecting the senator's ability. He had a smart mind, one that grasped situations, particularly in politics, with great speed and he was always ready at a moment's notice to capitalize on those situations. Thus, if Mr. Long had lived, it is easy to imagine what he would have done in case the New Deal leaders made mistakes. He would have hopped on those mistakes with the avidity of a cat on a mouse; he would have magnified them in his speeches to his following and by these acts he would have aided and abetted the Republican opposition.

So, while the national capital was startled by Senator Long's death and appalled at the manner of his going, it is not a violation of any confidence to say that New Deal politicians are resting easier. They enjoyed Huey, the man, but they recognized in him an adversary decidedly dangerous to their cause.

Other Factors

Now, as to other factors involved, factors that might withdraw support from Mr. Roosevelt. I said above that the Hearst-Colby movement is doomed to defeat. The real effect and probably the only effect that movement will have will be to force the Roosevelt leaders to realign their strength in some states. Mr. Hearst, with the great power of his string of newspapers behind him, has yet to succeed in creating a potent political group. He attempted it when the late Warren Harding of Ohio was the Republican nominee and James M. Cox of the same state was put forward by the Democrats. It was my good fortune to be assigned as a correspondent to the convention of Mr. Hearst's new party. It was evident then as it later was proved by the votes that the enthusiastic delegates to that convention represented a following so small as to be utterly negligible. Even with the astute advice of Bainbridge Colby, little more will come out of the current movement.

Then, those who have their eyes on the facts instead of on the ballyhoo will promptly discount the talk about Democratic defection when they stop to consider some other things that are taking place. For example, there have been no more bitter dissents from New Deal policies than Senator Carter Glass of Virginia and Senator Thomas P. Gore of Oklahoma have voiced. Mr. Glass lately has engaged in rites of burying the hatchet to the extent that he is not going to run for re-election in Virginia as anything but a Democrat.

Out in Oklahoma, Senator Gore has been making speeches that sound strangely as though he is almost friendly with the administration. He has been telling his audiences that he has stood with the President on many votes in the senate, sometimes when his vote was badly needed. Though it becomes apparent that while neither Senator Glass nor Senator Gore is enthusiastic about New Deal policies, neither of them is going to desert the Democratic party.

And, so it is in any number of other cases. They may not speak glowingly of President Roosevelt in their own campaigns for re-election but as candidates they are not going to fight him openly.

* * *

Avoids New Deal Test

"Big Jim" Farley, the master New Deal politician, successfuly avoided an out and out test of New Deal issues in Ohio when Governor Davey of that state announced recently that there would be no special election to choose a representative at large to fill a vacancy. The Ohio governor said it would cost too much money to hold a special election, his announcement being made at the White House just after President Roosevelt had agreed to allot $20,000,000 in public works funds for Ohio use.

But the astute Mr. Farley is not going to be able to avoid a test on New Deal issues in Kentucky. The situation in that state is that a Democrat of President Roosevelt's choice and who is supporting the New Deal from start to finish is running for governor against a hard-boiled and conservative Republican. The election will be the first week in November and thus a state-wide vote can be expected to measure the Roosevelt strength. Because of this, all of the maneuvers are being closely watched and the battle of those ballots obviously will be bitter.

The Kentucky test takes on additional significance and importance because of something that happened in choosing the Democratic nominee. The Kentucky fight is to determine whether Lieut. Gov. A. B. Chandler, the Democrat, or former Representative King Swope, the Republican, will run the state.

Governor Laffoon apparently wanted to have the Democratic nominee selected by the old convention method but the Roosevelt supporters preferred a primary. Consequently, Senator Barkley of Kentucky, a devout Roosevelt follower in the senate, was sent into his home state to see that the primary plan was made operative. The Democratic state committee which was empowered to choose the method of selecting the candidate was determined to have a convention and it was after this determination became known that Mr. Roosevelt participated in dictating the course the party should follow. Senator Barkley arrived in his home state bearing a letter signed "Franklin D. Roosevelt" urging the primary, and while Governor Laffoon was out of the state attempting to convince national leaders that his candidate for the Democratic nomination was the right one, Lieutenant Governor Chandler called a special session of the state legislature and put through a law compelling the selection of the candidate by the primary. Mr. Chandler won the nomination in the run-off although Thomas S. Rhea had polled more votes in the original primary than did Mr. Chandler.

So it is apparent beyond a doubt that Mr. Roosevelt recognizes the necessity for electing a Democrat, and New Deal supporters in Kentucky say that he is prepared to battle to the last ditch to accomplish it.

Nevertheless, the fur will fly in Kentucky in November. It cannot be avoided. If the administration wins, undoubtedly New Deal stock will be enhanced in value. But, if the Republican nominee should win the Kentucky test, the whole New Deal must be prepared to wear an unusual black eye.

Whale Yields New Product

What may prove to be as valuable to Norway as whale oil itself, is a new kind of meat extract made from whales. Experiments described as highly successful have been carried on in the Antarctic aboard Norwegian whalers. The greater part of the world's supply of whale oil is delivered in Norway. Although the value of whale meat as food has long been recognized only the oil of the whale has been utilized, owing to the difficulty of transporting the meat from the Antarctic. Now, however, the meat is being made into a sort of meat flour aboard the whalers. The flour is taken back to Norway, where a meat extract of a very satisfactory character is being produced.

All Must Die

Your man of genuine foresight has his cemetery lot long before he dies.

HEALTH AND GOOD LOOKS DEPEND ON HOW YOU STAND

There's beauty in good posture, declares Jeanette Eaton in the Parents' Magazine, and gives the following three reasons why the average person stands badly. First, comes the possibility of a bodily weakness. Second, part of the clothing may be uncomfortable or badly adjusted. Third, the individual is indifferent to her stoop.

It is one thing to recognize a fault and another to do something about it. Here follow a few practical "don'ts" if we would acquire good posture for ourselves or for our children.

Don't wear high heels when working or walking any distance.

Don't go upstairs clumping or stooping but hold the spine just as straight as you can.

Don't sit with legs crossed—this position puts a great strain on the muscles of back and hips.

Don't go without abdominal support unless you are taking a great deal of exercise.

Don't neglect to supply the right table, chairs and light for yourself and for your boys and girls who have homework to do—and see that their school does it, too.

As for the "dos"—here they are:
Hold your head well, chin up.
Try a little abdominal discipline.
Breathe deeply and often.
Take exercise, not necessarily a daily dozen at a given period but every now and again during the day whenever it is possible to do so.

CONSUMPTION OF FATS

The total factory consumption of all animal and vegetable fats and oils in this country last year amounted to 3,855,555,000 pounds. More than one-third, 1,375,416,000 pounds went into soap manufacture. Compounds and vegetable shortenings came next, and paint and varnish third. As might be expected, the largest single item was cottonseed oil, 1,083,959,000 pounds. Next in order of large items were: Edible tallow, 585,896,000 pounds; coconut oil, 549,515,000; linseed oil, 219,746,000; palm oil, 208,547,000.

We have on hand at all times for CHESTERFIELD cigarettes upwards of 350,000 bales of Turkish tobacco . . .

The pleasing aroma and flavor of Turkish tobacco is almost necessary if you want a good cigarette.

Turkish tobacco is more costly when you take into account that you have to pay 35c a pound duty, but we have to have it to blend with our mild ripe home-grown tobaccos.

It helps make Chesterfields milder, it helps give them better taste. Just try them.

TEACHERS MEET AT T. R. FALLS OCT. 17

The biennial convention of the Northern Minnesota Educational Association will be held at Thief River Falls, October 17 and 18. The opening session, at the Municipal Auditorium 10:30 a. m. Thursday will be addressed by Dr. Lotus D. Coffman, President of the University of Minnesota. He will speak on the subject, "Youth and Tomorrow's Problems."

Thursday afternoon at the second general session the convention will be addressed by Dr. Clyde Milton Hill, Chairman of the Department of Education, Yale University, and Dr. Lloyd C. Douglas, author of "Magnificent Obsession" and the recently serialized "Green Light".

Other nationally known educators will speak at the general sessions Friday morning and afternoon. The Schoolmaster's biennial banquet will be held Thursday evening at the Trinity church, and the Alumni of Bemidji State Teachers College will meet at luncheon Friday noon at the Evelyn Hotel.

The committee in charge of the convention is looking for one of the largest meetings the district has ever held.

A meeting of trustees of the Clara, Black River and St. Hilaire Swedish Lutheran churches was held Monday evening at the local parsonage. The meeting was held to discuss matters in connection with extensive repairs and alterations now being made at the parsonage which is owned jointly by the three congregations.

BAND GOING TO THIEF RIVER

The St. Hilaire School Band has been engaged to take part in the big three day celebration being held this week at Thief River Falls. The band will appear in the parade Saturday afternoon, and will also give a concert.

COUNTY OPTION VOTE ON MONDAY

Next Monday, October 14, the voters of Pennington county will have an opportunity to express their wishes as to whether of not legal sale of intoxicating liquor shall be permitted within the county. This village voted out saloons in 1910, and the county voted "dry" in 1914. Whether the sentiment that banished legal sale of liquor from the county in those days, has changed or not, remains for the election to decide.

SELMA WILSON AND EDWARD VIK WED

At eight o'clock Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Wilson in Wyandotte, occurred the marriage of their daughter, Selma Abigail, to Mr. Edward Vik, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arne Vik of this village.

The service was read by Rev. M. L. Dahle, pastor of the Norwegian Lutheran church, and the bridal couple were attended by Miss Helga Vik, sister of the groom, and Goodwin Wilson, brother of the bride.

Following the ceremony, a sumptuous wedding supper was served to the friends and relatives present.

Both bride and groom are well known thruout this community, and have a large circle of friends who join in wishing them a long and happily married life.

Mr. and Mrs. Vik will make their home on the groom's farm south of this village.

CHICKEN DINNER

A chicken dinner will be served at the Norwegian Lutheran church Friday this week. Following is the menu: Creamed chicken, mashed potatoes, meat balls in gravy, cranberries, pickles, cabbage salad, white and brown bread, apple pie, coffee.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Bill Olson is contemplating making some repairs on his blacksmith shop this fall.

John Gunstad is building a kitchen addition to his farm home east of the village.

A good sized crowd attended the dance given here last Saturday evening at the Bilden & Olsen hall.

The sum of $20.25 was realized from the sale of Forget-me-nots held here last week to assist disabled veterans.

Robert Collins is busy at redecorating interior of the old postoffice building for Walter Olson who will occupy it soon with his cafe and soft drink stand.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Giese and children motored over Sunday from East Grand Forks and spent the day at the home of Mrs. Giese's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Jackson.

Now that the world's series ball games are over, it will again be possible to find the ball fans among the business people at their places of business between the hours of 1:15 and 3:30.

Wm. Novak returned home last week after being a patient a few days at a Crookston hospital. He is not feeling as well as usual, and may decide to give up active work on his large farm southwest of here.

Andrew Ordahl, who resides near Oakridge church west of Thief River Falls, was critically injured Friday when his car collied with the northbound G. N. passenger train at the crossing near the fair grounds at Thief River.

Ben Rosendahl has the walls up on his new residence, and is earnestly hoping warm weather will remain long enough so he can get the cement wall coating and roof on. Interior finishing can be done later even if freezing temperatures set in.

After being a hospital patient for a while, George Biskey was able to come down town again Monday. His many friends hope he will continue to improve, and that his contemplated trip to higher altitude in Montana will bring him relief from asthma with which he has suffered for years.

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Dammon of Farmington came Sunday evening to spend a few days at the Mrs. Hilda Gigstad home. They, together with Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Gigstad and Mr. and Mrs. Chris Stapf of St. Paul, and Miss Huldah Gigstad of Moorhead had spent the weekend at Alexandria. The Dammons returned home Wednesday.

Harry Winter is nursing a badly injured hand which injury was sustained Sunday. While leading a young horse, the animal broke away and a wire snap at end of the halter rope caught Mr. Winter's hand cutting it seriously. As the injury is on the right hand, it will prevent Mr. Winter doing any work at his barbershop for another week or more.

A group of neighbors and friends gathered Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. M. L. Dahle and helped celebrate her birthday anniversary. A pleasant social afternoon was spent, and lunch was served. Perhaps the guests had an eye toward future gatherings, or it may have just happened that way, when they presented their hostess a nice coffee pot as a token of remembrance.

Regular monthly meeting of the village council was held at the council room in the village building last Monday evening.

The Dorcas Society will be entertained by Mrs. S. Olness and Miss Lisa Hendrickson at the Norwegian Lutheran church parlors Saturday, Oct. 19.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Opheim of Lake City are the happy parents of a son born Sunday, Sept. 29. Mrs. Opheim formerly was Marion Wilson of this community.

Mrs. Otto Johnson and Mrs. V. G. Brink have been chosen as delegates at attend the Lutheran Womens' Federation meeting to be held at Greenbush, Oct. 23rd.

An auction sale of stock and farm equipment was held Tuesday at the T. J. Sumpter farm south of Hazel, and a sale was held yesterday at the T. O. Mogen farm northwest of here.

Knute Jorgenson has a mammoth carrot in display in the Spectator office window. While Knute did not so state, we are informed he is using a stump puller in getting his carrot crop out of the ground.

A thin coating of ice was noticed along the river Friday morning after temperatures had dropped to about 16 above zero the night before. People who have delayed digging their spuds, find those nearest the surface to be frozen.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jackson of St. Paul, motored here Tuesday night from Duluth and spent until next day at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Jackson. They were on a trip from the Cities to Winnipeg and left Wednesday morning for the latter city.

Beginning Tuesday, Oct. 15, and continuing through Sunday Oct. 20, there will be Evangelistic services every evening at 8 o'clock at the St. Hilaire Mission, church. These services will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. Geo. Peterson. A cordial invitation is extended to everyone to attend these services.

Lundgren Spoke At P. T. A.

Attorney Paul Lundgren of Thief River Falls, spoke at meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association held at the school auditorium last Friday evening. Mr. Lundgren is an able speaker and his talk Friday evening was greatly appreciated by all who heard him. Musical selections and a business session were other numbers on the program which was followed by lunch.

COURT IN SESSION

Fall term of district court in this county opened Monday morning at Thief River Falls, with Judge Brattland presiding. Hearing of court cases is expected to occupy this entire week. The petit jury has been called for next Monday morning.

TWO SENTENCED IN DISTRICT COURT

Prior to opening of district court in the county, former county auditor H. L. Fowler appeared before Judge M. A. Brattland and pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny in connection with misappropriation of county funds. He was sentenced to an indeterminate term of one to five years in a state penal institution.

Mike Quirk, resident of Kratka township, accused of inflicting injuries on his stepfather which resulted in death of the latter, also pleaded guilty before opening of court, and was sentenced to a term of one to fifteen years in a state penal institution. It is understood he will serve his time at the State Reformatory at St. Cloud.

C. HALLSTROM WEDS MARIE ANDERSON

A pretty home wedding occured at 6:30 Tuesday at the home of Felix Anderson of Black River when his daughter, Marie, became the bride of Mr. Clarence Hallstrom of this village, the ceremony being performed in the presence of about eighty relatives and friends.

Miss Helen Naplin and Raymond Anderson, cousins of the bride, were bridesmaid and groomsman, respectively. Gladys Anderson, sister of the bride, was flower girl, and Bobby Sorvig, nephew of the groom, was ring bearer. The bride was attired in Oxford red silk with silver accessories and carried white roses. The rooms were beautifully decorated in orchid and white, and candles were used. Rayymond Anderson sang "I love you truly" during the course of the ceremony.

Following the ceremony a bounteous two course supper was served, and following a program of musical numbers and toasts was given. Mr. and Mrs. Hallstrom left Wednesday morning to spend a week visiting in the Twin Cities, points in Wisconsin, and at Duluth after which they will return and make their home in the Mrs. Nels Johnson residence which has been prepared for their occupancy.

Both bride and groom are well known and popular young people, and both have a host of friends thruout the community who will join in wishing them lifelong happiness.

Henry Sorenson and family were visitors Thursday at the G. Lindquist home.

FALL FESTVIAL NOW ON AT T. R. FALLS

A three-day fall festival opened this morning at Thief River Falls with the city decked out in gala attire for the event. A rally of World War veterans from this part of the Ninth dictrict was staged as part of the program for today. Tomorrow will be Soo Line day. Officials of the line, as well as other prominent speakers, will take part in the afternoon program at the new municipal Auditorium. Many forms of entertainment such as parades, band music, drum corps drills, dances, etc., have been provided for benefit of thousands of people from all over northern Minnesota who will be present at the big three-day event.

The program for Saturday will be in charge of the Junior Civic and Commerce association and will include exercises at the new bridge and parkway recently completed, one of the finest improvements made in the city in recent years.

Congressman Theo. Christianson, former governor of Minnesota will speak Saturday afternoon. The grand finale will be at midnight Saturday when four queens in a popularity contest will be crowned and cash prizes distributed.

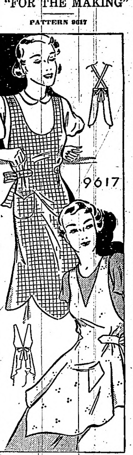
NEW APRONS YOURS "FOR THE MAKING"

PATTERN 9617



Now's the ideal time to replenish your stock of aprons, and could you choose a more charming pair than these? The gingham, above, is ready for any and all chores, bar none. Large, easy-to-cut scallops form its interesting hem-line while criss-cross straps, a sash tie, and deep patch pocket enlist for kitchen duty. Its dainty companion, in batiste or voile, will love to preside over the informal dinner at home, where the hostess is maid of all work, yet wants to bring a hint of daintiness to the table.

Pattern 9617 may be ordered only in sizes small, medium and large. Small size requires 1⅝ yards 36 inch fabric for apron with scallops; 1¾ yards for other apron. Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 232 West Eighteenth St., New York, N. Y.

BANKS GET CAMERA TRAP

If a suspicious looking person cashes a check at the "paying" window, the teller may snap a photograph of the "suspect" if a new camera is adopted for use in banks. The camera, which is small, is fitted with a cowl that is inserted into the buttonhole of the teller's vest and the camera is pinned on the inside within a few inches of the teller's fingers to facilitate snapping the photograph. Thus, instead of trying to remember the features of a suspect, the teller can produce his small photograph to aid police. The camera operates silently.—Popular Mechanics.

The Man Who Knows

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it — in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Maple Lake—Corn yielded excellently in this vicinity with some fields averaging 60 to 70 bushels per acre.

Fairfax—An extensive building and remodeling program is going on here, easing a housing shortage which has been acute for the past five years.

Cass Lake—The United States forest service has started the purchase of 6,000 to 8,000 bushels of Norway pine cones, paying $1.50 a bushel.

Stillwater—Howerd Robbins, youthful lifer and the first man to escape from Stillwater prison in 25 years, was recaptured at Sioux Falls, S. D.

Virginia—Plans are being made for a house warming early in November at the new $26,000 4-H club building at Lake Eshquaguma, which was dedicated August 20.

Atwater—A loan of $20,000 has been granted to the Atwater school for construction of an addition. The money came from the state investment board's permanent trust fund.

Norwood—A police signal system has been installed on the cupola of the city hall. Four red lights, controlled from the telephone exchange, will notify police of alarms in the night.

St. Paul—Sale of $4,000,000 of certificates of indebtedness to provide sufficient funds with which to pay $7,172,638 of special state school aid was completed by the state investment board.

Virginia—The 31-year-old Julia mine is being reconditioned for operation after a long idleness, having been acquired by lease from the Thomas A. Yawkey estate by the Corrigan, McKinney Steel company.

Fergus Falls—Although it operates the largest farm in Minnesota, the Fergus Falls state hospital will have to purchase potatoes this fall. But half a crop was realized this year when yields averaged 72 bushels per acre. Hot dry weather in July and August is held responsible.

New Ulm—The city council has authorized erection of a public library and historical museum on a site donated by the late N. Henningsen, opposite the municipal building. The ground floor which will cost $38,000, will be built this fall and the project will be completed next spring..

Canby—A ban on solicitors and peddlers is being imposed as result of action by the city council on a new ordinance making it a misdemeanor for a solicitor or peddler to enter premises without an invitation. Violation is punishable by a fine of $100 or imprisonment in the county jail for 30 days.

Duluth—The St. Louis county board withdrew its support of the national re-employment service, voting to quit providing funds for this agency operated by the federal government. The county appropriated $10,000 for the agency this year and in 1934 expended $11,573. The request from the county for next year is $10,000.

St. Paul—Governor Olson said that he will call a special session of the state legislature for the latter part of November to pass laws qualifying Minnesota for participation in the federal social security setup. Ending rumors that he would not call the session, Governor Olson said he regards it imperative if the state is to obtain federal benefits.

Minneapolis—While Minnesota will have its share of Red Cross first-aid stations now being placed on national highways in the campaign being conducted by the organization to reduce deaths from motor vehicle accidents, they will not be established for some time, Edward G. Gates, executive director of the Hennepin county chapter, Red Cross, said.

Fairmont—Charles, Fred and Edward Ray, the oldest 83 years old, drove into Fairmont in an automobile. The last time they were here oxen pulled them to town. That was in 1875, 60 years ago, when they lived on a farm on the Iowa line. Edward resides at Boone, Iowa, Charles at Armour, S. D., and Fred at Rapid City, S. D.

Warroad—State Conservation Commissioner E. V. Willard inspected construction progress of the fish meal hatchery here that will turn rough species catches into profits for fishermen. The plant will purchase more than 3,000 pounds daily, and will begin operation in a fortnight. Non-profit making, the venture is launched as a co-operative piloted by Warroad men.

Minneapolis—A project for completion of the new hospital building at the Minnesota soldiers' home, which was started as a state emergency relief administration project, was approved by the President. The cornerstone of the hospital was laid last November 11. As a works progress administration project, the building would be completed this fall with $8,275 in federal funds and a contribution of $4,268 from the sponsor, the soldiers' home board.

Two Harbors—Work on the second federal nursery to be established in Lake county began when the newly acquired tract in the Knife River valley was opened. The tract will be cleared for seed beds and seeds for 15,000,000 spruce trees will be planted in October. The seedlings later will be transferred to the Superior national forest. Carl Rauparl, who has charge of the [illegible] said [illegible] Six acres will be cleared this fall for planting with the work done by relief labor.

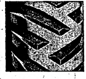
You cannot afford to be without Firestone GROUND GRIP TIRES for Fall and Winter use on your car, truck and tractor. You will not need chains! They will give you the greatest satisfaction and save you money!

FALL RAINS and winter snows present a transportation problem to farmers. Firestone solved this problem when they developed the complete line of Ground Grip Tires for cars, trucks, tractors and all farm implements. There are three patented features that give Firestone Tires super-traction in mud, snow, sand, gravel or soft ground of any kind.

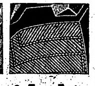
1. Gum-Dipped Cord Body

The High Stretch Cord Body of Firestone Tires is Gum-Dipped (soaked in liquid rubber) giving extra strength and longer flexing life to withstand the terrific stresses and strains of the extra pulling power with only twelve pounds of air pressure. Firestone Tires are the only tires built that are Gum-Dipped.



2. Ground Grip Tread

Built with 54% additional tough rubber and scientifically designed with heavy cross bars and deep grooves that are self-cleaning (chains are not necessary), giving super-traction and long wear. The bars of rubber are so placed that they will not bump when used on paved roads.



3. Two Extra Layers of Gum-Dipped Cords

This exclusive construction feature locks the thick, heavy tread securely to the Gum-Dipped cord body, making them one inseparable unit. This makes practical the use of a wider, flatter, thicker, deeper non-skid Firestone tread with higher shoulders and more and tougher rubber.

in one of the most important things to children—precious Vitamin B for keeping fit. Mighty few cereals have it.

● Many are nervous, poor in appetite, system out of order, because their daily diets lack enough of the precious Vitamin B for keeping fit.

Few things keep them back like a lack of this protective food element.

So give everyone Quaker Oats every morning. Because in addition to its generous supply of Vitamin B for keeping fit, it furnishes food-energy, muscle and body-building ingredients. For about ½c per dish.

Start serving it tomorrow for a 2-weeks test. Quaker Oats has a wholesome, nutlike, luscious appeal to the appetite. Flavory, surpassingly good. All grocers supply it.

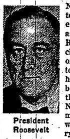
Speeches by President on Western Trip

TRAVELING rapidly to the Pacific coast for some fishing, President Roosevelt delivered several important addresses. The first was at Fremont, Neb., where he spoke to about 15,000 farmers and was enthusiastically received. Mr. Roosevelt set forth the chief accomplishments of his administration to date, and challenged his opponents to do better. He defended the legality of the New Deal doings and made it plain that he would continue to carry on experiments for the welfare of the people. Defining his idea of constitutional government, he said its true function is "to promote the general welfare, not by interfering unduly with individual liberties, but by bringing to the aid of the individual those powers of government which are essential to assure the continuance of the inalienable rights which the Constitution is intended to guarantee. It is democracy in the good old American sense of the word."



President Roosevelt

Coming to the AAA, in which his hearers might be supposed to be most vitally interested, the President asserted that "agricultural adjustment is an expression in concrete form of the human rights those farmer patriots sought to win when they stood at the bridge at Concord, when they proclaimed the Declaration of Independence, and when they perpetuated these ideals by the adoption of the Constitution."

No matter what attempts may be made to tear it down, "the principle of farm equality expressed by agricultural adjustment will not die," the President told the crowd.

The AAA has made "honorable history," the President declared, and as a result, smoke is pouring from chimneys again and workers without regular jobs are obtaining employment.

He served notice that it is the purpose of his administration to "use every square mile of the United States for the purpose to which it is best adapted." Nature must be harnessed instead of despoiled, he asserted.

At Boulder Dam the President assisted in the dedication of the great project and delivered an address in which he announced that government spending for employment purposes was nearing its end and that now private industry must take up the burden of decreasing the army of the unemployed. He defended the administration against the charges of "boondoggling" and said its efforts "meet with the approval of the people of the nation." He touched only lightly on the power question. Secretary Ickes, who also spoke, said Boulder Dam should be re-named Johnson Dam, in honor of Senator Hiram Johnson.

Again at Los Angeles in the Hollywood Bowl and at San Diego the Chief Executive delivered adddesses, and then he went to catch some fish.

High Cost of Living Is Subject of Inquiry

OBEYING the instructions of the President, the federal trade commission has begun a survey to determine why the cost of living is mounting so high. Several members of the commission's staff started the investigation in Detroit, where the housewives staged a meat strike some weeks ago. Other members of the staff will take up the work in Chicago, and later the inquiry will be carried on in other centers. The agricultural income especially is to be investigated.

Illinois Republicans for Knox for Presidency

COL. FRANK KNOX, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, is now an accredited candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, for he has received the indorsement of the Republican state central committee of Illinois. Colonel Knox has been in a receptive mood for a long time and has traveled all over the country making speeches. In various unofficial straw votes he has been placed second, only Senator Borah being preferred to him.

Col. Frank Knox

Addressing the Illinois central committee, Colonel Knox said: "I have been from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from West Virginia on north, and everywhere I find that the Republicans not only think that they will be victorious but they have a deep sense of responsibility to rescue the country from the hands of socialists."

Budget Summation Shows Reduction in Deficits

IN A "budget summation" given out at Washington by order of the President it is shown that the federal deficits will be reduced by more than a billion and a quarter from the original estimates, because economic conditions have grown "decidedly better" and tax receipts are higher than was expected. The estimated deficit for the current fiscal year will be $3,281,000,000.

"The prevailing rate of recovery," the President said, "points to the speedy decline of federal expenditures for emergency activities."

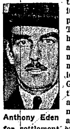
Unless the AAA's processing taxes are knocked out by the Supreme court, he argued, the government "will not need new taxes or increased rates in existing taxes to meet the expenses of its necessary annual operations."

Van Sweringens Recover Railway Empire

VAN SWERINGEN brothers have regained control over the vast railway and real estate empire they built and lost to New York bankers. At the height of the boom this was valued at $3,000,000,000. It was taken by a banking group when the Van Sweringens defaulted on loans of $48,000,000 and was put up at auction. The brothers regained control for $3,121,000 by bidding in the majority stock of the Alleghany corporation, holding company for all but one of the so-called Van Sweringen roads, including the Chesapeake & Ohio, Pere Marquette, Nickel Plate, Missouri Pacific, and Chicago & Eastern Illinois, and the Van Sweringen corporation through which the brothers ruled their vast real estate possessions.

War in Ethiopia Growing Nearer Day by Day

ITALY having rejected the peace plan proposed by the League of Nations committee of five, and Ethiopia having accepted it, the committee reported to the league council that its efforts to solve the problem were futile. The council thereupon held a public meeting and adopted unanimously the recommendation of its president, Enrique Ruiz Guinazu of Argentina, that it proceed under article 15 of the covenant, drafting a report and recommendations for settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian embroglio.



Anthony Eden

A feature of the council's session was an address by Capt. Anthony Eden, British minister for league affairs. Conversations in Rome between British Ambassador Sir Eric Drummond and Premier Mussolini had led some to think Great Britain was weakening, but Eden announced his government was "steadfastly determined to abide by its policy" as previously declared.

Emperor Haile Selassi wired the league requesting that in view of the "increasing provocative attitude of Italy" neutral observers be dispatched to Ethiopia to establish responsibility in case a clash occurs.

The Ethiopian ruler notified the league that he could not delay general mobilization much longer, in view of the "increasing gravity of Italian aggression," but he decided to wait a little longer for action by the league before calling to arms his warriors, whose number he estimates at 2,000,000.

Mussolini, who asserted he expected Ethiopia would soon assault Italy's colonies proceeded to put 250,000 troops in east Africa. Nearly every day vessels left for Eritrea carrying large bodies of soldiers. On one of them went Prince Adelberto of Savoy, cousin of King Victor Emmanuel. In addition to the Italian troops, Mussolini will have half as many native fighters from Eritrea and Somaliland. The duce intimated he would quit the League of Nations if it took any action against Italy, but he also offered to negotiate an accord with Great Britain.

The British asked France to define its attitude should any nation attack the empire, and soon after Sir Samuel Hoare replied to France's questions regarding the British attitude toward possible trouble on the continent. The foreign secretary assured France that Great Britain would always support collective action against any aggressor.

Florida Narrowly Escapes Another Hurricane

ANOTHER fierce hurricane from the Caribbean swept across the middle part of Cuba, causing more than a score of deaths and doing vast property damage, and then seemed to be heading directly for southern Florida. The residents there made all possible preparations for safety, but the storm suddenly veered and roared off to the northeast over the Atlantic.

Liner Goes Aground but No Lives Are Lost

THE Holland-American liner Rotterdam, on a West Indian pleasure cruise, went aground on Morant Cays, 40 miles east of Jamaica, in fine weather, because of "an unaccountable shift" in the current. Her 400 passengers and 250 members of the crew were safely and comfortably transferred to the British steamer Ariguani and landed at Kingston, Jamaica. The Rotterdam was little injured.

WHY BAY TURNS YELLOW

La Jolla Bay, near San Diego, Calif., had this summer a visitation of "yellow water," unique in that region both because of the prominence of yellow and the extremely small size of the causative organism, says the Collecting Net, published in the interests of marine biological laboratories. No satisfactory identification of this organism has been obtained. Individuals had a length of only about six-thousandths of a millimeter. They had four flagella. The case was also remarkable on account of the entire absence of other plankton organisms during the period of its noted abundance, from about July 27 to August 7.

Calumet Baking Powder . . . in a big, new 10¢ can!

"WHAT'S THE SENSE in taking chances with second-bests when you can get a good, big can of Calumet for a dime?" asks Mrs. Tobin.

"I've never had a baking failure with Calumet," Mrs. Tobin said. And judging by the expectant faces of Richard and Patricia, Mrs. Tobin is not the only member of her family who knows how delicious Calumet cakes always are!

A SIMPLE TWIST . . . and the Easy-Off Top lifts off. No delay, no spilling, no broken finger-nails!

WHY DOES CALUMET give such astonishing "baking luck"? Why is Calumet different from other baking powders? Because Calumet combines two distinct leavening actions. A quick one for the mixing bowl. A slower one for the oven . . . and Calumet's double-action is so perfectly balanced and controlled that it produces perfect leavening—every time.

All Calumet prices are lower! Calumet is now selling at the lowest prices in history . . . the regular price of Full-Pound Can is now only 25¢! And be sure to see the new, big 10¢ can—a lot of good baking for a dime, with Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder. A product of General Foods.

BRAY NEWS

The marriage of Miss Lulu Omega Larson Hegstrom, daughter of Emil Larson and Carl R. Mosbeck, son of Mrs. Olaf Mosbeck, occurred at one o'clock Sunday afternoon at the Swedish Lutheran parsonage in St. Hilaire with Rev. H. A. Larson officiating in the presence of Miss Lillian Larson, sister of the bride and Samuel Mosbeck, brother of the groom.

The bride was attired in a gown of white satin which extended in a train. Her veil of silk illusion, fitted with a cap which also extended into a train. She carried a bouquet of yellow hill roses tied with streamers. The bridesmaid wore an ankle length dress of Perry Winkle Chiffon and carried a bouquet of white asters.

Following the ceremony, a wedding dinner was served at 4 o'clock at the A. P. Hegstrom home to about fifty relatives and friends. The young couple left the following morning on a honeymoon trip to Minneapolis and Duluth. Upon return they will reside on the A. P. Hegstrom farm. A host of friends join in extending congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Mosbeck and in wishing them a long and happy married life.

Mr. and Mrs. Seeland and family, Joe Seeland and family of Hillmen, came Sunday to spend a few days at the home of the former's daughter, Mrs. John Honiesel.

J. O. Swanson and family were visitors at the George Swanson home on Saturday evening.

Rev. A. Sand of Annandale, was a visitor at the A. P. Hegstrom home last Thursday.

Walter Olson and family of St. Hilaire were guests Friday evening at the Emil Larson home.

Miss Norma Anderson was a caller Sunday at the Annie Lindblom home.

Johnnie Lindbloom helped pick potatoes at the J. O. Swanson farm last Wednesday and Thursday.

WASHINGTON ADAMS PIONEER ENDS LIFE

Washington Adams, first settler in what is now River Falls township, ended his earthly troubles Friday by hanging himself in the old homestead cabin on his farm south of town where he and Mrs. Adams begun life together in this community 56 years ago. He had not been his usual self since death of his wife two years ago and undoubtedly committed the rash act while in a fit of despondency.

Washington Monroe Adams was born in Ohio on August 2nd, 1851 and was 84 years and two months of age. As a young boy, he came with his parents to Kandiyohi county and spent his early years in that locality. In 1875 he was united in marriage to Rachel Sorsoliel at Willmar. In 1879 they came to this section to take up residence on the homestead where they resided continuously until their deaths.

Mr. Adams saw much of the hardships connected with pioneer life in this section when it was first opened for settlement, and he was able to tell of many interesting events which occured those days. His homestead log cabin was a gathering place for the early settlers, and in it was held the meeting at which the township of River Falls was named. Mr. and Mrs. Adams had no family of their own, but they had a foster daughter, Mrs. Rupert Nelson, a niece of Mrs. Adams, whom they reared from infancy. Mrs. Adams died in September, 1933, and Mrs. Nelson died December 22, 1929.

Highly regarded as a neighbor and friend, Mr. Adams will be sadly missed by all his old friends thruout this community.

Funeral services, in charge of W. O. Hunt of Red Lake Falls, were held Monday afternoon at the local Methodist church with Rev. E. A. Cooke of Thief River Falls, officiating. Interment was at the cemetery east of the village.

County Auditor A. M. Senstad and son of Thief River Falls, were visitors in the village for a short time Tuesday evening.

Seven persons in different sections of Minnesota lost their lives in auto accidents Monday this week.

SAN GETS APPROPRIATION

Out of sixty-two new projects authorized this week for the nine WPR districts in the state to provide fall and winter employment for workers previously on relief rolls, is one for repairs and new construction at the Oakland Park Sanatorium. The federal appropriation on this project is $5,608, and the sponsor will contribute $2,588 for the work to be done.

COUNTY VOTES DRY NEARLY 2 TO 1

By a county-wide vote of about 2 to 1, the voters of Pennington county expressed their wishes against legal sale of liquor at the special election held Monday this week. No precinct in the county polled a vote in favor of liquor. In one township, Hickory, the vote was a tie. St. Hilaire polled its usual strong dry vote, there being 95 against to 27 in favor. Polk Center township, according to reports, did not cast a single wet vote.

Aid of the Norwegian Lutheran church will be entertained by Mesdames A. Jacobson, O. A. Holmes and N. Stark at the church parlors Friday.

There have been many inquiries lately about farms to rent. Anyone having a place for rent that has usable buildings thereon, are asked to leave information at this office.

Among the cases to be heard in district court this week, is that of E. Tommerdahl who is charged with responsibility in death of Lloyd Ross killed in an auto accident on the village street here a few weeks ago.

Former county auditor H. L. Fowler was taken Saturday by Sheriff Rambeck to St. Cloud to commence serving his sentence of from one to five years for misappropriation of county funds. He will later be transferred to the state's prison at Stillwater.

Geo. Biskey and son John, left Wednesday morning on a trip to Missoula, Mont., in hopes that a change of climate and altitude will be of benefit to Mr. Biskey who has suffered severely the past year with asthma. Should the Montana climate not agree with him, Mr. Biskey intends to go south into Nevada or Arizona.

CORN-HOG VOTE TO BE HELD OCT. 26

Pennington county farmers who produced corn or hogs in 1935 will have an opportunity, October 26, to vote on the question, "Do you favor a corn-hog adjustment program to follow the 1935 program, which expires November 30, 1935?"

A new corn hog program will be offered to farmers next year if they show clearly that they wish for it, according to word received at University Farm, St. Paul, from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. However, unless the results of the referendum indicate a strong desire for continuing the cooperative control of corn-hog production, no adjustment program will be offered. Every corn-hog farmer will be urged to vote, therefore, in this important referendum.

County Agent R. M. Douglass and members of the county allotment committee attended a conference at Detroit Lakes Monday at which plans were laid for conducting the referendum and a series of local meetings in which the facts about the corn-hog situation will be presented.

A schedule of these meetings and a list of the places at which farmers may cast their ballots will be announced next week.

Mr. and Mrs. Mike Highland and daughter, Carmen, motored Sunday to Twin Valley to attend the silver wedding observance of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Flesjer. They returned that evening.

THIEF RIVER GIRL KILLED AT WARREN

Pearl Hanson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Hanson of Thief River Falls, was instantly killed Monday evening when struck by a car on the highway near Warren. Her companion, Lorraine Berg, also of Thief River Falls, was injured in the same accident but is recovering. Driver of the car, Ralph Neegard, stated he was blinded by lights of an approaching car and did not see the girls on the oiled highway in time to avoid striking them. The girls had been picking potatoes on a nearby farm and were walking home when the unfortunate accident occured.

RED CROSS SEEKS AID

Anyone in town or county having outgrown garments or unused articles such as shoes, overshoes, kitchen utensils, toys, curtains, dresses, coats, overcoats, bedding, etc., which they would donate to a worthy cause, are asked to communicate with the local Red Cross. Each year these women have been enabled to bring cheer to many by furnishing articles these people could not obtain otherwise. Garments that do not fit in individual cases, will be remade. Anything of good material can be used. Our activities are not confined to the village. We supply clothing, etc., to needy people thruout this territory. Please leave bundles at the drug store.

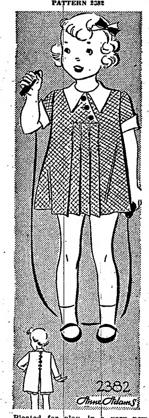
Smart Play Frock That's Easy to Sew

PATTERN 2382



Pleated for play, in a very new way, this child's frock gives her plenty of room for rope-skipping. Her mother will find this smart frock so easy to cut and put together, and a very economical pattern, since bloomers are included with the dress. You can make these up in the same material, or just plain white to wear with other frocks, and no child can have too many pairs. The buttoned closing of the frock takes a new slant, and don't worry about those four pleats! They're as easy a decoration as you've ever made. Colorful novelty cotton for that crisp look and a choice of short or long sleeves.

Pattern 2382 is available in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8. Size 6 takes 2½ yards 36 inch fabric and ⅝ yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to the Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 243 West Seventeenth St., New York City.

Get Data for Relief Job

Washington.—The President and his two chief relief advisers, Harry L. Hopkins and Secretary Ickes, have just completed a cross-country tour and are now in possession of information on which to base the future course for management of the relief job this winter. What their plans are, beyond the use of the funds appropriated last winter, remain confidential but without doubt the country can expect to see some very definite changes in the practices that have been followed.

The New Deal was swept into the governmental control upon the twin arches of recovery and relief. The recovery arch seems to be holding up. The relief arch, I believe, can be said to be teetering. At least that is the conclusion that must be drawn on a set of circumstances in which billions have been spent to tide destitute persons over their distress only to leave millions of them still looking for government handouts.

It is quite apparent that Mr. Roosevelt took his two relief advisers on his Western trip chiefly for the purpose, like the well-known bear, of going over the mountain to see what he could see. The word that has come back to Washington is that he saw some things that were not altogether encouraging. He found that his previous relief methods were not in high favor in the Middle West and on the Pacific coast. Hence there are some changes in prospect.

New Deal opposition has characterized the President's vacation trip westward as being, in part, politics. Whether this be a fact or not, anyone can recall that there is an election in November, 1936, and that shrewd politicians begin many months in advance to oil the campaign machinery and see that the gears mesh. It is not at all unlikely, then, that while Mr. Roosevelt was sincerely examining the relief situation and attempting to ascertain for himself what should be done to make the going easier for those in distress, he probably had in the back of his mind thoughts of how those same people would react when they go to the polls a year hence and find his name as the Democratic Presidential nominee.

Courting Trouble

Some months ago Mr. Roosevelt announced with emphasis that the job of taking care of the destitute must be turned back to the states and private charity. It was, he said, no longer a federal proposition. A good many observers here felt at the time he made that announcement that he was courting trouble. Those who took that view have found their conclusions amply supported by the facts since developed. The President, indeed, has courted trouble and it is a species of trouble that is going to remain with him throughout a long, hard winter just ahead. Probably he will be able to find a way out if, indeed, a way out was not discovered while he and Messrs. Hopkins and Ickes were on their transcontinental tour. To the average person, however, the solution is not so apparent.

That brings us to a phase of federal administration, a new circumstance and problem, confronting the nation. I describe it as a new problem which in fact it is when considered in the light of developments since the New Deal took control.

It seems to me that it ought to be said the Roosevelt administration failed to profit by a knowledge of what has happened heretofore in the use of the dole. Just across the Atlantic has been available a splendid demonstration of what the dole can and will do to a population. The British government listened to the appeals of the professional relievers and humanitarians and adopted a dole. It has taken that nation four years to whittle away even a part of the situation it built up for itself.

Here is the crux of the problem: At any time a governmental agency begins to feed people, to clothe them and to provide them with the other necessaries of life free, by that act it inculcates in those people—not all of them of course—a feeling that the world, and particularly their government owes them a living. A certain percentage of them immediately become convinced that while the dole may be smaller than their weekly pay check earned in industry, it comes without work. In fact, it breeds laziness.

They Don't Want Jobs

So, in this country now we have a certain percentage of the population who are wholly unwilling to work because they have found that the government will take care of them in times of stress. In consequence, this segment of the population is making no effort to obtain jobs and is quite vocal in its lambasting of a government that will not feed its people.

In addition, information that I get from industrial leaders, men who know what labor problems are, tell me that a percentage of the workers whom they have taken back on the jobs, taken them off of relief rolls, are unwilling to do their jobs efficiently; they seek to fill in their time and just get by, and they resent any admonitions from foremen or bosses that a certain amount of work is required of them if they are to remain on the pay roll. Some instances have been reported even that workers of this type have replied to their employer's requests for honest labor: "We don't care. We can go back on relief."

It is a tragedy. Unfortunately, it is going to be with us for some years to come and when I make that statement I do not mean in any way to withhold praise from those men and women who, when they get a job, try to do an honest day's work for a day's wage. Obviously, most of the American people are of this latter type. But I believe it cannot be refuted that the American government's experiment with the dole has created several millions of new panhandlers.

* * *

See Expensive Year Ahead

President Roosevelt has introduced an innovation into federal administration by making public what amounts to a preliminary summation of federal financial requirements. He ordered it compiled and released for publication at this early date, he said, in order that the country may know what confronts it in the way of expenditures for the fiscal year beginning last July 1, and ending next June 30.

A careful analysis of the summation and the revision of estimates of expenditures for the current fiscal year rather indicates that it will be the most expensive in New Deal history. This is true despite Mr. Roosevelt's declaration that a sharp up-swing in business activity will result in a marked curtailment in relief expenditures. The budget statement by the President was regarded in the national Capital as rather illusory. In fact, some of Mr. Roosevelt's own subordinates entertained a fear that the thing would be regarded as having a political purpose. They felt that there was no call for the action and that it might logically result in providing New Deal opposition with new ammunition which it can use in criticizing waste and maladministration particularly with respect to the relief programs.

The summation shows that the actual deficit for the current year to date is more than half again as large as was the deficit on the corresponding day last year, despite the business recovery about which Mr. Roosevelt lately has talked several times.

It showed further that even under the revised estimates submitted by the President, expenditures for the current year will be $400,000,000 more than last year and $600,000,000 more than in the first year of the New Deal. The President in his statement asserted that the deficit next June 30, will be $300,000,000 less than the last fiscal year, but if one digs into the mass of figures it can be seen that this $300,000,000 has been simply transferred to revised budget figures for the works-relief program.

On this basis then, some observers persistently inquire where the substantial and sustained economy in government has been effected either by the administration or by the business improvement. It is difficult to answer. It is more difficult, in the opinion of Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the Republican national committee, because of the frequent references which Mr. Roosevelt made during his 1932 campaign to a program of enforced economy in government.

Ever since the President began writing the New Deal budgets, capital observers have been awaiting the day when, under the pressure of political necessity or a sincere determination on his part to carry out his political promises, he would start squeezing the excess out of those budgets. I think it is fair to say that there has been an immense amount of water in the government budgets under the New Deal. Equally, I think it is fair to say that there has been a tremendous amount of waste. Thus, the time apparently has arrived when the President must start to trim down these costs if the national debt is not to get clear out of bounds. As a politician of the keenest type, Mr. Roosevelt recognizes better, perhaps, than anyone else that the American people do not like to see debts piled up, debts either private or public. Consequently, it is not an unsafe forecast to make that Mr. Roosevelt will be turning soon to curtailment of expenditures.

It has been interesting to compare the budgets under the Hoover administration with those by Mr. Roosevelt. Mr. Hoover always was optimistic about his budgets. In fact, they were always smaller than an honest estimate of requirements called for. Mr. Roosevelt has been as flagrantly pessimistic about his budgets as Mr. Hoover was optimistic. The result, of course, has been that the Roosevelt budgets were extraordinarily large and somewhat unjustified.

ARABIC IN EVERYDAY USE

Housewives of the world use Arabic in everyday conversation, said Dr. Henry Farmer when he lectured at Glasgow university, Glasgow on "Arabian Influence on Western Civilization," recently. "Housewives, for instance, scarcely imagine that when they talk of sugar, cotton, damask, taffeta, orange, muslin, lozenge and perhaps soap and the loofa, they are using Arabic words," he continued "Men of learning use Arabic continually, probably without knowing it. In medicine, 'alcohol' and 'alembic' and hosts of other words are pure Arabic, and again, when astronomers speak of 'zenith' and 'nadir,' and mathematicians of 'algebra' and 'cipher,' they are using Arabic words."

● Nothing anyone eats is more important than Vitamin B—the vitamin for keeping fit. Yet it isn't in many cereals, when cereals are supposed to be our best source of this food element.

Many are nervous, poor in appetite, system out of order, because their daily diets lack enough of the precious Vitamin B for keeping fit.

Few things keep them back like a lack of this protective food element.

So give everyone Quaker Oats every morning. Because in addition to its generous supply of Vitamin B for keeping fit, it furnishes food-energy, muscle and body-building ingredients. For about ½c per dish.

Moose Lake—Regardless of delay in the alloting of public works administration funds, location of the state's new hospital for the insane will be built here, it was reported by Rebecca Peterson, secretary of the commission that selected the site. Washington dispatches said PWA was delaying because of a protest from Virginia, Minn., on the location of the hospital. Miss Peterson said the institution will be constructed with $1,200,000 appropriated by the last legislature despite PWA action on the application for $965,000 grant.

CHEAP LABOR

The bridge built in 1772 which carries the western highway over the Seine at Neuilly-Sur-Seine, France, has become inadequate for modern traffic and is to be replaced. The new bridge, however, is likely to be more costly than the old. Accounts still preserved show that the contractor in 1772 paid his masons 46 cents, carpenters 45 cents, and laborers 26 cents a day, and they were not 8 hour days, either. But living was cheaper then.

CARE IN CHOOSING BOOKS FOR CHILD HAS ITS REWARD

The story of Abraham Lincoln and his struggle for education gives the cue to Alma H. Jones' article, "Satisfy Your Child's Book Hunger," in Hygeia.

"Books are to the mind what sunshine is to the body," implies that just as the well cared for child receives daily sun exposure as an aid to physical growth, so also should he receive early "exposure" to lullabies, rhymes and stories, which constitute aids to mental and emotional growth.

Very early the child needs to establish right attitudes toward books. By the time a child is fifteen or eighteen months old he can easily learn to handle a book without tearing the pages, if the paper is strong and the pages are not too large. Young children who are not yet able to read enjoy picture books or picture-story books.

Though considerable emphasis is placed on the importance of children of school age reading for themselves and in quantity this should not be interpreted as a reason for ending the reading or story-telling hour of parents and other adults. Through such means the young boy or girl may be stimulated to more difficult reading on new subjects, for the parent or adult may interpret through voice or explanation much that would otherwise be lost on the child who does not read easily. There is permanent value as well as present pleasure in the story hour.

The general characteristics of a good book include large clear type, an uncrowded, well-paragraphed page, a pleasing appearance, a lively tale and a well-sustained reader interest.

Savant Has Theory on Origin of the Alphabet

The Phoenicians, long credited with the invention of the alphabet, probably borrowed their writings from a system in use among the Israelites, Sir Charles Marston, the British archeologist, believes.

Among the recent archeological evidence which throws new light on the origin of the alphabet is the discovery last summer of a new script among the ruins of an Egyptian temple in the Near East, Sir Charles said in a recent interview.

The new writing was found on a water jar at Tell Duweir, believed to be the Biblical city of Lachish, near Jerusalem.—Washington Star.

GOLDIE'S GOLD

IT IS hardly fair to a man, when he guides a party clear across the mountains from California to Kansas, to expect him to agree with everything a smart-aleck scout has to say. So thought Goldie, the weather-beaten Missourian who had brought his expedition safely back from the gold fields of the Far West. He and the scout could not agree on various subjects; they were always on the verge of quarreling, and at last the long-threatened storm broke.

What a quarrel it was! The scout had gone off, sullen. Goldie remained with the party, triumphant but slightly apprehensive. No telling what that scout might be up to!

Goldie was right. The scout had gone ahead and met up with some Pawnees, and he was arranging with them to capture the party and get the gold they were bringing with them.

Near where Wichita, Kan., now stands, the Pawnees came into view. Goldie hastily rounded up his charges and harangued them. They must fight, said he, but he reckoned that the Indians were after gold as much as anything else, and they'd better let him have all there was, so he could get away and bury it in a safe place. This was speedily done.

In the excitement of the Pawnee attack, no one on either side noticed the Missourian gliding out of sight. He paused long enough to see that the Indians were besting the travelers; before long, he surmised rightly, none would be left alive. So he had better go on—and keep going.

The scout, as soon as his Indian allies had killed everyone in the train, began to look for the gold. He could not find it; furthermore, he could not find Goldie among the slain. His anger rose again, and he gathered the Pawnees together to follow the trail.

Goldie, in the meantime, had hurried on. He came to Artillery mountain, in Oklahoma, and here he buried the gold near a strangely twisted tree, and hastened on. Somewhere on the way the pursuing Pawnees lost the trail, and Goldie reached home in safety.

Not long afterward, the Missourian became very ill. Feeling sure that he would not live to go back for the buried treasure, he confided the secret to his wife, and died.

Mrs. Goldie, not wanting to pit her woman's strength against heaven only knew what perils, preferred to wait for a while before she went treasure hunting. Their son was six years old; she kept her own counsel until 1882, when the lad had become a man. Then she felt that they might try to recover the wealth which her husband had buried so long ago.

They found the mountain, and they found an Indian who owned the ground and who remembered the location of the twisted tree. But, although they searched long and earnestly, they never found the gold.

BEESWAX AND DOUBLOONS

THREE galleons laden with doubloons, bars of gold, and other treasures, setting sail to the south! What a sight they made, as they left port in Panama, heading for the Horn!

But their majestic journey was suddenly cut short. Instead of continuing on their way, rounding the horn and setting sail for Spain, the three galleons suddenly veered about and began an undignified flight northward.

The reason was not hard to discover: Sir Francis Drake and his British privateers were after the ships of Spain, all sail set to catch up with and capture those three ship-loads of gold. No wonder the galleons fled!

They kept ahead of their pursuers, but could not lose them. Nothing could be done but continue north, far out of the course they had hoped to pursue. On and on they sailed, always dogged by those tenacious Britishers, until at last they ran into a tempest, and in the face of this new danger they forgot their pursuing foes.

The tempest was too much for Drake's ships. They lost heart; gold is a fine thing, but one must live to enjoy it. So they turned back, cheated by wind and wave of the prize they had been hunting. And though they kept a sharp lookout for the return of the Spanish galleons, they never saw them again—nor did anyone else. The three ships full of gold disappeared forever in that mighty tempest.

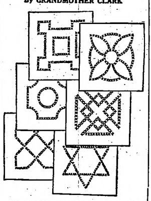
In 1870 a cave was discovered in Tillamook county, Oregon, which was thought to be the work of some shipwrecked men. The cave had been enlarged with all sorts of tunnels and shafts leading to chambers hidden away from the light. On the walls were inscriptions, but no one could read them after long years under the eraser of time.

And the Indians who prowl along the sandy bars nearby sometimes find great pieces of beeswax, which seem to have come from nowhere. But beeswax was a part of the cargo of those three galleons.

So it is thought that somewhere nearby the great ships foundered, and that either under the sea or in some undiscovered chamber of the cave lies that precious cargo of Spanish doubloons and bars of gold.

CROSS-STITCH QUILT BLOCKS

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



Cross-stitch is about the simplest thing in handwork. Little girls make their stitches in cross-stitch. These six-inch blocks are stamped in cross stitch designs on white muslin and little girls to grandmothers will enjoy making them into everything from small doilies to pillow tops, scarfs and bedspreads. Easy to carry around, working one at a time and then assembling into article wanted when all the squares are finished.

Outfit No. 46-4 consists of 6 of these six-inch stamped squares and will be mailed to you for 10 cents.

Three-Wheeled Auto

Built by a young Minneapolis mechanic during spare time, a three-wheeled streamline automobile driven by a standard four-cylinder motorcycle engine has defied deliberate attempts to upset it, says Popular Mechanics. Taking curves at high speed it tipped to a 45-degree angle without turning over.

The car is 46 inches high and accommodates two passengers. It will travel 85 miles an hour and run 40 miles to a gallon of gasoline. The engine is at the rear, leaving space for battery, tank and luggage under the hood. Conventional controls and front-wheel steering are provided. Frame, body and top are all steel. The motor is cooled by air scooped through vents in the top.

World's Most Famous Babies Eat Oatmeal

The Dionne Quintuplets, wards of the King, eat the same cereal that is eaten by millions of babies who don't get their names in the papers—oatmeal. The Canadian government chose a staff of special experts for the care of the Quints. And these experts, their scientific knowledge endorsing the instinctive choice of mothers the world over, have chosen oatmeal for the cereal of the famous five.

Oatmeal, eminent medical authorities agree, has an abundance of everything a child's cereal should have—body-building minerals, muscle-building protein, and the supremely important Vitamin B for keeping fit.

Food science says that Vitamin B is the best safeguard against those dangerous enemies of childhood—nervousness, constipation, and poor appetite due to lack of that vitamin in the diet.

Now It's Rat Fur

It needn't be a matter for surprise if you learn that some new curly fur on the market with a fancy name came from an animal the ancestors of which are traceable to the common rat. For a curly-coated variety of these rodents has been developed at Wistar Institute, the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, by Dr. Helen Dean King, who has been making a study of the breeding of rats for scientific purposes. Among her rats are breeds with chocolate, cinnamon and pale lapin colored coats.

DOMESTICATED WOLVES

The Moscow zoo boasts of two wolves which apparently are as tame and trustworthy as dogs. They were captured when they were puppies and ever since have been given kind and patient training. Their utter lack of viciousness and desire to return to their native element seems to indicate the fallacy of the belief that grown wolves become dangerous even though they have been trained from puppyhood.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Life of High-Pressure Guns

The life of a large, high-pressure gun at normal rate of firing is about 150 shots. However, after the gun has fired this number of shots it is comparatively simple and inexpensive to bore out the liner and insert a new one, thus fitting the gun again for service.

Cigarettes give a lot of pleasure to a lot of people.

More cigarettes are smoked today because more people know about them—they are better advertised.

But the main reason for the increase is that they are made better—made of better tobaccos; then again the tobaccos are blended—a blend of Domestic and Turkish tobaccos.

Chesterfield is made of mild, ripe tobaccos. Everything that science knows about is used in making it a milder and better-tasting cigarette.

We believe you will enjoy them.

TOMMERDAHL IS ACQUITTED AT NOON TODAY

After deliberating since shortly after 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, a district court jury shortly before noon today returned a verdict of not guilty in the case of Irvin Tommerdahl, charged with second degree manslaughter following the death in St. Hilaire September 7 of Lloyd A. Ross, who was fatally injured when struck by a car driven by Tommerdahl.

The task of selecting a jury to hear the case got under way Wednesday afternoon of last week, and not until noon yesterday was the hearing of testimony and pleas by attorneys in the action brought to a conclusion. The case occupied more time in court than any in the memory of Adolf Eklund, veteran clerk of court.

H. O. Chommie, defense attorney, required nearly four hours to complete his final plea to the jury, while County Attorney H. O. Berve, prosecuting the action, spoke for an hour and a half.

Much of the argument in the case revolved around the point as to whether or not Tommerdahl was driving at a reckless rate of speed as he passed thru St. Hilaire the night of the fatal accident. Wylie Ewing and Morris Melby, who were at the scene of the accident, testified that the car seemed to be proceeding at a rapid rate.

Mr. Chommie, in explanation of Tommerdahl's failure to stop after the accident, said the young man had meant to do the right thing but didn't know just how to go about it. In further extenuation he cited the fact that Tommerdahl had answered frankly all questions put to him by Sheriff Arthur Rambeck and Police Chief A. B. Stenberg.

Several cases scheduled for jury trial were settled out of court during the past week, including the action of George W. Curtis vs. A. C. Olson and J. H. Hermanson, and condemnation appeals brought by A. G. Langelette, Edward Roslie and Abraham Johnsrud. A jury trial got under way Wednesday afternoon in the case of H. J. Wood vs. Olga Jelle of Western Beltrami county, incolving payment for a quantity of hay.

OTTO CAMP IS DEAD

Otto Camp, who operated a cafe here a few years ago and later moved to Mentor, was found dead Tuesday in a building where he operated a cream station in that village. A heart attack is said to be the cause of his death.

A carnival and social will be held in the school house in District No. 178 on Saturday evening, November 2nd. A good program has been arranged, and all can be sure of a pleasant evening.

Valarie Olsen, Teacher.

BRINK & BERGLUND ERECT NEW SHOP

After manufacturing several hundreds of hives and other supplies for use of local apiarists during 1934, Albert Brink and August Berglund recently received a large order from outside parties that will keep them and their equipment busy most of the coming winter. Because of lack of room in present quarters, they have purchased materials and will commence immediately to build a shop large enough to house their machinery and materials, on rear of the Brink residence lots. In addition to supplying outside demand, they will make up a large number of hives and supers to be used in proposed expansion of their own apiaries next spring.

FIRE BURNS MUCH HAY

Prairie fires believed to have been started by careless hunters in the slough bottom of Mud Lake near Wheaton, burned over 32 sections of land and destroyed many hundreds of stacks of hay on Monday of this week. Fire departments from nearby towns were called to help save many farm buildings that were in danger.

SCHOOL NOTES

Report cards were given out Wednesday. Some were fine reports, others not so good. Everyone should determine to do average work, that is C work. Many seem satisfied with D's. High school students should bear in mind that a C average or the passing of State Board exams is the final hurdle before completing a year's work.

A large number have expressed their desire to become members of the Second Band. Difficulty in obtaining instruments seem to hold a few back. Parents should consult the superintendent before going ahead in purchase of instruments as they may buy poor instruments or ones not suited to the student. Some school instruments are available. Anyone having instruments for sale, kindly leave word at school as some are looking for good, used horns.

M. E. A. meant being taught instead of teaching to the faculty of St. Hilaire school. Teachers came home with many new ideas.

WOMAN'S CLUB MET THURSDAY EVENING

Regular monthly meeting of the local Woman's Club was held Thursday evening. Prior to opening of the meeting here, all members present, eighteen in all, motored to Thief River Falls to hear Arthur Kallet, Secretary of Consumers Research, Inc., who spoke at the meeting of the Northern Minnesota Education Association held that evening at the new city Auditorium. Following this feature, the members returned here for their regular session.

SNOW AT DULUTH

Snow to depth of two inches fell Tuesday at Duluth during a storm which started before daybreak and continued during the day. During the same time snow fell in southern part of the state, and also in parts of North Dakota. Though cold weather prevailed here, no snow fell.

ASK DONATIONS

The local Red Cross will appreciate donations of good used clothing, toys, etc., that can be remade and distributed to needy people thruout the territory the coming winter. Packages may be left at the drug store.

RADIO INTERFERENCE

Much complaint is heard locally about radio interference. If all who operate electrical appliances such as irons, washers, toasters, etc., will examine such appliances for short circuits, much of the interferance will be eliminated. Those who operate motors, drills and other electrically operated machinery can help too, by checking over their electrical connections.

Mesdames E. Prestby, Carl Prestby and O. Seeland visited Friday evening at the M. Highland home at St. Hilaire.

NOTICE TO TARGET SHOOTERS

Complaint has been made that certain boys have lately made a practice of shooting on the river within the village. Use of firearms within the village limits is prohibited, and warning is hereby given that such practice must cease immediately. By order of Village Council.

TURKEY PRICES ARE HIGHER THIS FALL

Turkey raisers thruout this section stand a good chance of recouping some of the loss sustained the past two years. At present prices are three cents above those of last year, and indications point to still higher prices when birds are marketed. Minnesota's turkey crop this year will be fully as large as those of 1933 and 1934. In other states the reverse is true. Not only will producers profit by higher prices this year, but production costs will be less because of low priced feeds.

PIONEER DOCTOR IN R. L. FALLS IS DEAD

Dr. Israel Lemieux, pioneer physician at Red Lake Falls, died Tuesday of last week at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Omar Hall, at Grand Forks following an illness of two weeks. He was 83 years of age at time of his death. Funeral services were held Friday morning at Red Lake Falls, and interment took place there.

Many of the oldtimers in this territory will recall the kindly doctor who often made trips into this territory back in the days when such trips were much more difficult than they are now. Dr. Lemieux practiced his profession at Red Lake Falls for over fifty years.

EARTHQUAKES IN MONTANA

More than three millions of dollars damage was sustained at Helena, Mont., and nearby places as result of many earthquake shocks during the past week. Most of the large business places at Helena have been damaged, schools wrecked, and hundreds of people made homeless. Government aid is being rushed to the stricken city and its people to assist them before cold weather sets in.

Card of Thanks

We wish to express our appreciation to all who assisted us after death of W. M. Adams; those who helped arrange the funeral; those who contributed flowers; those who sang, and to Rev. Cooke for his comforting sermon.

"Well Begun's Half Done" When Making Your House Frock

There was never a truer phrase than that, and how well it applies here! For before you know it your dress is cut and ready to stitch. This pattern is so easy to follow. There's everything new about the lines of this fetching house frock, with its contrasting surplice facing and doesn't it look like a different dress when buttoned up to the neck, see small sketch—with those enormous buttons? When household chores are finished, button up the deep pointed surplice and wear the frock to market. It's smart enough. Try it in colorful novelty cotton or gingham.

Pattern 9614 may be ordered only in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 4 yards 36 inch fabric and ¾ yard contrasting. Complete diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 232 West Eighteenth St., New York, N. Y.

THE REASON WHY

Chatty—Oh, he's so romantic. When he addresses me he always calls me "Fair Lady."

Catty—Force of habit, my dear. He's a street car conductor.—The Sunday School Herald.

In the Gulch

"I hear some gang men came around last night."

"Yes," answered Mesa Bill. "They caused serious disappointment. When we held 'em up, there wasn't eleven dollars in the crowd."

Too Early for Him

Boss—You are 20 minutes late again. Don't you know what time we start work at this factory?

New Employee—No, sir. They're always at it when I get here.

Much at Stake

Fleet—It's tough when you have to pay 40 cents a pound for meat.

Butcher—Yes, but it'd be a sight tougher if you paid only ten.—Pathfinder Magazine.

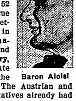
Italy Is Outlawed by the League of Nations

BECAUSE it was prosecuting an undeclared war on Ethiopia, Italy was condemned as a violator of the covenant of the League of Nations and virtually declared to be an outlaw against which economic and financial sanctions are to be applied. That was the decision of 52 members of the league in a memorable meeting of its assembly in Geneva. Three nations, Italy itself and Austria and Hungary, refused to associate themselves with the assembly's action. The Austrian and Hungarian representatives already had announced that they would not participate in any sanctions against Italy because of their political and economic relations with the Fascist government.



Baron Aloisi

If any of the nations concurring in the league's decision wishes to declare war on Italy, it now has the regal right to do so. The nature of the penalties to be imposed and the manner of procedure was to be determined by a committee including all members of the league council, except Italy, and all Italy's neighbor nations except Austria and Hungary.

First of the sanctions announced by the league committee was an embargo on shipments of war materials to Italy, and at the same time the ban against such shipments to Ethiopia was lifted. This was followed by the adoption of six financial penalties against Italy designed to break all financial and credit relations of members of the league with Mussolini's government. Next, according to the plan of the big powers which were directing all this, was to be a trade boycott for the purpose of crippling Italy's imports and exports.

The meeting of the assembly first heard an eloquent speech on Italy's behalf by her chief delegate, Baron Pompei Aloisi. He charged that the league had been unfair, that it had used "two weights and two scales" in its work, that it had acted against Italy where it did not act against Japan in the Manchurian crisis, that it did not even consider Italy's complaints against Ethiopia.

"Why not Japan?" he asked. "Why not Bolivia and Paraguay in the Chaco war? Why Italy?"

Before the decision nation after nation registered its adherence to the league covenant.

"I shall make only a brief declaration," said Pierre Laval of France. "France will face her obligations. I said this before the council. I repeat it before the assembly. The covenant is our international law."

"Action must now be taken," said Anthony Eden of Great Britain. "I declare the readiness of his majesty's government to take full part in such action."

Austria and Hungary cannot of themselves supply Mussolini with much in the way of raw materials for war; but there is the chance that he may receive, through those countries, materials from Germany if the neutrality proclaimed by Hitler does not prevent.

Recent reports from Addis Ababa said the Italian minister, whose departure had been requested by the emperor, announced that the Italian forces in the north sector had occupied the holy city of Aksum, the ancient capital of the queen of Sheba.

Mussolini Now Ready to Talk Peace

ETHIOPIA'S representatives in Geneva were told by delegates of several nations that Mussolini was ready to end the warfare if he were given considerable cessions of territory and certain large economic advantages. This tentative offer was transmitted to Addis Ababa, and the reply of Emperor Haile Selassie was a determined "No." The Italians want virtual control over the entire country, and the emperor is not willing to give up a yard of territory.

The Italians in northern Ethiopia were jubilant over the desertion of Degiac Haile Selassie Gugsa and several thousand warriors. This Gugsa is not related to the emperor but is a descendant of King John who reigned in the last century. There was a report that Mussolini planned to create a puppet empire from the occupied territory with Gugsa on the throne—after the Japanese fashion in Manchuria.

Troop movements indicated the next serious fighting would be in the southern sector, where the emperor's son-in-law, Ras Desta Demtu, was leading an army of 160,000 by forced marches to attack the Italians in the flank. The latter, under Gen. Rudolfo Graziani, were moving toward Harrar from the Somaliland frontier.

Liberals Are Winners in Canada Elections

PARLIAMENTARY elections in Canada resulted in the defeat of Premier Richard B. Bennett and the Conservatives who have been in control since 1930. The next premier will be Mackenzie King, leader of the Liberals who won 158 out of 245 seats in the house of commons. The new deal policies of the Bennett government were repudiated by the electors.

In the program outlined by King, in case he won, the great emphasis was laid on relieving unemployment and lowering tariffs back to 1930 levels. A reciprocal trade agreement with the United States was one of his strong arguments. Nationalization of the Bank of Canada, to control credit inflation and deflation was another plank.

Appeals Court Upholds Sentence of Hauptmann

UNANIMOUS decision of the New Jersey court of errors and appeals is that Bruno Richard Hauptmann was given a fair trial on the charge of murdering Col. Charles Lindbergh's baby son; that his conviction was in accordance with the evidence and that his death sentence was legal. Every contention raised by the defense was overruled. In its opinion the court said:

Bruno Hauptmann

"Our conclusion is that the verdict is not only not contrary to the weight of the evidence, but one to which the evidence inescapably led. . . . From three different and, in the main, unrelated sources the proofs point unerringly to guilt—viz:

"(a) Possession and use of the ransom money.

"(b) The handwriting of the ransom notes.

"(c) The wood used in the construction of the ladder."

Hauptmann's attorneys immediately began preparations for an appeal to the Supreme court of the United States. Their only way is to ask that tribunal for a review of the New Jersey court's action.

Supreme Court to Decide Two Vital Cases

CONSTITUTIONALITY of two New Deal projects—the AAA processing taxes and the TVA operations in generating and selling power in competition with private power companies—is to be determined by the Supreme court of the United States, and an early ruling on both is expected.

Among the court's negative rulings was a refusal to consider the latest habeas corpus proceedings brought in behalf of Thomas Mooney, California's most famous prisoner. The court also refused to hear an attack on a law which strengthened the political machine of the late Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana.

Col. Roosevelt's Ideas on Campaign Issues

IN SOME quarters Col. Theodore Roosevelt is credited with considerable influence among the Republicans of the eastern states, and often he is mentioned as a possible Presidential candidate. Another potential candidate, strong in the West, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, recently wrote to Colonel Roosevelt proposing that the 1936 Republican campaign be based on a "trust-busting" issue. The colonel turned down the plan. He replied that, while he was in sympathy with the senator's attitude on monopolies, he felt there are many other issues as great or greater. Among these he named "scandalous waste of the people's money, government extravagance, multitudinous taxes, and attempts to subvert our type of government."

Col. Theodore Roosevelt

"I entirely agree," Colonel Roosevelt wrote, "that monopolies are evil, for I am a firm believer in the established American principle of competition. I have stated this over and over again during the last eighteen months.

"This is one of the reasons that I opposed so strenuously the NRA, for that organization gave governmental sanction to monopolies and upheld them by the police force of the nation. I believe in the Sherman anti-trust laws.

"I believe that the Republican party should take a clear and unequivocal stand on this issue.

"I do not agree, however, that this will be the major issue of the campaign."

Carter Glass Won't Help Split His Party

SENATOR CARTER GLASS of Virginia has had his differences with the Roosevelt administration and is likely to have others, but he remains a loyal Democrat. He says he is "a constitutional Democrat within the Democratic party" and adds:

"I would not support any movement to split the party. I refused to join the Liberty league and have refused to join any organization whose aims run counter to the party."

Mr. Glass is certain that President Roosevelt will be renominated without serious opposition. "There is no organized opposition to his nomination in sight within the party," Glass says. "If he lives, he will be renominated by the Democratic party. Not to do so would be a confession of failure."

Choicest Products Sent Afield, Travelers Find

If one must have the choicest caviar, stay away from Russia, or if the finest cheese is desired, avoid Switzerland, reports the Columbus Dispatch. This statement only reflects what experienced travelers have discovered, for it is an axiom that the finest products of a district or country usually are reserved for export. Even in southern California one looks in vain in the grocery stores for the great sound oranges so common elsewhere.

Moscow serves the inferior caviar, with the eggs small and many of them broken, while search for a cheese of the large-holed variety in Lucerne brings the answer from the shopkeeper that the good cheeses are shipped to England or America. The answer to all this is very simple. Shipment to other parts brings higher prices.

Apparently the people are not concerned over the fact that these fine qualities of their choicest products are sent afield. Familiarity with their qualities lessens the appetite for the delicacies, and the increased revenue is sufficient to make up for any denial on their part.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted

By WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—It may be, and possibly is, true that the bulk of our people pay little attention to the fact that gold is pouring into the United States in an unprecedented volume. I can understand how the wheat farmer of the plains country or the cotton farmer of the South or any other type of farmer can fail to become excited over the influx of gold in the last five or six months. It appears to be a far cry from the grain fields or the cotton fields or the quarries or the small town to the heavy concentration of yellow metal to which the United States has been subjected. But the link nevertheless exists. It exists as surely and as definitely as night follows day and, therefore, it becomes a subject in which all of us are vitally interested

Gold Is Pouring In

Since the beginning of September a widespread flight of capital from Europe has manifested itself in the shape of gold exports to the United States. Three or four hundred millions of dollars in gold have landed here in that time. They bring the net inflow of gold for the year well above $1,000,000,000. And, going a bit further, this addition plus another $1,000,000,000 places our gold stocks in excess of $9,400,000,000, or roughly $2,000,000,000 more than was held here when the dollar was devalued under President Roosevelt's instructions.

It seems impossible to attribute this heavy and prolonged inflow to any single cause. Immediately after devaluation of the dollar, there was a steady stream of yellow metal headed for the United States which was due almost entirely to a desire of American holders of gold, temporarily stored abroad, to repatriate. But even in that case, there was a contributory factor to be considered. Monetary manipulation by the American government had a temporary effect on our exports, increasing them to some extent and it was increasing the balance of payments due to this country. So, we find our policies—that is, policies of the Roosevelt administration—responsible for the start of the inflow.

Later, another influence developed. Under the pressure of American monetary policies, foreign powers found their allegiance to the gold standard severely strained. Silver purchases by the treasury had an effect. The combination was primarily responsible for the second rush of gold.

Subsequently, the Italian-Ethiopian controversy began to take serious form and a new flood of gold to America developed. This was different than that which had immediately preceded it because this movement was related to international conditions of a political nature whereas the previous movement had resulted without relation to international strife in a military way but centered wholly upon American monetary policies and their effect upon economic conditions abroad.

* * *

Now, let us consider what can happen. Those acquainted with finance recognize in the existence of a gigantic stock of gold—the largest in American history and approximately 45 per cent of the entire world stock—the existence of a potential, if indeed it is not a probable, base for inflation. There is so much gold held by the American government, which holds virtually all of the gold stocks in this country, that no end of paper money can be issued against it. Those who believe in that type of currency policies say that it would be perfectly safe; that the government could pay off dollar for dollar or even more than a dollar for every paper dollar outstanding from the gold it holds. This school of thought contends that there is actually a shortage of money in circulation and insists that this is one reason why the country has not recovered from the depression more rapidly than conditions show. Of course, a cold appraisal of that argument catalogues it as the same old demand for inflation of the currency and everyone knows what inflation will do in the way of wrecking the person who works for wages or whose sole income consists of a compensation delivered to him in the form of weekly, semi-monthly, or monthly pay checks. The size of that check never has and never will catch up with the increase in prices which that individual must pay to live.

What Can Happen

Then, there is another potential danger in this tremendous horde of gold. It is in many ways similar to that which I have just related. It is, however, more of a psychological condition than the first. I refer to the attitude usually adopted by those who pull for inflation when they see a government possessed of vast stores of precious metals.

* * *

In this instance, the tangent of inflationist sentiment is joined with the sponsors of the silver buying program. They see all of this gold and silver and they simply cannot resist the opportunity for continued howling. Their speeches and their conversations are almost like a college yell: "We want more money," the more money which they desire being nothing more nor less than currency run off in the printing presses of the great bureau of engraving and printing in Washington.

'We Want More Money'

Whether it is the first or the second type of inflation that is demanded, whether it is the printing press money or the money issued against gold as security, the results are the same. It is to be remembered in this connection that none of us can obtain gold from the treasury. The Roosevelt administration demanded of and obtained from congress legislation which definitely prohibited payment of gold for monetary use by the treasury under any circumstances except for the settlement of balances owed foreign nations. But that fact has not deterred demands by inflationists. They are calling and will continue to call for more paper money, and with every call the prices you pay for commodities are bound to increase—that is, they will increase until or unless there is a release of gold again for circulation as money.

So, it is quite apparent that as long as this influx of gold continues and as long as other nations are harassed by monetary manipulation in the United States, we are continually threatened with a "business boom" which is nothing less than inflation of credit. The real danger confronting this country, then, lies in that direction. Summarized, the threat is this: if that inflationist "business boom" gets started, no power on earth is able or will be able to stop it. The next and final step after that is complete destruction of our currency, and medium of exchange.

* * *

Political developments in the last few weeks have been completely dominated by the splurge of activity on the part of former President Herbert Hoover. His pot shots at the New Deal in several speeches have agitated the Democrats much more than they are willing to admit and, notwithstanding assertions of satisfaction, they have thrown a new fear into the laps of the Roosevelt New Dealers.

Stirred by Hoover

But, if the Hoover speeches have excited the New Dealers and the conservative Democrats, they have almost precipitated a riot among the Republicans of whom he must be said to be, at least, the titular leader. The bulk of the Republicans look upon Mr. Hoover, because of these recent speeches, as a potential Republican nominee for the Presidency against Mr. Roosevelt next year. They look upon him, further, as an individual who is likely to disrupt plans that contemplate reconciliation, a love feast, among the various factions of the Republican party. They have been struggling to lay a base for this love feast and because of the intense hatred that some of their number have for Mr. Hoover, his activity has opened this breach again, made it a blood-red wound.

Political observers and commentators have shown all manner of excitement because Mr. Hoover has made no statement whether he will or will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination. In plain words, they have been trying valiantly to conduct a campaign that will smoke out Mr. Hoover and make him say whether he is or is not a candidate.

All of the efforts to find out what Mr. Hoover proposes to do have failed and will continue to fail, even with the underground work of the New Deal, to bring from him a statement as to his purposes. He will announce them in his own good time and his statement will be definite when it is made.

Personally, from all of the information I have been able to assemble, I do not believe that Mr. Hoover has any intention of seeking the nomination. I am convinced his purpose is directed wholly and completely to one end: he fears the New Deal and he is trying with all of the power that he possesses to acquaint the country with his views which are obviously in opposition to the theories and policies and experiments of the New Deal. From sources which I consider to be faithful, because they always have been accurate heretofore, it is apparent to me that Mr. Hoover desires to lend his help in acquainting the country with the things in the New Deal which he regards as dangerous to our nation's well being and that beyond such a purpose he is content to enjoy life as a fisherman and vacationist.

But there is another phase of this situation which seems to me to warrant consideration. While some of the anti-Hooverites have been denouncing him, even calling him names under their breath, Mr. Hoover has done the Republican party a big favor. By his attacks on the New Deal; by his condemnation of the things in it which he regards as certain to be destructive; in short, by his activity which many construe as a campaign for the nomination, he has made the Republicans conscious of the job they have to do. He has awakened them and has put fight into them which three or four short months ago did not exist.

POWER, OFFICE, NOT WEALTH, THE GOAL IN RUSSIA

The ambition which under a different system might find expression in acquiring a personal fortune can find an outlet in the Soviet Union only through advancement in the service of the omnipotent state.

Instead of the stimulus to accumulate private wealth, the Soviet system offers to men who rise high in the heirarchy of political and industrial administrators the equally strong incentive of power, accompanied by a standard of living which, though modest by comparison with what a rich man of luxurious tastes can enjoy in western Europe and America is still far above the bleak Soviet average.

To a foreigner who is accustomed to think of the Soviet ruble as worth about 2 cents a Soviet high official or "captain of industry" receives a moderate salary which may seem ridiculously small, but his position is something like that of an army officer in many other countries.

The salary is, indeed, small, but the perquisites of office provide numerous compensations. An important post in the Soviet Union carries with it a comfortable apartment, the use of a motor car, the right to eat in a good restaurant at a nominal charge, admission to the best rest homes and sanatoria, a private car for travel on the railroads and other advantages.

These things are valuable in Russia just because there is such a general shortage of what would be regarded elsewhere as normal food housing and transportation accommodations.—W. H. Chamberlin in Current History.

Stinging Bees

Bees do not necessarily sacrifice their lives when they sting, according to a study made by J. G. Myers of the Imperial College of Tropical Agriculture, Trinidad. They often can withdraw the sting, and use it again, especially when battling with other insects, their most common enemies.—Nature Magazine.

Do You Ever Wonder

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Ask Your Doctor and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this — and see that you get what you want.

Quick, Complete Pleasant ELIMINATION

Let's be frank. There's only one way for your body to rid itself of the waste matters that cause acidity, gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts—your intestines must function.

To make them move quickly, pleasantly, completely, without griping. Thousands of physicians recommend Milnesia Wafers. (Dentists recommend Milnesia wafers as an efficient remedy for mouth acidity).

These mint flavored candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly in accordance with the directions on the bottle or tin, then swallowed, they correct acidity, bad breath, flatulence, at their source and at the same time enable quick, complete, pleasant elimination.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48 wafers, at 35c and 60c respectively, or in convenient tins containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately an adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores carry them. Start using these delicious, effective wafers today.

Professional samples sent free to registered physicians or dentists if request is made on professional letter head.

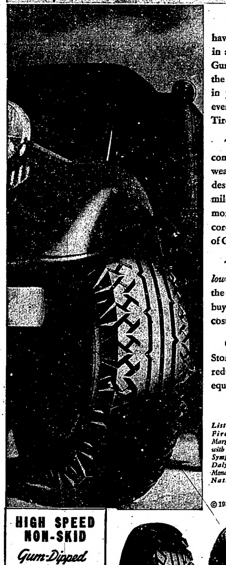
HOW Firestone GIVES YOU LOWEST COST PER MILE



FIRESTONE TIRES are built different — they have three patented construction features not used in any other truck tire. The body is built with Gum-Dipped High Stretch cords. Gum-Dipping, the patented Firestone process, soaks the cords in pure liquid rubber, insulating and coating every strand in every cord. This is why Firestone Tires run cooler and are stronger.

The tread is made of a new and tougher rubber compound which gives greatest resistance to wear. This, together with the scientific non-skid design, gives greater traction and longer non-skid mileage. Firestone locks this wider, heavier and more rugged tread securely to the Gum-Dipped cord body of the tire by building two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords (patented) under the tread.

These exclusive construction features result in lowest cost per mile. The largest operators in the country and operators of all types of equipment buy Firestone Tires year after year on their cost-reducing performance.

Call on the Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store or Tire Dealer nearest you today, and start reducing your operating costs. When buying new equipment be sure to specify Firestone Tires.

25 Years Ago

H. C. Hanson, who resigned as manager of the Farmers' elevator because of ill health, moved with his family to Red Lake Falls where he owned a residence property.

Ole Mathson rented part of the Fricker & Kolstad building and was to occupy it with a stock of general merchandise.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Austin, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Evans, motored here from Crookston Sunday. Such a trip was quite an event those days.

Per Stromme, the noted Norwegian lecturer, gave one of his humorous lectures at the Imperial hall here that week.

SPECIAL SESSION TO MEET DEC. 2D

Governor Olson has indicated he will call a special session of the state legislature to convene December 2nd. Among the most important, as well as the most pressing matters to be taken up will be that of devising new methods of taxation to provide funds for the rapidly mounting cost of state government, and to pass legislation which will permit putting into effect the social security plan in this state in conformity with plans outlined by the federal government which will bear one-half the cost in each state adopting the plan.

MONTANA GETS SNOW

To add to discomfort of the hundreds of people whose homes were destroyed or damaged by recent earthquake shocks in and near Helena, Mont., a howling blizzard swept down on the city from northwest on Tuesday morning. Temperatures dropped to eight below zero causing intense suffering among the homeless people many of whom were temporarily housed in army tents. At the same time, zero temperatures are reported from points in western Canada and also in Wyoming.

A Hallowe'en program and carnival will be given this evening, Oct. 31st, at the Aubol school a mile north of the village. A nice program has been arranged, and all who attend can be assured of a good time.

Eva Harder, Teacher.

Sock Social, Nov. 1

Be sure and come to the carnival and program at Eastside School, Dist. 133-J, Friday evening, Nov. 1st, 6½ miles southeast of St. Hilaire. An Indian blanket will be given away. Girls please bring a pair of men's socks. Everybody welcome.

Evelyn Peterson, Teacher.

In a state-wide poll to determine whether or not to continue the AAA and its allied activities, the vote seems to be running about 8 to 1 in favor of continuation. The acreage control plan for agriculture will be in force the next four years, 1936 to 1939 inclusive.

TEMPERATURES DROP

Following report Tuesday evening that heavy snows had fallen in western Canada, Montana, western North Dakota, and that a cold wave was sweeping down from Canada, the mercury here commenced falling and continued to drop until last night. While it is rather early to expect winter to set in, most people are finding it very comfortable to don winter clothing.

DISTRICT COURT RECESSED FRIDAY

District court in this county adjourned last Friday, to be reopened at a date to be announced later. The adjournment of court in this county was made necessary because Judge Brattland was scheduled to hold a term of court in Roseau county this week.

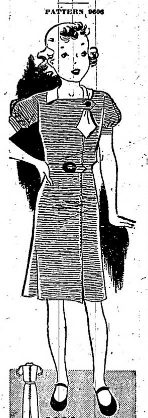
LET JUNIOR MAKE OWN SIMPLE FROCK

PATTERN 9606



Lives there a Junior Miss who couldn't "fall" for this smart yet simple school frock? We just know she will want to make her first fall frock from this pattern, because it's so very easy to cut, assemble and stitch, and if Mother is too busy to supervise the operation, take the pattern and some pretty cotton to sewing class and work on it there. The youthful, square neck adopts a scarf-like collar to slip under its tab, the puffed sleeves have a hearty slash. Action pleats grace back bodice and skirt, a box pleat, the side front skirt.

Pattern 9606 may be ordered only in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14. Size 12 requires 2⅝ yards 36 inch fabric and ⅜ yard contrasting. Complete diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 232 West Eighteenth St., New York, N. Y.

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D.C.

The African War

Washington.—A friend of mine, a minor official of the government, remarked to me the other day that he could find very little cause for excitement in his own mind about the hostilities between Italy and Ethiopia. The fighting is so far away, he said, and the nations involved are of such comparative insignificance in the whole world structure that he found no reason at all to do more than read the black-faced headlines about the trouble as they appeared from day to day in the great metropolitan newspapers.

We were, at the time, wending a rather slow way around the golf links of the Congressional Country club. The course is set in the midst of fine farming country and my friend used the situation as a basis for his argument that there was little reason for any of us to take the Italian-Ethiopian trouble seriously.

"How can it make very much difference to us," he asked with a wave of his hand toward the fine farms and splendid homes within sight, "when we have a nation so admirably supplied with resources of which those are typical? We can live even if the trouble broadens. If necessary we can close our shores to foreigners and keep out of the trouble."

Unwittingly, my friend supplied a text. In fact, he supplied two of them.

The man in question is able, has a good brain and is doing his job satisfactorily, but it is his first connection with the government in an official capacity. He has not had training heretofore that fits him or equips him to deal with broad international questions. In time his views will change. Of that I have no doubt, but the fact remains that his attitude on the Italian-Ethiopian situation marks him as one of countless hundreds of government officials, past and present, who are brought in and given responsible posts without regard to their understanding of all of the problems which they must meet.

The other text which my friend's conversation suggested is "what interest do we have in the African war?"

Most individuals will agree that at the moment we are in no danger and that immediately there is no prospect of any kind of trouble insofar as the United States is concerned but it is not the immediate prospect that we must consider. It is not the immediate prospect that caused Secretary Hull of the State department to declare and to reiterate that the objective of present American policies is to keep this country out of war. That was the reason congress enacted the so-called neutrality resolution and that was the reason President Roosevelt placed an embargo against the shipment of arms and munitions of war to the present belligerents. Again, it is not the present, but where we go from here that concerns us.

Europe a Powder Keg

Undoubtedly congress did a popular thing when it adopted the resolution designed to prevent development of circumstances which may place us on the verge of the cataclysm. I say the action was popular because there has been no indication from any important quarter, except from traders whose business has been handicapped, against the official policy enacted in that resolution.

But the end is not yet. In the first instance, all of Europe is virtually a powder keg. Potential dynamite lies in the differences between Russians and Japanese. Their frontier can be the scene of the fated overt act at any moment. And, while the hope is for settlement of all differences between the Japanese and the Russians in a peaceful manner, there is no assurance that these can be so settled.

Since the Italian dictator, Mussolini, brazenly announced that he wanted more territory for his people and proposed to get it at the expense of the black men in Ethiopia, tension between Great Britain and Italy has increased from day to day. Backing and filling between the British and the French have been the regular order because the British and the French have comparable interests in Africa. Further, a strengthened Italy means a menace of a continuing character to her neighbor, France.

The British have scores of battle boats in the Mediterranean sea. Those ships are at anchor from which they can be called into quick use. The British say the fleet is maintained there merely as a "precaution." Mussolini knows better. He knows and every one else will discover after even a superficial examination of the situation that the British will brook no moves by Italy that threaten British control of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan nor will the British permit Mussolini to gain control of such Ethiopian territory as will jeopardize their supervision over territory through which the waters of the blue Nile flow. These waters are essential to the British.

So it takes no stretch of the imagination to conclude that even a minor incident, accidental damage to a British boat or an injury to a British citizen—of such things and from such things comes war—will cause trouble.

If by any chance one of those "incidents" comes, the British and the Italians will be at each other's throats. Next, should that break develop, every nation in Europe is compelled for one reason or another to align itself with one side or the other. Hitler, for example, would want nothing better than an opportunity to stir up some trouble among the other nations in order that he could spread his power over Austria and Hungary and maybe over some of the Balkan states. He wants more territory and if a free-for-all should get started Herr Hitler will lose no time in subjugating some of the neighboring countries.

Would Hit Our Commerce

Even if these conditions obtain, my friend's statement that the war is a long way off still is correct. It would be three or four thousand miles from American shores but the point of difference is that we are a commercial nation and if the European powder keg explodes our commerce would be affected. Indeed, it would be virtually destroyed.

But, it will be asked, why not live within our own shell? The answer is, we cannot do so. Our ships, carrying the products of our farms and factories, would be plying the seas. Nations at war do not take the time always to learn the character of cargo aboard a ship at sea nor do they inquire its destination or the purpose for which it is to be used. Then, we hear of the overt act. An American ship with an American crew and an American cargo is sunk. Or, American-owned and manned business units in some one of the belligerent countries suffers from one of the various things that takes place during the war. It may be the act of some hot-headed foreign national or it may be a deliberate move by a government, but the die is cast. An American citizen is killed, an American flag is insulted. We are in it.

It seems to me, therefore, that we have every reason to watch closely those developments abroad. Our own people are not blameless for some of the conditions that develop. For instance, the following day after Mr. Roosevelt issued his proclamation prohibiting exports of arms and munitions and, by inference, prohibiting dealings of any kind with Italy and Ethiopia, New York exporters rose with a mighty howl and the Port Development Authority in New York protested. One group saw all opportunities for profitable business stricken out by the prohibition against exports and the other, with proper civic pride, complained that the executive action would wreck New York city as a maritime center. Their complaints were natural, quite human, but their refusal to accept the national policy simply represents one of the many things constituting an early step that may subsequently be one of the foundation stones of war.

I do not mean to say in these columns that we should become a peace-at-any-price nation. On the contrary, I think that is a cowardly position for any nation to take. What I do emphasize, however, is that if we are to have an international policy, we should adhere to it.

Neutrality Edict

Now, let us consider the governmental problem. I said earlier that congress undoubtedly had acted in accordance with the views of a majority of our people. President Roosevelt has chosen to accept the neutrality resolution as a mandate from congress which gives him almost no discretion. His arms embargo, his shipping prohibition and his warning to American citizens that if they travel on boats belonging to the belligerent powers they do so at their own risks was the narrowest construction possible to have been placed on the neutrality edict of congress.

Congress is not in session and will not be back here again until January. The President's hands are tied unless he decides to call congress into extra session and that, of course, will not be done unless sudden flames of war sweep over the whole world. Therefore, if Mr. Roosevelt clings to the policy which he has adopted in narrowly construing the neutrality resolution until the congressional session opens in January, congress can do no more than commend him for following its dictates. But if any of the conditions enumerated above should place the American neutrality position where a test must be had, congress must accept the blame. So, as long as Mr. Roosevelt follows his present course and throws himself completely on the law, the President can make short answer to those who would enlist this country in international action. That position, of course, has its weaknesses because something may develop overnight with which he cannot deal under an inflexible law but, on the other hand, the fact that he can do little without calling congress back, certainly provides a cooling-off period during which the thoughts of a nation may crystallize.

Russians Use Coal for Heat Without Ignition

Russian farmers have discovered a way to speed up the ripening of their cotton crops by a month or more. They use coal to warm the cotton plants without burning the coal. This seeming paradox is being performed at Kazakstan. Obtaining heat from coal without burning is the application of a simple fact of physics that dark colors absorb the heat in the sun's rays better than light colors.

The Kazakstan farmers simply spread coal dust lightly over their fields; about 100 pounds to an acre. The darkened surface of the land is a better absorber of heat during the day and reradiates more of it as warmth during the night. The higher average temperature of the land during the growing season, therefore, shortens the time necessary for the crop to mature by over a month.

Meaning of Kidnaping

Kidnaping has a broad meaning in criminal law and many who have committed this crime unknowingly have been sent to prison. In most states "intent" is not necessary and, secondly, the offense includes "keeping or detaining" anyone against his will. One odd case on record is that of a man who was convicted of kidnaping his wife because he forced her to accompany him on a journey.—Collier's Weekly.

Find Out

From Your Doctor if the "Pain" Remedy You Take Is Safe.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

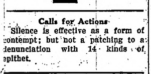
DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:

THREE STEPS TO RELIEVING CONSTIPATION



A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Redwood Falls—Approximately 1000 persons attended the sessions of the seventy-seventh state Sunday school convention at the Methodist church.

Minneapolis—Request for WPA funds to cover complete cost of the Lake Minnetonka restoration project was voted by the Hennepin board of commissioners.

Slayton—Women engaged in a rollingpin contest as men held their annual county corn-husking contest here. Cash prizes were awarded the most expert of the rollingpin throwers. The targets were dummy men.

Minneapolis—Thousands of pheasant hunters swarmed the fields at the opening of the season to find plenty of cover for the birds to hide in. Three persons were killed over the first weekend and a few were injured.

Minneapolis—Glen Seidel, varsity quarterback of the Gopher football squad and headed for all-American honors, suffered a broken collarbone in the last quarter of the Tulane game. He probably will be lost for the season.

Frazee—Mrs. Laura Atkinson of Frazee, Becker county's oldest resident, has observed her 102nd birthday anniversary. Mrs. Atkinson still is very active. She resides with her daughter, Mrs. Mary Parker, who is 79 years old.

St. Paul—Governor Floyd B. Olson, following a conference with the two majority leaders of the legislature, announced the special session will be called to meet December 2, and that there will be an effort to reach a pre-session agreement on tax revision, as well as on the social security bills.

Minneapolis—A three-judge federal bench in Minneapolis denied a motion of the federal government to dismiss an injunction obtained by the Gold Medal Foods, Inc., restraining the collection of AAA processing taxes. The decision blocks further processing tax collections in Minnesota.

Jackson—All state cornhusking records were shattered in the Jackson county contest on the Vern Williams farm near here when Henry Christoffer, 43 years old, of Brewster, won with a net load of 29.6 bushels in 80 minutes. Eighteen competed. Ted Balko held the old record of 27.1 bushels.

Garrison—The success of roadside development work accomplished by a north shore CCC camp last year under direction of the state highway department has moved the department of interior to establish three new camps to continue this activity in northern Minnesota. The camps, containing 200 men each, have been located near Garrison, on Mille Lacs lake; two miles north of Walker on Leach lake, and near Knife river on Lake Superior.

Onamia—A father's dash back into his burning home to get wraps for six small children saved the life of a six months old baby, which had been left behind in the excitement. The father, John Kimmons, had previously carried out the other six children, believing his wife had the baby. When he ran back into the house to get the wraps, he found the baby on the bed, still asleep. Kimmons suffered minor burns. The dwelling was destroyed.

Dawson—They didn't mean to lie, but the whole affair was so overwhelming that the truth, which they expected to tell, was left behind in the whirl of events that made them perjury victims. That in a nutshell is the story of Bernice Anderson and Helen Lund, the Dawson girls who admitted falsifying in the Carl H. Fredlund trial in Minneapolis. Both girls pleaded guilty to perjury indictments growing out of their testimony in the Fredlund defense. They hope the court will be lenient.

Wheaton—Destroying thousands of tons of hay and numerous hunting shacks, a prairie fire burned over an area of more than 36 square miles, swept across western Minnesota and into South Dakota. It was one of the worst prairie blazes ever experienced in this section, the flames rushing across the lake bottom of Mud lake. Pheasants and rabbits living in the tall brush rushed from the fire by the hundreds. Hundreds of men from this community and Roberts county, in South Dakota, fought the fire.

Minneapolis—Marking another sign of returning prosperity to this territory, the Minnesota, largest theatre in the Northwest and one of the leading showplaces in the nation, will be re-opened Friday night, Nov. 1. Closed since July 1, 1934, the Minnesota has been extensively remodelled and the latest improvements of the theatre world have been installed. An elaborate Hollywood Premiere, in front of the theatre at 7:30 will precede the showing of C. B. DeMille's production, "The Crusades". Many national figures of the motion picture industry, including Adolph Zukor, president of Paramount Pictures, will be here for the opening.

Redwood Falls—A church which weathered massacre and storm observed the seventy-fifth anniversary of its founding in pioneer times. Rev. G. E. Martin, pastor of the Redwood Falls Methodist church, opened the four-day program with a tribute to pioneers who built the Middle Creek Evangelical church and withstood the Sioux uprising. Founded in 1860, the Evangelical church lost 75 members of its congregation Aug. 18, 1862, when the Sioux raided the settlement.

Great Stone Blocks Are Island of Guam Mystery

The great blocks of stone which, by some unknown process, were hoisted in place to build the Egyptian pyramids have caused many to marvel, yet on the island of Guam there are stones larger than those used in the pyramids, evidently marking the burial place of an ancient native chief.

The huge stone blocks weigh approximately 2,500 pounds each, and when found one rested on the other. Both are of coral formation. The finding of many such burial places on Guam indicates that this island once had a big population. Little is known about its early inhabitants.

Rubbing the Eyes a Dangerous Practice

Mascara, eye shadow and brow pencil if judiciously applied spell glamor, but they're not the whole story when the eye question comes up—as it does every time you look in the mirror.

Eyes can be dusty, tired, weary and reddened. Then, no matter how delicately you frame your eyes, the picture is spoiled.

When the eyes feel and look all blurry, a few drops of lotion help to soothe and refresh them.

A lotion has no strengthening effect—go to a good oculist if you feel in need of that—but it does lessen the danger of eye infection because it removes irritating particles, and it's safe to use. Speaking of safety—if you're fond of your eyes, don't rub them. Rubbing your eyes is just the worst thing you can do to them and it leaves them an unbecoming red without giving any real relief at all. That's where a good lotion is somebody's gift to eye-conscious humanity.

NO ALKALIES FOR ACID INDIGESTION

MILLIONS have found they do not need to drench their stomachs with strong, caustic alkalies. Physicians have said this habit often brings further acid indigestion. So much more safe and sensible to simply carry a roll of Tums in your pocket. Munch 3 or 4 after meals—or whenever troubled by heartburn, gas, sour stomach. Try them when you feel the effects of last night's party, or when you smoke too much. Tums contain a wonderful antacid which neutralizes acid in the stomach, but never overalkalizes stomach or blood. As pleasant to eat as candy and only 10c at any drug store.

Italian Goods Boycotted by the League

WHILE Premier Pierre Laval of France was still trying desperately to find a way of settling the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel that would be acceptable to both Great Britain and Italy—apparently without regard to Ethiopia's real interests—fifty-two members of the League of Nations declared a boycott on all Italian goods and an embargo on various key exports to that country. The boycott binds these nations to prohibit importation of "all goods consigned from and grown, produced or manufactured in Italy or in Italian possessions from whatever place they arrive."

Pierre Laval

If rigidly enforced, this would cut off about two-thirds of the export trade upon which Italy depends in getting funds for prosecution of the war in Africa. The countries applying the sanctions agree to aid one another in compensating losses by increased trade facilities, credits, cash and loans if possible, and discriminating against league members such as Austria and Hungary which continue to trade with Italy.

Austria, Hungary and Albania spoke against the sanctions. Switzerland, which seeks to preserve her traditional neutrality, was silent. Some South American republics made complicated reservations.

It was decided that the sanctions should be put in force on October 31, and Laval thus had time to continue his peace efforts. These seemed to center on a way to "legalize" Italian occupation of that part of northern Ethiopia which Mussolini's troops have seized and to arrange for Italy's partial control over the entire empire.

European Tension Lessened by Diplomatic Juggling

IN THE course of his negotiations, which were given approval in the French elections, Laval worked hard to dissipate the threat of hostilities between Great Britain and Italy. In this he apparently was fairly successful, at least for the time being. He asked the British to withdraw some of their battleships from the Mediterranean and Mussolini to call back a lot of the troops he had sent to Libya as a threat to Egypt. At first the British cabinet rejected this proposition, but there were reports that it might yield the point.

Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador to Rome, informed the Italian government that Britain would not undertake any action in regard to the conflict in Ethiopia, "beyond what is demanded by its collective obligations in its quality as a loyal member of the League of Nations, nor beyond what might be agreed to or recommended by the league on conformity with the dispositions of the pact."

Laval's reply to Great Britain's query as to whether France would support Britain and co-operate with her fleet in the Mediterranean in case of Italian attacks was still somewhat uncertain but seemed to satisfy the British.

Warns Italy Against "Unfair" War Methods

IN A long and solemn statement the Ethiopian legation in London warned Italy that its "ghastly methods" of warfare, the use of poison gas and dum-dum bullets, would have dire results.

The legation stated that Italy's use of "unfair and ultra-civilized methods of warfare," of which the legation says it has impartial substantiation despite public denials by Ambassador Dino Grandi of Italy, "will lead to the most unfortunate consequences, not only to Italians who will, of course, deserve it, but to all white peoples as well."

The whites, the statement said, "will be intensely hated by all the peoples of Africa and, we think, of Asia also for years to come."

The statement warned that it will not be possible to restrain the wilder section of the Ethiopian army from retaliating in some similar savage method on Italian soldiers who may happen to fall into their hands.

Italians Win Victories in Southern Sector

GEN. RUDOLFO GRAZIANI'S forces in southern Ethiopia were reported to have won several important victories in their advance toward Harrar and the railway. They captured some towns despite desperate resistance by the natives, and took many prisoners. The main movement in that region was up the Webbe Shibeli river. The Ethiopians were repeatedly dispersed by aerial bombardment.

In Tigre province, on the north, the Italians were consolidating their positions and preparing for another big thrust toward Addis Ababa. Their line there extended nearly 70 miles from Adigrat through Aduwa to the holy city of Aksum.

Italian aviator-scouts reported that Ethiopian troops were digging in at Makale, about 60 miles southeast of Aduwa and the next logical objective in the Italian campaign of occupation, forming a major concentration for a desperate effort to frustrate the next attack.

From Dessye, Ethiopia, came a story that Danakil warriors had cut off and surrounded between 500 and 700 Italians in the hills southeast of Mount Mussa Ali, and that the latter were very short of food and water.

Helena, Mont., Hit by Series of Quakes

HELENA, capital of Montana, and all the western part of that state were terrified by a series of earthquake shocks extending through a number of days. There were only two fatalities, but numerous buildings were wrecked or so weakened that they had to be razed. Hundreds of persons were driven from their homes, and the suffering was intensified by a sudden fall of the temperature to below freezing. Fortunately the gas mains of the city were not broken. National Guardsmen patrolled the business district and all public places were closed for days.

Senator William E. Murray and Representative John P. Monaghan surveyed the damage, and Murray, terming the quake "one of Montana's worst disasters," said he would go by airplane to Washington ask immediate help.

Arthur Henderson, Peace Advocate, Is Dead

ARTHUR HENDERSON, president of the world disarmament conference and a most determined foe of war, died in a London nursing home. He was seventy-two years old and had been ill for a long time, so ill that he had not been permitted to see a newspaper for six weeks and did not know that another war had broken out and that the peace of Europe was threatened. The former iron molder of Glasgow who became a leader of the Labor party and was foreign secretary when it was in power, was awarded the Nobel peace prize in 1934. His crusade for peace and disarmament was inspired by the death of his eldest son in the World war. He was a gentle, much loved man, a genuine idealist whose latter years were made sorrowful by the repeated failure of the disarmament conference to get results.

Death of General Greely, Arctic Explorer

DEATH came to an eminent American, Maj. Gen. Adolphus W. Greely, U. S. A., retired, at the age of ninety-one years. He passed away in Walter Reed hospital, Washington, and was buried in Arlington national cemetery with full honors. General Greely was universally known as the leader of the ill-fated expedition into the Arctic regions in 1881 from which only he and seven others returned alive. But he had already served in the Civil war with distinction, and his later scientific accomplishments won him international fame and recognition. On his ninety-first birthday, last March 27, he received a medal of honor from congress "for his life of splendid service."

General Greely was one of the original organizers of the National Geographic society, and a member of the board of trustees continuously for 47 years from the date of the society's founding in 1888.

Williams Asks Care for "Unemployables"

ALL states and communities have been asked by Aubrey Williams acting WPA administrator, to make better provisions for the care of "unemployables," for federal aid for the needy will soon be confined to providing jobs. In an interview Mr. Williams said that with six states already cut off the dole, progress of the work relief program would bring liquidation of relief administrations in "the great majority of the remaining states" during November. This will leave those physically or mentally unable to work, the aged, mothers with dependent children, and other handicapped families and individuals, dependent upon local efforts.

"It will be next year before the social security program becomes operative, and the states have got to take the responsibility," he said.

President Roosevelt's order that all employment projects be under way or ready for contractors' bids by October 22 could not be complied with by any agency except the PWA with its $133,000,000 slum clearance and low cost housing program. The next deadline is December 15, when Mr. Roosevelt said all heavy construction—public works' $330,000,000 of work, river and harbor improvements and rural electrification systems—should be under contract.

Not Nine, but 50,000 Planets, Says Scientist

The solar system, of which the earth is a part, probably contains not 9 but 50,000 planets, it has been estimated by Prof. Armin O. Leuschner, of the University of California. In addition to the well known ones, Mercury, Venus, Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus Neptune, and Pluto, a swarm of lesser objects have orbits around the sun, most of them in the region between Mars and Jupiter. Nearly 1,300 of the small bodies, or asteroids, have been located since the beginning of the last century, on the first night of which the Italian astronomer Guiseppe Piazzi sighted the first, Ceres.—Literary Digest.

NOW HE KNOWS HOW

Charles (Buddy) Rogers insists he isn't thinking of marriage, but he had a lot of week-end experience in watching others take the plunge at Olathe, Kan. Buddy's father, Judge Bert Rogers, announced gleefully he had married 35 couples in two days. He attributed the rush to the presence of his actor-son. They all wanted Buddy for witness.

Lowest Prices Ever on Calumet Baking Powder!

"IT'S certainly good news that Calumet is selling at new low prices," Mrs. McIntosh says. "I do a lot of baking, and when I can get a full pound can of reliable Calumet for only 25c, I'm pretty pleased with myself!"

Her son Jack settles down to some of Mother's famous coffee cake, and pays for it with a big smile.

AND LOOK AT THE NEW CAN! A simple twist...and the Easy-Opening Top lifts off. No delay, no spilling, no broken fingernails!

WHY IS CALUMET DIFFERENT from other baking powders? Why do you have to use only one level teaspoonful of Calumet to a cup of sifted flour in most recipes?
Because Calumet combines two distinct leavening actions. A quick action for the mixing bowl—set free by liquid. A slower action for the oven—set free by heat.

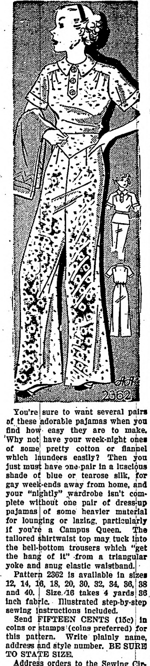
Easy to Make Pajamas Please Sleeping Beauty

PATTERN 2362



You're sure to want several pairs of these adorable pajamas when you find how easy they are to make. Why not have your week-night ones of some pretty cotton or flannel which launders easily? Then you just must have one pair in a luscious shade of blue or tearose silk, for gay week-ends away from home, and your "nightly" wardrobe isn't complete without one pair of dress-up pajamas of some heavier material for lounging or lazing, particularly if you're a Campus Queen. The tailored shirtwaist top may tuck into the bell-bottom trousers which "get the hang of it" from a triangular yoke and snug elastic waistband.

Pattern 2362 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 4 yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to the Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 243 West Seventeenth St., New York City.

THE TEST

"So you vant to marry my daughter, yet? Vell, could you lend me $1,000 for a year midout interest?"

"Most certainly I could, but I von't."

"Good for you, take her, mine son."

Preferred Silence

Diner—Does your orchestra do any request playing?

Orchestra Leader—Yes, sir, we play request numbers at almost every meal.

Diner—Then will you please play dominoes until I finish my dinner?

Keep Your Distance

Jim—My, but you have a tiny little waist.

Jane—Yes, there's no getting around that.

Her Reward

Minister (calling)—And what does your mother do for you when you've been a good girl?

Little Girl—She lets me stay home from church.

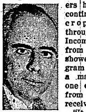
Corn-Hog Program Is Indorsed by Farmers



Chester C. Davis

NEW DEALERS have scored a major victory, and are correspondingly elated. By a majority of something like 6 to 1, the corn-hog producers have voted for a continuance of the crop adjustment through another year. Incomplete returns from the referendum showed that the program was favored by a majority in every one of the 33 states from which votes were received.

"It is only natural that we should be pleased with the apparent approval of adjustment given by corn and hog farmers," said Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, as he watched the returns come in at Washington. "If the final results bear out present indications another voluntary contract will be offered for both corn and hogs."

In a formal statement Davis emphasized earlier assurances that the AAA would seek a 25 to 30 per cent increase in hog production next year, saying the "need for increasing the present pork supply of the nation . . will be kept in mind in plans for the next adjustment contract."

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace gave out a statement commending the farmers for their decision. "The referendum means," said Mr. Wallace, "that corn-hog farmers of the country will be doing their best to increase hog production next year in such a way as will not bring about excessive overproduction in subsequent years. They realize their triple duty: To the consumer, to the cause of soil conservation, and to the maintenance of a fair income for themselves."

Before the results of the voting were known President Roosevelt announced tentative plans for making the AAA over from an emergency to a permanent agency. Observers in Washington concluded that Mr. Roosevelt intends to make the AAA a major campaign issue next year and to rely for re-election largely on the voters in those western states that have received the largest cash payments in the carrying out of the crop adjustment program—taking it for granted that he will carry the solid South.

Uncle Sam Is Cautious Concerning Sanctions

Secretary Hull

WHILE the League of Nations was going forward with its plans for the imposition of sanctions against Italy, its officials asked the United States government to comment on this policy, for the attitude of this country is considered vital to the success of the program. Secretary of State Hull replied promptly but with extreme caution, avoiding comment on the action taken by the league powers and inferentially declining to cooperate in the sanctions. The answer, whose tenor was dictated by President Roosevelt, was sent to Minister Hugh Wilson at Berne. It only set forth the moves made by the United States under the neutrality act and restated our government's hope for world peace. In press conferences Mr. Hull stressed the fact that this country will continue to move independently to keep free and untangled as President Roosevelt has promised.

League of Nations officials on reading the reply said it was "encouraging" and all that could be expected. They looked upon it as important moral support of league efforts to end the warfare in Africa.

Prospects for Early Peace Are Faint

BRITISH diplomats were of the opinion that the chances for an early peace in east Africa were mighty small unless Italy could be stopped by the effective imposition of penalties. The Italians seemed to have dropped diplomatic negotiations with the other European powers and started another big drive from the northern front toward Makale and Addis Ababa. The first day's advance carried their central columns nine miles forward and was said to pave the way for a general movement ahead. So far as the uncertain news from the front shows, the Ethiopians were offering little resistance. To date there has been no battles of major importance, and until the Italians have chances to annihilate the Ethiopians in large numbers the latter have a good chance.

General Graziani's southern army, in three columns, was steadily advancing on Harrar, despite rains and boggy ground and the guerilla warfare waged by the natives. The capture of the important town of Gorahai was imminent.

In Rome Mussolini told a gathering of Fascists that Italy would respond with "heroisms" to the sanctions which he termed "the most odious of injustices."

Hoare Tells British Stand on War

Sir Samuel Hoare

SIR SAMUEL HOARE, British foreign secretary, assured parliament and the world that Great Britain has no intention of fighting Italy and would not alone apply military sanctions against that nation. He held out strong hopes that the war in Africa could be settled without resort by the league to extreme measures. His speech was plainly an invitation to Italy to talk peace terms.

Denying that the government's policy is hostile to Fascism, Sir Samuel said:

"We have not the least intention of interfering in the domestic affairs of other people."

"The unbroken solidarity of the empire is behind the government's policy," he said. "Let those prophets of misfortune who have marked the empire down for decay and dissolution observe this fact of overwhelming importance."

Hoare hinted at British isolation from continental affairs if the league collapses.

Next day Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin warmly endorsed all that had been done at Geneva. He deprecated even the use of the word war, but called for a rearming of the empire, saying: "In the interests of world peace it is essential our defensive services should be stronger than they are today."

Baldwin announced the adjournment of parliament on October 25 and the election of a new parliament on November 14. The campaign already is under way and is lively, with the international situation furnishing the main issues. The Labor party accuses the government of delaying action in the Italo-Ethiopian embroglio until too late to prove really effective, and impugns its motive in seeking rearmament.

Navy Day Is Celebrated by the Nation

NAVY day, which appropriately is the birthday of the late President Theodore Roosevelt, was celebrated throughout the United States. President Franklin D. Roosevelt gave it a good start with a letter to Secretary Swanson in which he declared himself in favor of building the navy up to the country's needs. He said:

"In the unsettled conditions existing throughout the world it is imperative that we should heed the needs of national defense. By the passage of the Vinson-Trammell bill, which authorizes the upbuilding of the navy to the limits of existing treaties, our national legislature gave very definite expression of its purpose to increase the strength of the American navy to a degree commensurate with America's needs, interests and responsibilities."

Six thousand Boy Scouts, headed by Daniel Beard, the aged national scout commissioner, made the customary pilgrimage to the tomb of Theodore Roosevelt at Oyster Bay.

Prince Von Starhemberg May Be Made King

Prince von Starhemberg

FASCISTS of Austria and leaders of the Heimwehr, all adherents of Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, now vice chancellor of the country, are contemplating the possibility of making the prince regent and later proclaiming him king. Actually the movement toward this end has been started. Von Starhemberg's attitude toward this movement was not revealed, but he indicated in a carefully worded address that he proposed to develop his Fascist ideas with greater vigor.

Friends of the prince hold that a Starhemberg dynasty in Austria would be greatly preferable to restoration of the Hapsburgs. They say the pretender to the throne, Archduke Otto, wants to establish a democratic kingdom, and this would not fit in with the ideas of the Fascists. Besides, the return of the Hapsburg dynasty would be bitterly opposed by the little entente and probably by some of the great powers.

Hundreds of Haitians Perish in Hurricane

BELATED reports told of the terrific hurricane that swept across the southern peninsula of Haiti and that was followed by devastating floods. There was no way of estimating the number of fatalities, but they were believed to be as many as two thousand. Entire populations of many valley villages were wiped out. Jeremie, near the western tip of the peninsula, suffered the most. Jacmiel also was hard hit and about one hundred bodies were recovered there. The hydro-electric plant at this place was destroyed.

The Man Who Knows

Whether the Remedy You are taking for Headaches, Neuralgia or Rheumatism Pains is SAFE is Your Doctor. Ask Him

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it — in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

DON'T SLEEP ON LEFT SIDE, AFFECTS HEART

Gas Pressure May Cause Discomfort. Right Side Best

If you toss in bed and can't sleep on right side, try Adlerika. Just ONE dose relieves stomach GAS pressing on heart so you sleep soundly all night.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels and brings out foul matter you would never believe was in your system. This old matter may have poisoned you for months and caused GAS, sour stomach, headache or nervousness.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli."

Mrs. Jas. Filler: "Gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart hurt. The first dose of Adlerika brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never felt better."

Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just ONE dose relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

Well, What Else?

If they weren't called the "bonds" of matrimony, it might help.

I FEEL FINE

Mothers read this:

A CONSTIPATED child is so easily straightened out, it's a pity more mothers don't know the remedy.

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

Doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. And today, there are fully a million families that will have no other kind in the house.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a doctor's prescription, now so widely known that you can get it all ready for use at any drugstore.

Fake Fingerprints May Divert Police Suspicion

Fingerprints of different people, as we know, are never the same. But it is possible for a crook to imitate a genuine fingerprint so that the suspicion of the police can be diverted, says Pearson's Weekly.

How this can be done has been shown by Dr. Harold Cummins of the Tulane University of Medicine, Chicago. Taking an original genuine fingerprint, he had it engraved, and made a three dimensional negative in wax. Then he took a cast in gelatin on a dummy finger. Twelve of the 32 prints he made with the dummy finger were declared by fingerprint experts to be genuine.

Though this proportion is not very great, the United States authorities believe it is sufficient to allow criminals many opportunities to put the police on false trails.

Now Science Explains Why So Many People Past 40

Feel That They're Slipping Losing Their "Grip" on Things

Many people 'round 40 think they're "growing old." They feel tired a lot . . . "weak." Have headaches, dizziness, stomach upsets.

Well, scientists say the cause of all this, in a great many cases, is simply an acid condition of the stomach. Nothing more.

All you have to do is to neutralize the excess stomach acidity.

When you have one of these acid stomach upsets, take Phillips' Milk of Magnesia after meals and before going to bed. That's all!

Try this. Soon you'll feel like another person! Take either the familiar liquid "PHILLIPS'" or the convenient new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at all drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

States' Rights

Washington.—In days not so far in the distant past, an argument could be developed in any community where there were more than a handful of Democrats if one took the position that the rights of the federal government were predominant over states' rights. States' rights constituted an issue that never died politically until the New Deal arrived on the scene at Washington. Through some two years or more now, we had heard very little about states' rights. Yet, within the last few days, we have found that the states' rights issue was not dead. It was only sleeping, and it has come to life in a really big way.

New Deal policies have been consistently policies of centralization of power in the hands of the federal government. New Dealers have enacted much legislation and have carried out many programs that appear to be contrary to the views which used to be held by advocates of states' rights. These things have been accomplished with almost no complaint from the Democratic side and with only a minimum of squawking from New Deal opposition from whence came complaints about regimentation and extension of government functions into the field of private enterprise in competition with the government's citizens.

Lately, however, some thirty or thirty-five cities have awakened with a shock and have rendered one New Deal program a severe jolt by that awakening. I refer to the plans for government construction of the so-called low cost housing projects. These were and are intended to provide apartments or small homes for families in the very low income brackets and to provide work for labor in their construction. Eventually, it was hoped, the program would use up a good many hundred million dollars of work-relief funds. Some has already been spent; some projects have been completed, and these results coincided with the arrival of tax paying time in certain localities. That was the crux.

Atlanta Project

To show what has happened in those cities and areas wherein the low cost housing projects have been planned or completed, let us take a particular case, namely, the housing project in Atlanta, Georgia. It is of no use to cite the facts in all of them, because the Atlanta case is typical.

Secretary Ickes and his Public Works administration had spent approximately three million dollars in the construction of the Atlanta housing layout. No sooner had this been accomplished, however, than the city of Atlanta awakened to the fact that it would get no taxes nor will the state of Georgia get taxes from this great investment. The project was ruled by Comptroller General J. R. McCarl to be federally owned. As such, it was not subject to state or municipal taxation. The city of Atlanta and the state of Georgia had been deriving taxes from the real estate now owned by Uncle Sam.

It was Atlanta's turn to move. It announced through its properly constituted city authorities that if there were no taxes, then Atlanta could not furnish fire and police protection for the property nor could it supply water for the tenants nor would it permit children of those tenants to attend the Atlanta schools as free students. Atlanta contended that it bears the burden of these expenses and it was not going to add to that burden without reimbursement.

Secretary Ickes sought then to offset the Atlanta ultimatum by tendering funds, taxpayer's money, to the city of Atlanta equal to the amount he thought the city would receive in taxes. Again, Mr. McCarl stepped in. He said that since the property was owned by the federal government it was not subject to taxes and therefore a payment to the city of Atlanta out of federal funds constituted a gratuity. In other words, it was an illegal proposition.

The comptroller general's ruling was so definite and positive that those who have been boosting and boasting about low cost housing projects have been stunned. Frankly, they do not know which way to turn. Thus far, they have not discovered a ray of light to lead them. The housing projects are held in abeyance.

Enter Taxation

The housing project situation brings to the fore a condition which apparently had not been generally recognized. It relates, of course, to the general subject of taxation but it has a bearing upon many policies now operative and which, it is fair to say, have been described by President Roosevelt as experimental. Since they are experimental, it seems to me they ought to be examined from this taxation phase.

One can understand readily the base of the objection. There is hardly a city or town or even any other kind of taxing district in the United States where the tax rates are not at the very peak which the people can carry. That was shown most vividly a year ago when Congress thought it necessary to enact legislation permitting municipalities the privilege of declaring themselves virtually bankrupts and according them the right of compromising with their bondholders under a decree of a United States court. So, when we think of taking away taxable property in any city and making it non-taxable by conversion from private to federal government ownership, we see how it adds a further burden of taxes to the remaining privately owned property. That is the reason why many municipalities are fearful of government ownership of railroads, for example, since the railroads are heavy taxpayers in every community they serve. Laying aside the question of merit or lack of merit in the proposition of government ownership of railroads, no municipality can afford to overlook the loss of tax receipts that would follow government acquisition of those carrier properties. They pay real estate taxes in the United States annually of more than three hundred million dollars. Of course it is distributed in thousands of places but whatever the amount may be in your community or any other, it represents a tax source which the local government can ill afford to lose.

It is the same, although to a lesser degree, with respect to the housing project. In this statement I mean only as to the local tax phase. It has, however, another very important tax angle. Property, or the income from property, everywhere is subjected to three tax assessments. First, the county or city in which the property is located takes a tax toll; second, the state gets a share, and thirdly, the federal government either by income or some other tax gets its hand into the pocket of a property owner.

In the case of the low cost housing project, it was necessary to calculate the rental rate on a base so low that it would be impossible for the total receipts to pay off the government investment. This had to be done if the low cost housing was to be supplied at a rate the poorer classes could pay. It is seen, therefore, that there was a deficit staring the project in the face. To meet this deficit certain federal funds were to be set aside regularly which, coupled with the receipts from the tenants, would serve to amortize the original cost. From the standpoint of liquidating the cost of the building, this is fine but it does not impress one as being so wholesome when it is shown that the government's contribution comes out of the general fund of the Treasury which in turn comes out of the general taxpayers of the nation.

And so it is with a great many other of the experiments where such programs place government-owned agencies or industries in competition with citizens. Take the Tennessee Valley hydro-electric project for another example. The federal government has placed more than $131,000,000 in that venture. The present Tennessee Valley Corporation has taken over these properties at about one-third of this amount—a net loss to the government. But that is not all. The vast project that has been developed in the Tennessee valley and through the adjoining counties and cities is not subject to state taxation nor do the cities that are being served by Tennessee river electricity get any taxes from this source. It may be sound in the theory but I am fearful that the inbred opposition to federal government encroachment on local affairs sooner or later will cause a new explosion. It will come from the original feeling that state's rights ought to be superior to federal rights except where states have delegated that authority to the federal government in the national Constitution.

Always the Goat

Earlier in this discussion I mentioned the ruling by Comptroller General McCarl who acted, of course, as the head of the general accounting office. This agency was created with a very definite purpose in mind. Congress wanted some independent group or authority to watch all federal expenditures to make certain that they were made in accordance with law. A good many years ago when this job was done by the comptroller of the treasury, it was not infrequent that an adverse ruling by the comptroller put the comptroller in a tough spot.

Mr. McCarl is not popular. Privately and publicly, he has been criticized, sometimes in language hardly printable. These complaints always have come from someone whose idea of spending money was found by Mr. McCarl not to be in accordance with the law. Always, he was the goat.

He has been the goat much more under the New Deal than ever before. Every time he kicks over a New Deal plan, the sponsors of that plan brand him as a Tory or a Reactionary or as being just plain dumb. He has engaged in controversy with none of them. He has contended that his decisions were rendered in accordance with the law which he was directed by congress to construe. But it is true of all humans. When a pet plan is destroyed, one tries to find somebody upon whom the blame can be pinned

An Observation

I believe it is no wrong observation, that persons of genius, and those who are most capable of Art, are always most fond of Nature; and as such are chiefly sensible, that all Art consists in the imitation of Nature. On the contrary, people of the common level of understanding are principally delighted with the little niceties and fantastical operations of Art, and constantly think that finest which is least natural.—Pope.

Bright Students

Westminster college freshmen at New Wilmington, Pa., made these answers to a Bible test:

The epistles were wives of the apostles.

"Revolutions" is the last chapter in the Bible.

Larazus is a city in Palestine.

HUNTING WALRUS IN THE ARCTIC A COMMUNAL AFFAIR

The Alaskan method of hunting walrus in the Arctic is extremely communal. Some of the men in kayaks—the skin boats just large enough for one occupant—take after the big beast and hurl their harpoons into it. The harpoon is in reality a spear with a loose point to which is attached a line ending in a bladder, to keep the walrus afloat after it is dead. Also attached to the line is a kind of drift anchor made of hide stretched across a square wooden frame, which prevents the walrus from traveling too far.

After the harpoon point is secured in the animal's skin, the killing must be done with spears which penetrate the lungs and intestines. This takes time, skill and bravery, as the natives cannot hurl the heavy spears from a great distance, and if the spear sticks in the walrus without killing it, the hunter has to row close enough to the prey to get his spear again, which is very dangerous.

It is always great fun to haul a walrus to shore and cut it up. Every man gets his share, and he knows from long precedent exactly what portion is his. The man who thrusts the first harpoon into the animal is the owner and receives the credit. For this he takes the head, the heart, the left flipper and the guts. Number two takes the right forepart; number three the left rear portion, and so on. I was lucky the first time and secured a forepart because I had killed the animal after some one else had harpooned it.—Peter Freuchen in Cosmopolitan.

Baudette and Spooner were nearly wiped out by forest fires. Many other northern Minnesota towns were in danger from fires which covered a wide range.

Governor Eberhart was scheduled to address the voters of St. Hilaire on Monday, Oct. 31st.

Miss Bernice, daughter of T. H. Jackson, returned home from the forest fire area near Pitt. She had just commenced teaching a term of school when fire destroyed the school house.

At general election held that week, county division carried by a majority of 72 votes. Thief River Falls voted solidly in favor of division, and Red Lake Falls solidly in opposition.

Misses Amanda and Helga Kalland left for Rainy River and Baudette to spend the winter.

Fire at Red Lake Falls destroyed the Fruend confectionery and the Mrs. Zaiser millinery stores.

Rev. S. Palm was recuperating at a Crookston hospital following an operation.

C. H. Remington and family moved to Crookston where they had bought a restaurant business.

Chas. Gustafson sold his farm in Rocksbury and a good share of his farming equipment to William Koop of Illinois. Mr. Gustafson planned to move to Thief River to engage in the farm machinery business.

A big crowd attended a county division meeting held here the previous Saturday evening at the Imperial hall. J. H. Hay and Attorney G. Halverson of Thief River Falls were the principal speakers.

S. J. Amble, of the Park Ridge Nursery, finished digging and shipping trees for that fall, and went out in North Dakota to attend to his fall deliveries.

W. A. Sorsoliel of Spring Grove, Sask., Can., was here visiting old friends and former neighbors, and attending district court at Red Lake Falls.

Chas. Julin, who was then employed in the saw mill at Crookston, returned to spend the winter at home.

Marius Miller, well known Black River farmer, died at his home six miles west of here, of typhoid fever.

H. M. Babcock, the druggist, went to Minneapolis to visit a short time with his family. Dr. Swanson was in charge of the drug store during his absence.

Oldus Winge suffered a compound fracture of a leg in a runaway accident in the village. His foot was caught in the buggy wheel and he was dragged from the vehicle.

Miss Kate Whaley, formerly of this village, was united in marriage to Richard Rackny at Bemidji, Nov. 2nd. They were to reside at Nymore.

A. A. Reed was elected manager of the Farmers Elevator to succeed H. C. Hanson.

Governor Eberhart spoke to a gathering of local people at the Imperial Hall here.

W. E. McGregor, formerly principal of the local school, was appointed that week as private secretary to E. A. Jaggard, one of the associate justices of the state supreme court.

S. J. Amble, proprietor of the Park Ridge Nursery, returned from western Dakota where he had been making fall delivery of trees.

"GETS RELIGION," HOPES TO PAY OFF COAL BILLS

Red Wing.—Practically all fuel dealers in Red Wing have been the recipients of letters from a former resident who appears to be religiously inclined. In each instance the man asks forgiveness for past errors in the way of neglecting to pay bills and adds that "if ever possible, I will pay you." The letters were accompanied by printed religious tracts. At first dealers thought it was just the actions of one mentally unbalanced, but checkup of books revealed that in each instance the man in question was on the books for fuel delivered in past years and never paid for. In each instance the accounts have been marked off as "NG."

$7,000 Daily Income From State-Owned Iron Mines

An average daily income to the permanent trust funds of the state of more than $7,000 was made possible during the months of July, August and September through the payment of royalties by operators of state-owned iron mines, F. A. Wildes, director of the division of lands and minerals, reported. A total of 2,500,796 tons of iron ore was mined during the quarter with a royalty payment amounting to $644,123.31. Twenty-five per cent of the total quarterly income went to the university fund and the balance to the school and swamp land funds, Mr. Wildes said.

MEANEST MAN TAKES FOOD FOR CHARITY

Moorhead. — The "Worlds meanest man" has visited in Moorhead. In St. Johns Episcopal church, members of the guild had gathered together fruits, vegetables and other delicacies worth about $60 in their annual Harvest Home festival. Each year the food is given to Miss Marie Jorgenson, school nurse, for distribution to the poor. Last week Dean S. J. Hedelund reported that someone had broken in the door at the south side of the church and cleaned out the entire collection.

MORE THAN EIGHTY AT CLUB BANQUET

More than eighty people were present last Thursday evening at the most enjoyable social event of this season, a banquet given by the Woman's Club at the local hall. Two long rows of nicely decorated tables, full length of the hall, were needed to furnish room for the large gathering. In absence of Elroy Johnson, who was to act as toastmaster, M. H. Jackson officiated in that capacity and made a good job of it. Musical selections entertained the guests during course of the dinner, and later a number of those present were called upon for remarks to which all responded. Following the dinner, the guests were divided into seven groups each of which were asked to give an impromptu entertainment. This feature resulted in much hilarity, and was well received. During later part of the evening, dancing was indulged in. Among the out- of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Kundert of Red Lake Falls, Mrs. Theo. Skatrud of Aneta, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Reiersgord of Fosston, and Mr. and Mrs. Marchand of Aneta, N. D.

CLEM BRUNELLE IS DEAD

Clement Brunelle, well known and popular businessman at Red Lake Falls, died early Sunday morning at the U. S. Veterans hospital at Minneapolis. He had been ill about a year from Brights disease, and had gradually failed during that time. He was 48 years of age at time of his death. An accomplished musician, Mr. Brunelle was a frequent visitor in St. Hilaire during mill days to furnish music for different occasions, and will be recalled by many who resided here during that time.

Funeral services were conducted Tuesday morning from St. Mary's Catholic church at Red Lake Falls.

RITES HELD FOR ED. T. GESTIE

Word was received this week of the death of Er. T. Gestie, a former resident of this village, which occured Thursday at 5:30 P. M., at his home at Fargo. Death was caused by a sudden heart attack, and was unexpected as he had shown much improvement since suffering a stroke some over two years ago.

While a very young man, Mr. Gestie came to St. Hilaire to clerk at the old Rapp & Post store. He was united in marriage to Lizzie Dainard of this place and they resided here for three years or more following their marriage. For more than 25 years he represented a wholesale grocery firm at Fargo as travelling salesman, and visited St. Hilaire twice a month during that time. He was very well known here and had a large number of friends who will be grieved to learn of his death. He was 62 years of age.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. E. T. Gestie, a son, Emory of Fargo, a daughter, Bernice of Minneapolis, and by two sisters, Mrs. Carl Johnson of this village, and Mrs. M. Rose at Fosston. Funeral services were held Saturday at Fargo. Sympathy of all old friends here is extended to the bereaved family and other relatives.

Peters-Hallstrom

A wedding of interest to people here occurred Sunday, Nov. 3 when Miss Mandie Peters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Peters of Viking, became the bride of Martin Hallstrom of St. Hilaire. Following the ceremony, a dinner was given in honor of the newlyweds at home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Hallstrom will make their home at Thief River Falls for the present winter. Friends here join in wishing them lifelong happiness.

10,000,000 Persons Now Being Polled on New Deal

Ballots to Northwestern Minnesota in a new Literary Digest poll of 10,000,000 persons on the present popularity of the New Deal were distributed this week, according to advice from the magazine's publishers The ballot asks a yes or no answer to the question: "Do you NOW approve the acts and policies of the Roosevelt "New Deal' to date?" A similar poll to the same 10 million persons was held in 1934. Returns showed 61.15 per cent for the New Deal and 35.85 per cent against it.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bjerk returned this week to Fargo after spending about ten days here with their parents. Mr. Bjerk has a good position with the Bell Telephone system which work takes him to all parts of North Dakota and nearby states.

Another snow fell here last Friday, and more has fallen at different times since then. Snow removal equipment of the state highway department was kept busy during last week-end opening the trunk roads which were quite badly drifted in places.

Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Burkee motored up Sunday from Moorhead and spent the day with relatives. They were accompanied here by Valarie Olsen who went Friday to Moorhead to visit them. On return trip, they were accompanied by his mother, Mrs. B. E. Burkee, who will visit for a time at Moorhead and later will go to Hopkins to spend the winter months with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Martz.

ATTEND STOCK SHOW

Eight Pennington County 4-H Club members, five of them from St. Hilaire, left Sunday morning to attend the Junior Livestock Show at St. Paul. The youngsters won their trips by winning highest places at the county Achievement Day at Thief River Falls, Oct. 12. E. B. Norum, assistant county agent, Einar Jensen of Goodridge and Wm. Yonke of St. Hilaire went down with the group. The livestock exhibits were taken down Sunday afternoon by truck. The exhibitors from here are Gerald, Leonard and Willard Yonke, Stanley Bothman and John Norman.

MRS. JOHN HEDLUND DIED LAST FRIDAY

Mrs. John Hedlund, a resident of this community for forty-five years, died Friday morning at her home in River Falls township, after a short illness, of pneumonia. Mrs. Hedlund, nee Augusta Larson, was born Feb. 10, 1857 in Skaraborgs Lan, Vastergottland, Sweden and was 78 years, 8 months and 28 days of age at the time of her death.

Her early years were spent in Sweden, and she came to the United States in 1880 to reside at Chicago. After nine years of residence in that city she came to River Falls community, southeast of this village, where she resided until her death. She was united in marriage to John Hedlund of River Falls on April 11, 1891.

To mourn the departure of a kind and devoted wife and mother, she leaves her husband, three daughters and one son. The children are Minnie, Nancy and Oscar, who reside at home, and Mrs. C. O. Johnson of Moose Lake, Minn. She also is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Anna Louise Swanson of Chicago, and Mrs. Carl Carlson of Sweden. One daughter died in infancy.

A large number of neighbors and friends from thruout the community were present at the funeral service which was held Tuesday afternoon at the local Evangelical Mission church with Rev. Geo. Peterson officiating. The arrangements were in charge of W. O. Hunt of Red Lake Falls. Interment was made in the family plot in the cemetery east of the village.

Sympathy of many friends in this section is extended to Mr. Hedlund and family in their time of sorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Nelson were here last week from Fargo for a visit with relatives. Mr. Nelson also attended to business matters at Thief River Falls. Upon returning home, they were accompanied by Mrs. Nelson's mother, Mrs. Mary Sherva, who will spend the winter months at Fargo.

RED CROSS MEETING WAS HELD TUESDAY

A meeting of the Red Cross was held Tuesday afternoon at the farm home of Mrs. A. V. Jacobson west of the village. At this meeting Mrs. R. Larson was named president, Mrs. V. Brink vice president, Mrs. L. E. Beebe, secretary, and Mrs. M. H. Jackson, treasurer. The Red Cross is appreciative, and expresses thanks to all donors of clothing received up to this time. The clothing will be sorted, repaired, and given to needy people. The Red Cross will be pleased to receive other donations of clothing, etc. There will, apparently, be need and place for considerable such material during the present winter. In fact, some children in nearby communities may not be able to attend school unless helped by the Red Cross in matter of clothing and shoes.

OFFICERS CHANGED IN SALVATION ARMY

Capt. and Mrs. J. L. Emmans formerly of Brookings, S. D., have been appointed to command of the Thief River Falls Corps of the Salvation Army and are now in charge. Capt. John Berling, who for the past four years, up to Aug. 4, 1935, had been in charge at Thief River Falls, is no longer in the Salvation Army service. He has become affiliated with another organization known as the Good Samaritan Army and is now soliciting funds for that organization thruout the state. Mr. Berling has in his employ two women, well known as Salvation Army workers, who were in his employ while he was in charge at Thief River Falls.

When you are asked to give to the Salvation Army, be sure you are giving to that organization before making your donation. All accredited Salvation Army collectors or solicitors carry credentials; if in doubt, ask to see them:—Contributed.

WINS DAMAGE VERDICT

The state supreme court this week affirmed a jury verdict for $850 to the father of a child which died after taking contaminated mineral oil purchased at the S. S. Daniels drug store at Crookston.

A. Berry of Polk county, father of the child, sued the drug store for $7,500 following the death of the child. Evidence indicated the oil contained formaldehyde which caused the baby's death, and the high court held seller of the oil responsible.

Eavesdropping on the "Monticello Party Line"

The Monticello Party Line is an unusual new radio program, recently begun on a series of middle-western and southern stations. It is unique in that all of the action takes place over the party line—and the listener is simply "eavesdropping" on the fun, the daily activities, the occasional troubles that keep the people of Monticello busy on the line.

The setting of the program is a real community, Monticello, Illinois—the home town of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, sponsor of the show.—Adv.

Didn't Get Around Much

In the course of an argument, a Canadian informed an Englishman that the inhabitants of the Old Country were too reserved. "Oh, nonsense," replied the Englishman. "Why, years ago, when I was in the Cambridge 'eight,' I knew all the other fellows quite well . . . that is, all excepting one, and he was away up in the bow."—Boston Evening Transcript.

Greeks Recall George to the Throne

GEORGE of Greece is once more king. The plebiscite resulted in his recall by a huge majority, and before long the monarch will be back on the throne he abdicated 12 years ago. The vote in favor of the restoration was almost unanimous, even in Crete, the birthplace of the republican leader Venizelos who is now in exile and under sentence of death.

King George II

As the results of the balloting came in, Premier George Kondylis appeared on a balcony of a government building and announced: "As of tomorrow, King George II will be king of the Hellenes. There will be no political parties. They have been broken up by the people themselves and a new epoch of reconstruction will start.

"It's more glorious than I'd imagined. The expression of popular will to favor restoration was foreseen but results exceeded all expectations."

The cabinet met to swear a new oath of allegiance to the exiled monarch. All armed forces were called to take a similar oath.

A delegation sailed aboard a Greek warship to present the official request for King George to return. Officials said they expected King George, who was in London, to come back within two weeks.

China Adopts Managed Paper Currency

CHINA has suddenly abandoned the metallic silver currency standard, adopted a managed paper currency and otherwise reformed its monetary system. The four-point program was announced in Shanghai by Finance Minister H. H. Kung just after Vice President Garner and his party of congressmen had left the city for Manila.

The American party was entertained by high Chinese officials, including Kung. But, despite much oratory of the bonds across the sea character, no hint was given of China's contemplated action. However, all English language newspapers in Shanghai carried long interviews with Senator William H. King of Utah and Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, both of whom practically told China that it "was not any of her business what America did about silver," and predicted the continuance of United States purchases until the price of silver has reached $1.29 an ounce.

The new Chinese program provides for: 1. Nationalization of silver. 2. Restriction of bank note issues to three government owned banks. 3. Stabilization of the Chinese dollar at the present level. 4. Legalization of bank notes for payment of all debts which provide for payment in silver.

Reds Are Not Blamed for Attack on Premier Wang

BELIEF of the Chinese police that the attempt to assassinate Premier Wang Ching-wei was part of a communist plot was decried by the foreign office at Nanking.

The theory was widely held, however, that the gunman, Sun Feng-min, who died of bullet wounds inflicted by the premier's bodyguard, acted because of his anti-Japanese feelings. The premier whose condition was announced as "satisfactory," was considered friendly toward Japan.

At Peiping, the political council ordered its subordinate agencies in North China to put down any group which endangers friendly Sino-Japanese relations. The council is controlled by generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, military leader of the Nationalist government.

Germany Plans Extension Toward the East

GERMANY has no designs on western Europe, but she does intend to promote her expansion in the Baltic states, and hopes later to divide the Ukraine with Poland. That is the substance of assertions made by Pertinax and Genevieve Tabouis, two of the leading political writers of the Paris press. They say Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, minister of finance, revealed these plans to Jean Tannery, president of the Bank of France, and Montagu Norman, president of the Bank of England, at a recent meeting of the Bank of International Settlement at Basel, Switzerland.

Schacht, the writers say, exhorted the two financiers to act with Germany "in the financial field" to end the Italo-Ethiopian conflict as soon as possible. He is reported to have warned them that sanctions against Italy would lead to "the economic dislocation of Europe, ruin the lira and ruin even the pound sterling."

Neutralization of Gibraltar May Be Demanded by Italy

WHEN the nations get together in London in December for the next naval conference it is not likely they will be able to agree on much in the way of limitation of naval armament. But there is a good prospect that Italy will there demand the neutralization of the straits of Gibraltar, which would be extremely distasteful and perhaps embarrassing to Great Britain. Diplomats are certain the British would refuse to make the concession. They say Mussolini's purpose is to force Britain to declare her intentions in the Mediterranean, where a large part of her war fleet is massed at the present time.

It was reported in Paris that the Duce would ask that the straits be put in the same status as the Suez canal, and would offer to scrap two 35,000 ton battleships now under construction as an evidence of his good faith. Britain hopes France will support her attitude concerning this demand and in return may agree to take a larger percentage of exports from French Morocco to strengthen France's position in that colony. French naval experts said that, while neutralization of the straits would guarantee free passage for France for all time, yet "it would be better to have a strong British hold on Gibraltar" in case France got in a war with Germany and was faced with the prospect of German submarines entering the Mediterrannean to ravage her commerce and stop transport of troops from north African possessions.

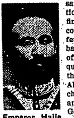
Sanctions Against Italy in Effect November 18

THE League of Nations set November 18 as the day on which the economic sanctions against Italy should be put into effect, and later decided that coal, iron and oil should be included in the embargo. The league appointed Premier Laval of France and Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign minister, to carry on peace negotiations with Italy. Sir Samuel still insisted any peace must be within the framework of the League.

The Italian armies on the northern front pushed further into Ethiopia, following the tanks and with bombing planes active overhead, and one column entered the city of Hauzien on the way to Makale. The invaders met with no resistance of consequence. The government at Addis Ababa announced that Italian planes had killed 30 women, 15 children and 100 cows with bombs and machine gun fire at Gorahel.

Emperor Haile Selassie Celebrates Anniversary

WHILE the invading Italians were pushing further and further into his realm, Emperor Haile Selassie I of Ethiopia celebrated the fifth anniversary of his coronation, and he did it in fine style, too. Escorted by a throng of feudal chiefs in barbaric atire, the king of kings and his queen passed through the streets of Addis Ababa amid wildly cheering thousands, and gave thanks to God in St. George's cathedral. Afterward, seated on his ivory and teakwood throne in the palace he received the felicitations of the chieftains and the diplomatic corps. In the afternoon Haile gave the soldiers a great feast of raw meat, and in the evening he entertained the diplomats and nobles at a state banquet with golden service and rare wines.



Emperor Haile Selassie

The emperor holds that the big oil concession negotiated for American interests by F. M. Rickett, the English promoter, still holds good although the Americans relinquished it at the suggestion of Secretary Hull. "This concession," said Haile, "is an integral part of our national economic program. We purposely granted it to a neutrol country like the United States in order to avoid political complications and international jealousies. It is unfortunate that war must delay its fullfilment. Through the benefits accruing to this concession we hope to raise the social level of people and provide them with honorable remunerative employment.

"I am sure that when our country is again at peace, and the circumstances are propitious, all the terms of the enterprise will be carried out by the original concessionaires, who never canceled the concession, but merely withdrew temporarily at the suggestion of the State department for the worthy motive of promoting international peace."

Milwaukee "Fiend" Killed by His Own Bomb

MILWAUKEE, which had been terrorized for eight days by a succession of mysterious dynamitings, was relieved when the terrorist, Hugh Frank Rutkowski, was blown up by his own bomb as he was preparing for another outrage. Unfortunately a little girl was killed by the same blast. The bomber, described by the chief of police as "an extreme low type of individual with a warped, criminal mind," had at least one accomplice who may also have been blown to pieces by the explosion.

St. James—Watonwan county has met the goal of the works progress administration by having every available man needing relief at work on WPA projects. There are 33 men on the weed eradication crew and 18 on a sidewalk project. All other employables are in private employment.

Stillwater—Two new state penal institutions are needed in Minnesota, it was asserted by Mrs. Blanche La Du, member of the state board of control. The board will ask the next legislature to authorize the institutions. she said. One would be a receiving prison, located near the Twin Cities, where prisoners would be committed for study before being assigned permanently. The other would be an intermediary reformatory.

Minneapolis—Enrollment in the Civil Conservation Corps of veterans transient in Washington, D. C., expired Nov. 1 and no extension will be authorized, according to word received from General Frank T. Hines, veterans administrator at the capital. Veterans are advised not to proceed to Washington under any circumstances, as there is no opportunity for either employment or relief in that city. All Minnesota enrollment in the C.C.C. has been stopped for the present period.

St Paul—Minnesota hunters will have a second open season on pheasants in 51 counties of the state for a 10-day period starting Nov. 9 as originally planned, E. V. Willard, state conservation commissioner, announced. Erling Swenson, retiring game and fish director, recommended the season be held after conducting a poll of district game warden chiefs. During the October open season in 74 of the 87 counties the birds eluded hunters more successfully than in several years past owing to the heavy coverage provided by excessive vegetation.

St. Paul—In the St. Paul district of the Farm Credit Administration which includes Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and North Dakota, emergency appeals of farmers to be saved from foreclosure have dropped to 2.4 appeals per 1,000 farms for the year ending September 30, compared with 10 appeals per 1,000 farms for the previous year. Farm Credit sources said that for the whole country the number of such appeals has been 57,000 since Oct. 3, 1933, but that in the year ending September 30 there were only 11,139 compared with 46,073 for the year ending September 30, 1934. This decline, though in differing ratio, is said to be general throughout the country and is hailed as an indication favorable to agriculture.

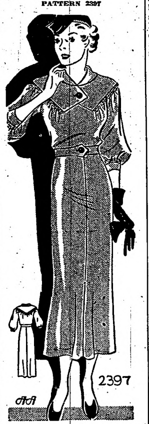
St. Paul—On December 31, 1930, the state auditor of Minnesota closed his books on a cash balance of $3,000,000 and a bonded indebtedness of $88,000,000. When he scanned his accounts the other day, the cash balance had vanished. In its place was a deficit of $6,350,000. The bonded indebtedness had grown to $123,000,000. Thus, where the net figures on what the state actually owed in 1930 was $85,000,000 this latest figure has jumped to nearly $130,000,000. This means that within a five-year period Minnesota has plunged itself $55,000,00 in debt in addition to spending more than $100,000,000 collected through taxes and fees. The actual total of its expenditures during these five years is quite close to $160,000,000.

Brown's Valley — All surveyor's stakes for the proposed dam at the north end of Lake Traverse were destroyed in the prairie fire which burned over 36 square miles of grassland near Wheaton. The fire is still smouldering in peat bogs.

Wadena—Harry Thomas displayed a lemon grown on his farm near here which weighed one pound, two ounces, and produced a glass and a half of juice. He claimed it was proof California has nothing on Minnesota when it comes to lemon growing.

Your Best Flare Forward in Simple, All-Occasion Frock

PATTERN 2397



There's many a "flare" in the fashion sky this fall, and no smart skirt will dare sally forth without at least one. This charming all-occasion frock has flares both back and front, thus assuring its wearer plenty of style interest. The drop-shoulder yoke points twice in front, once in back, to the bodice and puffed sleeves which gather round it. Utterly charming, the tiny round collar which tops the yoke's diagonal closing, and don't you love the young way the sleeves puff about the elbow? There are novelty crepes with plenty of surface interest from which to choose—or if you're out to be very practical, select a sheer wool.

Pattern 2397 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 takes 3¾ yards 39 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Farmer Makes Home of Tomb, Fears Only Rats

Back in 1880, Linus Smith designed and built a mausoleum near Medina, Ohio, to hold the bodies of his entire family. But only the remains of Smith's father, mother and younger brother ever were placed in this tomb. Soon after the body of the younger Smith was placed in the vault, the door at the entrance was broken down and the body stolen. An unsigned note offered return of it for $200. A neighbor youth was suspected, confessed the ghoulish act and returned the body. This occurrence turned Linus Smith against mausoleums and he transferred all three bodies to a cemetery. The vault, empty for years, now is occupied by Charles Ritter, bachelor farmer, who finds it quite a desirable place in which to live, cool in summer and warm in winter.

A chimney was built and a stove installed which Ritter uses for cooking and what heat he needs in winter. Ritter says he doesn't fear ghosts nearly as much as rats that like to share his strange home with him.—Capper's Weekly.

Thrice the Slaves in World as Century Ago

The world may be improving in some ways but in regards to human bondage it is growing steadily worse, according to figures gathered by Lady Simon, wife of Britain's foreign minister. There are three times as many slaves in the world today she says, as there was 100 years ago (not counting those in the United States).

Slave trading is carried on openly in most of the larger cities of Arabia and a slave market adjoins the Great Mosque of Mecca. Oddly enough, Liberia, which at one time was a refuge for escaped and liberated slaves of the United States, has nearly 800,000 slaves numbered among its 2,500,000 population. Slavery still exists in many parts of Ethiopia, many parts of China and northern Africa.

Keen Imagination Sure Check on Unkind Acts

A keen imagination is the surest check upon all unkind conduct. Happily, it is the very rare exception when anyone intends to be unkind. Most persons, however culpable, would indignantly deny the imputation. It is usually because they fail to realize the suffering they inflict; they are deficient in that power which depicts the pain of another to their own sensibilities.

There are many hearts now hard and callous that might be rendered tender and pitiful could their imaginative faculty be so developed as to make them conscious of the distress they carelessly produce.

"ART OF BORING" IN SEVEN VOLUMES; WE DON'T NEED IT

"The Art of Boring" in seven volumes. Bertrand Russell promises to write it.

To whet our appetites he mentioned the scholarly bore, the funny bore, the story telling or reminiscing bore, etc., etc., etc.

We really don't need seven volumes to tell us how to bore people, nor even one. For all the bores you can possibly think of come easily under one head. If you want to emulate them you need do but one thing—talk about what interests you rather than stop to think what will interest the person you are talking to.

The woman who talks about her children does that.

The man who talks about himself does that. Sometimes its about his success, how he did thus and so, sometimes its about how a stupid world kept him from being successful or happy.

The wise-cracking bore and the reminiscing bore and the superior, pedantic bore, they are all doing that—talking about what interests them only.

That's their way of enjoying people. Then don't they care, you may ask, about whether people enjoy them? Of course they care. There isn't the most unmitigated bore alive who if he could help it would enjoy himself at the cost of boring people. The point is they just don't stop to consider that side of it.

And come to think of it, the person who does not use others for an audience but who enjoys others by drawing them out, really gets so much more out of his contacts. If the others tried that way they would never go back to boring people.

Busy Then as Now

Each photograph in the senior album for Harvard's class of 1904 is accompanied by a sketch of the subject's undergraduate activities. Under one picture, however, there is only the subject's name. The name is Franklin D. Roosevelt. It was explained that the sketches customarily are supplied by students themselves, and that the man who is now President of the United States apparently was too busy to write his.

I'M SOLD

It always works

Just do what hospitals do, and the doctors insist on. Use a good liquid laxative, and aid Nature to restore clocklike regularity without strain or ill effect.

A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the real secret of relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has become. It gives the right kind of help, and right amount of help. Taking a little less each time, gives the bowels a chance to act of their own accord, until they are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit. The action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve any sluggishness or bilious condition due to constipation without upset.

In Huddle on Budget

Washington.—About this time every fall, the President calls the director of the budget to the White House and they go into a huddle about the finances of the government, about the needs for money of the various governmental agencies who must pay their employees and the other expenses to which they are put and in addition they discuss general questions of policy. It is, as I said, an annual affair that presages a new tempo in the movement of activities in Washington because it occurs some weeks in advance of the reconvening of congress. Congress, under the Constitution, must appropriate the money which is spent by all branches of government.

Well, the annual huddle has just been held by President Roosevelt and Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the bureau of the budget, and Mr. Bell has gone back to his office in the treasury with instructions to begin formulation of budget estimates for submission to congress.

Of course, budget making goes on throughout the year. The huge staff of experts and accountants who work under Mr. Bell's direction are busy the year 'round examining the proposed requirements of the various agencies and arriving at conclusions as to what their needs reasonably should be. The White House conference, therefore, represents the second step because those were the figures that formed the basis of the discussion between the President and his budget director.

* * *

Problems to Solve

In drafting the budget for submission to the next session of congress, the administration is confronted with a variety of problems, not the least of which is the political phase. It is to be remembered that the budget now under consideration covers money that will be appropriated for use after July 1, 1936, and the succeeding 12 month period. Therefore, half of the Presidential campaign next year, indeed, the heated part of that campaign, will take place after governmental agencies have begun to use the new appropriations. It is easy to see, therefore, that politics can hardly be kept out of the forthcoming budget in some form or other even though every President says politics does not influence budget making. Nevertheless, New Deal spending and future taxation constitute questions which the President cannot overlook and is not overlooking because those things are vital to every man, woman and child in the nation.

It seems to be pretty well settled now that the Republicans are going to make spending and taxation their major ammunition against Mr. Roosevelt and his New Deal. In fact, it seems reasonably sure that the Republican slogan will be "Throw the Spendthrifts Out." That being the case, Mr. Roosevelt obviously must have in the back of his head considerable concern over the current budget making.

Knowing "Danny" Bell as I have known him for nearly 20 years, during which time he has grown up in the treasury service, I think it ought to be said in his favor that politics is farthest from his thoughts. He is as nearly a human figuring machine as any man I have known in my Washington career except possibly the man under whom he was trained, namely, the late Robert Hand. His chief concern is and always has been a determination to have accurate statistics, accurate conclusions and recommendations based as nearly as may be upon sound judgment.

But in saying these things about Mr. Bell I am not saying that budgetary plans are not subject to manipulation. It has been true in previous administrations and it is true in this one. The vast totals of figures with their minima of explanations are never easy to understand. This is one way of saying that they can be made to conceal a great deal more than they reveal.

* * *

Spending, Taxation

I mentioned the issues of spending and taxation. The American Liberty League which has consistently warned about the possibility of future heavy taxation has not been silent since the President some weeks ago made public a pre-budgetary summation. The League insists that while present tax rates soon will provide enough money to meet what the President terms as "ordinary" expenditures of the government, the rates are insufficient to meet the spending which Mr. Roosevelt calls extraordinary in that it covers relief. Further, the League, in a statement the other day, asserted its belief that the present tax level was high enough to meet "legitimate relief if present unsound spending policies are abandoned." But it is emphasized by the league that even "if unsound spending policies are abandoned," the present tax levels are insufficient to make possible any appreciable retirement of the gigantic debt that has been built up through the New Deal relief program.

So it is easy to see that a head-on collision between two schools of thought is inevitable. Mr. Roosevelt and his brain trusters have contended and will continue to contend that federal spending in the volume that has taken place was the only means by which the nation could be carried over this period of depression. On the other hand there will be the vicious attacks of Republican campaigners, the shots by such men as Lewis Douglas, former director of the bureau of the budget, who broke with Mr. Roosevelt over "reckless spending," and all of those groups of which the Liberty League is typical. These have plenty of campaign material, and you can make sure that they will use it.

My experience as an observer of politics and government prompts me to say that there is nothing that strikes the heart of the average taxpayer quite so fundamentally as displays of waste with the accompaniment of forecasts of greater taxation. Thus, if the New Deal opposition goes ahead on the course that appears to be charted for them—actually it is made to order for them—they can cause the administration many anxious moments. I say this, knowing full well, that the administration has much argument on its side and that it is equipped with the finest layout of machinery for influencing public opinion that any administration ever has had. It has at its command all of the machinery used in crop production control, the thousands of persons on the federal pay roll and the millions who believe Mr. Roosevelt is earnestly seeking to make this a better country in which to live. It is, therefore, no small task for the New Deal opposition if it is to succeed even in turning the New Deal strength in the house of representatives to anything near an even distribution of the seats.

New Deal Opposition

Apparently, New Deal opposition will be concentrated as much in the congressional districts as against the President himself. The reasons are simple. First, the senate is going to remain Democratic whether Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected or defeated. Only one-third of the 96 senators come up for re-election next year and the bulk of these are from normally Democratic states. Unless a cataclysm follows the Democratic party, the senate majority for the Democrats will continue to be ample.

Such is not the case in the house of representatives where the entire membership must seek election every two years. There are in the house membership probably as many as 75 Democrats who can be called pure political accidents. That is, they were elected from districts which are normally Republican during the landslide that swept Mr. Roosevelt into office. A considerable number of these naturally will be retired by the voters just as a considerable number of Republicans were retired after they had held house seats in the early 1920's by virtue of election in the Harding landslide. Consequently, changes may be expected in the house New Deal strength. In concentrating the fight in congressional districts, the New Deal opposition is battling for position. If the New Deal majority in the house can be whittled down, it will then become impossible for the President to drive through his program of legislation as he has done in the last three sessions. From the Republican standpoint, this would be important since it would place Mr. Roosevelt in much the same position that President Hoover found himself in the last half of his administration when he had an adverse congress on his hands. No political leader likes that situation.

When the New Deal opposition jumps onto the questions of spending and taxation, therefore, and when it goes back to the grass roots of congressional districts, it takes no stretch of the imagination to see that a real political fight lies ahead. Developments between now and the nominating conventions next June may change the general perspective.

Washington on Rights

While several of the federal courts, including the Supreme court of the United States, are considering questions revolving around President Roosevelt's program for development of Muscle Shoals in the Tennessee river as an electrical power project, government owned, a newly discovered letter written by President George Washington takes on unusual interest. It seems that even in 1791, there was argument about the development of Muscle Shoals. The letter, which was addressed to the attorney general of the United States at that time, called attention to the efforts being made by individuals to effect trades with Indians and suggested the necessity for federal laws that would afford some protection for the Indians in their dealings with the white men. It will be remembered, of course, that the Tennessee river valley in those days was populated by Indians but the problem that existed then exists today, namely, protection of the rights of the individual.

Sculptor Loses Fortune and Bemoans His Fate

A talented young sculptor was the last to arrive at the party. He seemed gloomy and dejected and the smile was missing from his usually cheerful countenance. As he seated himself beside the Woman she found it unnecessary to ask the cause for his dejection, for he immediately informed her ruefully, "I lost $2,500 today."

The Woman was surprised. Although he is a talented young man he has not yet reached the stage in his career where he can turn his talent into a means of livelihood. He has difficulty selling his work and the woman never would have suspected that he owned so much money. She said nothing and he continued, "I'm so mad at myself. It's all my own fault, too."

Her curiosity prompted her to put the question for which he was waiting. "What happened?" she asked.

He seemed glad to unburden his troubled soul. "I wanted to bet on the horse that came in first today and if I had, I'd have won $2,500. But I didn't have the $12 to put on him—darn it. I'm as mad as hops at myself—all that money lost."—New York Sun.

25 Years Ago

John W. Eastman, editor of the Thief River Falls Press, died at his home in that city after an illness of ten days. A delegation of people from here attended the funeral which was held that week.

Mrs. O. H. Peters, an old time resident of St. Hilaire, died Nov. 13 at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Leonard Holmes.

Carl Simonson returned to his work in a real estate office at Grand Forks after having spent a couple of weeks here with his parents and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Peck of Crookston, were guests at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Hooper.

A government order issued that week prohibited shipments of liquor into former Indian territory in northern Minnesota.

Official tabulation of votes cast during general election on the county division question showed division had won by a majority of 102 votes. Plans were already made for organization of the new county of Pennington.

T. R. Falls Production Credit Group Has Loans of $83,042.78 in Effect

The Thief River Falls Production Credit association had 253 outstanding loans aggregating $83,042.78 as of October 31, Robert J. Lund, manager, announced following completion of an audit of the association's books made last week by C. A. Fisk of the Production Credit corporation of St. Paul. The association, which engaged in business January 15, 1934, has made loans in Pennington, Red Lake, Eastern Marshall, Roseau, Lake of the Woods and Northern Beltrami county. The annual meeting will be held in this city Tuesday morning, January 21, Mr. Lund said.

"The Forgotten Man"

The expression "the Forgotten Man" was used by Byron. Earlier it was used in a poem called "The Common Lot." In 1883 William Graham Sumner, professor at Yale university, described the forgotten man.

TAX RATES LISTED FOR COMING YEAR BY COUNTY AUDITOR

Property owners of Thief River Falls will pay taxes next year on the basis of a 1935 total rate of 113.22 mills, compared to a 1934 rate of 111.2 mills, it is revealed in a compilation made during the past week in the office of County Auditor A. M. Senstad.

Of the increase of 2.02 mills, the increased state levy accounts for 1.62 mills, while the county rate is up .65 mill, the city rate is down .16 mill and the school district 18 rate remains the same on platted property, the rate on unplatted property in the district not yet having been fixed.

The total city rates for this year and last are made up as follows:

	1934	1935
State	11.95	13.57
County	30.65	31.3
City	29.10	28.85
School Dist. 18	39.5	39.5
	111.2	113.22

Total rates for 1935 for the townships and villages may be ascertained by adding the following local rates to the state, county and school district levies:

Goodridge, village, 62.2; St. Hilaire, 20; Bray, 4; Black River, 8.6; Cloverleaf, 6.4; Deer Park, 3.6; Goodridge, 14; Hickory, 12.6; Highlanding, 7.9; Kratka, 8.9; Mayfield, 17.1; Norden, 6.8; North, 5.2; Numedal, 4; Polk Center, 3.3; Reiner, 19; River Falls, 6.3; Rocksbury, 2.3; Sanders, 7; Silverton, 9.3; Smiley, 7.6; Star, 8.4; and Wyandotte, 7.4.

Annual Poultry Show Set for December 9-12

Prof. M. C. Herner of University of Manitoba to Serve as Judge

Preliminary arrangements got well under way early this week for the annual Pennington county poultry show which will be held at the Auditorium Monday to Thursday, December 9, 10, 11 and 12. The premium list is now in the hands of the printers and will be ready for distribution next week, Vernon Copp, secretary, announced.

To officiate as judge the association has secured the services of Professor M. C. Herner, head of the poultry husbandry department at the University of Manitoba in Winnipeg and a widely known authority. Judging will be completed the second and third days of the show. It was stated that this year's event will stress utility and market classes of turkeys as well as 4-H club exhibits. Bernhard Ranum will serve as superintendent of the show.

Officers of the poultry association include C. H. Toomey, president; H. C. Woolson, vice president; Mr. Copp, secretary; Henry Oen, treasurer; and R. M. Douglass, W. H. Quist, C. C. Brahs, B. O. Norby, Mr. Ranum and William Yonke, St. Hilaire, directors.

SCRAP IRON IN STATE SHIPPED TO JAPANESE

Big Fork.—Most of the scrap iron junk dealers buy at random in Big Fork goes to Japan, according to a buyer from Cloquet who was in Big Fork recently. In Japan it goes to the munitions factory and is transformed into guns, bayonets, hand grenades, and all other paraphernalia for killing,—possibly to be used some day in the killing of some Big Fork youth! Two heavy truck loads of scrap iron were taken out of Big Fork that day, with eighty tons delivered to dealers. The stuff ranged from stove bolts to automobile axles, which seems to be the chief articles wanted. Scrap copper is in greatest demand and brings the best price from the junk men. Italy is just now the heaviest foreign buyer. The copper junk bought throughout the state is assembled for shipment at eastern ports while the scrap iron designed for Japan goes to San Francisco where shiploads go out every week.

MRS. H. J. PETERSON DIES AT CROOKSTON

Mrs. Hans J. Peterson, one of the pioneers of Sanders, and for thirty-eight years a resident of that township, died Sunday at her home at Crookston after a short illness, at the age of 76 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson came from Sweden to this country in 1882 and settled on a homestead in Sanders which was their home until they retired from farming in 1920 and moved to Crookston to reside near their children. Mr. Peterson proceded his wife in death on May 13, 1934. To mourn the death of a kind and loving mother, Mrs. Peterson leaves a family of nine children who are: Mrs. Martin Rude, Mrs. Carl Eidsvik, Mrs. Palmer Hanson and Lydia Peterson, all of Crookston; Mrs. Frank Andrews of Waterloo, Iowa; Oscar, George, Gust and Arthur Peterson who all reside in this vicinity.

Funeral services were held this afternoon at Crookston, and interment took place in the family plot in Oakdale cemetery near that city. Sympathy of many friends in this locality is extended to the bereaved family.

D. LINNIHAN IS DEAD

Dan Linnihan, one of the old pioneers at Red Lake Falls, and very well known all thruout this section of the state, died Thursday night at his home at Red Lake Falls after an illness of about a year. Funeral services were held Saturday. Ray Linnihan, postmaster at Red Lake Falls, is a son of Mr. Linnihan.

MOVE ITASCA ELK

About twenty head of elk from Itasca State Park are being moved by the Division of Game and Fish to the newly formed Red Lake Game Preserve. Two motor truckloads of the animals passed thru here last week and were liberated east of Grygla. Elk have been practically extinct in that region since about 1900.

MOTHER'S WORRY SAVES BOY FROM MONOXIDE GAS

Minnesota Lake — Overcome by monoxide gas, Eldo Dagner was saved from death in his garage only because of the fact that his mother "worried" because he had not arrived home. Dagner, son of Mrs. William Dagner, near Minnesota Lake, had driven home about midnight from a party, running his car into the garage. His mother, in the house, thought she had heard him in the yard, and worrying about the lateness of his arrival finally got up to investigate. The motor of the car was still running in the garage, and in the closed building monoxide gas had taken its effect. In order to revive him, Mrs. Dagner dragged the boy out into the air and then summoned the doctor. Two hours passed before the physician was able to revive him completely. Had it not been for the mother's worrying and her discovery of the situation, the monoxide gas would have been fatal in another twenty to thirty minutes, the doctor stated.

30,000 Acres of Land Disposed of by State

The State of Minnesota, during the past fall months, held land sales in twenty odd counties of northern Minnesota. These sales were well attended, and approximately 30,000 acres of land were sold. At these sales the real estate speculator was conspicuously absent, according to F. A. Wildes, Director of the Division of Lands and Minerals. This indicates, Mr. Wildes said, that the people of northern Minnesota still have confidence in that portion of the state. Inquiries for state land come in frequently from the drouth stricken areas of the west and southwest.

WINS AT NATIONAL SHOW

Chester Hauge, 17 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hauge of Bemidji, and grandson of Mrs. R. L. Hauge of this village, won first prize for showmanship recently at the American Royal Livestock Show at Kansas City. He had plenty of competition as there were F. F. A. members present from every state in the Union as well as from Canada, Mexico and Porto Rico. Chester won a cash prize as well as a certificate for showmanship for his efforts. He is a member of the high school judging team at Bemidji, and ranks highest in his class.

ST. HILAIRE QUINT DOWNED BY FISHER

The St. Hilaire high school basketeers journeyed last Friday night to Fisher and took the short end of a close score in a five period game. Fisher had the edge during the first half, but in second period the locals clearly outplayed them, and tied the score. In the extra time played, the local boys seemed to let up a bit and lost the game.

Conestoga Wagon Drivers First to Keep to Right

Why do American drivers keep to the right instead of to the left as in England and some Continental countries? In the new Columbia Encyclopedia drivers of the famous Conestoga wagons are credited with originating the custom because they rode the left wheel horse. The wagons, often called "ships of inland commerce," carted freight over the Allegheny mountains before the railroads were built in 1850.

The Conestoga wagon originated in Pennsylvania before the Revolution, according to the encyclopedists. It was pulled by a six-horse team and was capable of carrying a five-ton load. The bottom of the wagon box was curved, rising at both ends so that in going up and down hills the goods would shift less easily and the end-gate be subject to less strain. The prairie-schooner was a modification of the Conestoga wagon.

CONSTIPATED 30 YEARS

"For thirty years I had chronic constipation. Sometimes I did not go for four or five days. I also had awful gas bloating, headaches and pain in the back. Adlerika helped right away. Now I eat sausage, bananas, pie, anything I want and never felt better. I sleep soundly all night and enjoy life." —Mrs. Mabel Schott.

If you are suffering from constipation, sleeplessness, sour stomach, and gas bloating, there is quick relief for you in Adlerika. Many report action in 30 minutes after taking just one dose. Adlerika gives complete action, cleaning your bowel tract where ordinary laxatives do not even reach.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika checks the growth of intestinal bacteria and colon bacilli."

Give your stomach and bowels a real cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

WASHINGTON DIGEST

National Topics Interpreted

BY WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D.C.

Washington.—Several times in these columns I have adverted to criticisms that have been made of the Constitution and have reported the nature of attempts to obtain amendment of that document which is as old as our nation itself. I have reported to you likewise how President Roosevelt, himself, had hinted, if he has not said frankly, that the Constitution ought to be amended so that some of the policies for which he and his New Deal stand could be made operative. I have called attention as well to an apparent assurance that there will be a political campaign battle next year on these questions.

Our Constitution

Now, because of developments within the past few weeks, I propose to discuss another phase of these attacks on the Constitution and their concealed purpose. Frankly, I cannot avoid the conclusion that many of the criticisms of our Constitution have as their main objective the clipping of wings of the Supreme court of the United States. I am convinced that many of the demands for amendment of the Constitution to permit broader latitude by congress are nothing more nor less than a disguised move to take away some of the independence which the court has and which, in my opinion, it ought always to possess. Further, I have no doubt that these "borings from within" represent the activities of those individuals of whom there are thousands who are not in sympathy with our form of government. So, if I am to serve my purpose as your observer in Washington, I would fall short of my duty were I not to say that in the election of the next congress lies the answer whether we will retain our Constitution and our traditions as a republic or whether we will lapse into some form of state socialism or of a proletarian government akin to that of Russia.

• • •

It was back in 1904 that the late Chief Justice Edward Douglas White—a former United States senator from the Democratic South and a former Confederate soldier—felt it necessary to make a public observation about the work of our highest legal tribunal. At that time there were certain attacks and criticisms being heard, none of a direct nature, to the general effect that the Supreme court followed the majority opinion of the nation's population. There were likewise veiled remarks that the Supreme court attempted to usurp power which was not its own. Strangely, present-day criticism and attacks have had much the same flavor. To those of that day, Chief Justice White said:

Supreme Court

"No instance is afforded from the foundation of the government where an act which was within a power conferred, was declared to be repugnant to the Constitution because it appeared to the judicial mind that the particular assertion of constitutional power was either unwise or unjust."

I have heard, and no doubt you have heard, assertions by unthinking people to the effect that since the court has held some New Deal laws unconstitutional, it was simply old-fashioned, outdated, or as Mr. Roosevelt said, its decisions were taking us back to the "horse and buggy days." Of course, anyone who has observed the Supreme court; anyone who has studied its precepts and examples; anyone who has considered the soundness of its logic and philosophy, cannot help reaching a conclusion that the Supreme court is not now and never has been an agency of government that is susceptible to the effects of rabble rousing or is influenced by suddenly developed waves of public opinion. It has consistently adhered to the principle of interpreting laws and administering justice without regard for the effect of its decisions upon the political plans or aspirations of individuals or groups.

I do not believe that a drive to limit the power of the Supreme court or use it in any other way than as the Constitution's drafters intended will be successful. Many people with whom I have come in contact, however, anticipate a drive of serious import. It may be that they wish to see it or it may be that they believe our Constitution is not sufficiently flexible and that we can hardly change the Constitution without changing the power of the Supreme court. However that may be, it does appear that the time has arrived for those who would be Americans and who would have America last as a Republic to be on their guard and to know before they vote for members of the house and senate whether those members are going to support and defend the Constitution, the Supreme Court and the things for which the Constitution and court stand in our national life. It is a non-partisan question; it is a non-partisan issue, and I think it is of as much importance as any question before the American people today.

All of this is highly important because of pending cases in the Supreme court. I need only recall to you that there are before the court for adjudication cases involving the validity of the Agriculture Adjustment act, the right of the federal government to control labor and employers as it has done in the Guffey Coal bill, the program of government in business as represented by the creation of the Tennessee valley electric layout and the sales of its product in competition with private industry, and four or five others of lesser consequence. I think it is generally agreed that the court will hold some of these legislative policies to be unconstitutional. Certainly, legal opinion is thoroughly divided and some of the lawyers must be right in their guesses as to the court's decrees. In that event, there will be disappointments. Those officials who have sponsored the various programs and projects that are now come into question will suffer because their pride will be hurt. The next step, a result that always obtains, the disappointed ones will attempt to find a goat on whom they can lay the blame. The goat undoubtedly will be the Supreme court but the general reverence held for the court will not permit open attacks upon it. Instead, these disappointed ones will seek to accomplish their purpose in another way, namely, by changes in the Constitution that will curb the power of the court. It will not be the first time that this has been done or that drives against the court have taken place. Proposals to change the power of the court by constitutional amendment or otherwise occurred in 1823, 1826, 1868, in the 1890's and again in 1923. Fortunately, congress rejected those proposals in every instance. It is to be hoped that congress will do it again.

Now, we have a total of four proposals in congress designed to accomplish changes in the power of the court. Probably the most important of these is that by Senator Norris of Nebraska who advocates a constitutional change that would give the Supreme court exclusive power to pass upon constitutional questions of law, and to pass on those questions within six months after enactment of the legislation in question.

On the surface, this would appear to be a meritorious proposition but I have found, in discussing it with men equipped to analyze the proposal, it contains some elements of grave danger. If such a provision were operative at the present time, for instance, it would be easy for some of the brain trust to make it impossible for the court ever to have an opportunity to declare the act constitutional or unconstitutional. The course that was pointed out to me was this: By the expedient of allowing a new law to be inoperative through non-enforcement for a period of six months, its terms could never be brought into question. If the administrative official did not seek to enforce the law and bring violators to the bar of the court within the six-month period the law would go on the statute books until repealed by congress.

• • •

Senator Norris likewise has argued that the Supreme court should never be allowed to declare an act unconstitutional unless two-thirds of the nine justices were in agreement in that regard. He has bitterly opposed rulings of the court which were decided on a five to four basis; so it seems the Nebraska senator may have a beautiful theory that could easily go off at a tangent when applied to humans.

Norris' Argument

Most of the other proposals now in congress will get nowhere in congressional consideration and, therefore, reference to them will be omitted. It remains as a possibility, however, that the next election could bring in enough rabble-rousing demagogues to put through resolutions proposing that the Constitution be amended. Of course, those resolutions from congress have to be adopted by the 48 states but it has always been the case that if proposed amendments to the Constitution are checked in congress the major battle has been won.

I do not know, nor do I care to predict, how the farmers of the country will react to a decision by the Supreme court holding AAA unconstitutional. Certainly, they will be disappointed but whether this disappointment will result in a concerted movement by them to amend the Constitution to permit operation of present AAA policies is a question only time can answer. There is this much that can be said, however, and it has no relation to politics: I believe they will regret it if they seek to open up the Constitution to amendments. If they do succeed, they will then find that all of the other interests in this country will be clamoring for changes and the result probably be a muddy mess.

World Wheat Supply Is Cut 330,000,000 Bushels

This year's world wheat supply will be about 330,000,000 bushels less than in 1934-35, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics report on world wheat prospects.

Production is estimated at about 3,430,000,000 bushels and the world carryover outside of Russia at 800,000,000 bushels, or a total of about 4,230,000,000 bushels. Production last year was 3,459,000,000 bushels and carryover 1,100,000,000 bushels, or a total of about 4,559,000,000 bushels. The short crops this year will reduce world carryover by the end of this season to between 400,000,000 and 500,000,000 bushels, or not much more than normal world carryover prior to 1928.

On We Go

One generation's luxuries are the next generation's necessities.

IRON DOG GROWLS

The use to which the phototube, popularly known as the electric eye, is put are literally numberless. One of the most peculiar is used by a practical joker to give voice to an iron dog on his lawn. When a visitor approaches he is startled by growls, for on his approach he interrupts a beam of light focused on an electric eye and that sets off the vocal mechanism—a big, raucous buzzer.—Oil Power.

"Calumet sure gives you your money's worth, with that Big New 10¢ Can!"

SAYS MRS. W. W. HICKEY, OF CHICAGO, ILL.

"THERE'S a lot of good baking in that 10c can of Calumet," observes Mrs. Hickey. "It's worth more than a dime any day!

"Of course, with my big family I get the full-pound can—and it's only 25c now. As long as I bake, Calumet will be in my pantry!"

Grandfather Rommel, who was a baker for 40 years, says: "Calumet takes the guesswork out of the job nowadays."

DOUBLE-ACTING BAKING POWDER

LOOK AT THE NEW CALUMET CAN!
A simple twist . . . and the Easy-Opening Top lifts off. No delay, no spilling, no broken fingernails!

WHAT makes Calumet so dependable? Why is it different from other baking powders? Calumet combines two distinct leavening actions. A quick action for the mixing bowl—set free by liquid. A slower action for the oven—set free by heat. This Double-Action produces perfect leavening.

All Calumet prices are lower! Calumet is now selling at the lowest prices in its history...The regular price of the Full-Pound Can is now only 25c! And ask to see the new 10c can—a lot of good baking for a dime—with Calumet, the Double-Acting Baking Powder. A product of General Foods.

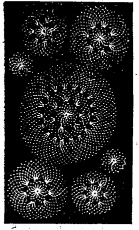
"Luncheon" Set to Crochet and Starch



By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

The open network pieces make beautiful service pieces for an attractive table setting. Four sizes in the combination. Center piece 23 inches, plate doily 14 inches, salad doily 10 inches, tumbler doily 5½ inches. Only one center is required for any size set. The other three pieces can be made up in any number. These pieces require starching to hold their shape. Tinting in pastel shades of green, pink, yellow, adds much to the attractiveness of the entire set.

Package No. 743 contains sufficient extra heavy Mountain Craft crochet cotton to crochet a seven-piece set. Two each of the small pieces and one 23-inch center. Two packages will make a 19-inch set service for six and one center.

One complete package No. 743—thread and instructions will be mailed for 40 cents. Instructions only 10 cents.

Address Home Craft Co., Dept. B, Nineteenth and St. Louis Ave., St. Louis, Mo. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for reply when writing for any information.

Do You Ever Wonder

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Ask Your Doctor and Find Out

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this — and see that you get what you want.

What SHE TOLD WORN-OUT HUSBAND

She could have reproached him for his fits of temper—his "all in" complaints. But wisely she saw in his frequent colds, his "fagged out," "on edge" condition the very trouble she herself had whipped. Constipation! The very morning after taking NR (Nature's Remedy), as she advised, he felt like himself again — keenly alert, peppy, cheerful. NR—the safe, dependable, all-vegetable laxative and corrective — works gently, thoroughly, naturally. It stimulates the eliminative tract to complete, regular functioning. Non-habit-forming. MINNESOTA NEWS

Karlstad—Under the direction of Harry Hydal a school band is being organized here.

Waseca—The American Crystal Sugar Company of Mason City, Iowa, has completed its sugar beet harvest in this vicinity. Farmers sold 4,600 tons.

St. James—A survey disclosed the dole is abolished in Watonwan county for the employable man. Able-bodied individuals are either absorbed in private-employment or on WPA projects.

Bronson—The six-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Vagle, farmers near here, burned to death when the crib caught fire from an overheated range while the parents attended to the milking.

St. Paul—Governor Olson was 44 years old Nov. 13, Wednesday. In shirtsleeves while preparing some official business, he said he expects to have thrills and much excitement during the rest of his life.

Granite Falls—Thieves who visited the Peter Lanners farm trucked away 12,900 pounds of meat, pigs and poultry—200 bushels of wheat, six Poland China hogs, 28 pigs and 80 Rhode Island Red hens.

Hillsboro—Drinking a quantity of car radiator antifreeze almost proved fatal to Phil Patrick, transient. Found near death in a railroad car, he improved sufficiently at the county jail to leave town the day following.

Minneapolis—The agricultural adjustment administration may purchase 2,000 carloads of Minnesota potatoes in order to aid in getting rid of the surplus, R. A. Trovatten of the dairy and food department, said.

Minneapolis—An approximate 25 per cent reduction in farm electric rates will be put into effect January 1 by the Northern States Power Company through five midwestern states, it was revealed. It affects about 3,500 farmers.

Preston—A woman was sentenced to a three-year term in the Shakopee women's reformatory for stealing cattle. She is Miss Madeline Green, who pleaded guilty to a charge of second degree grand larceny growing out of the cattle theft several weeks ago.

Rushmore—Raising turkeys pays in the opinion of Mrs. A. G. Thom who showed a check for $7,166 after marketing 2,188 birds at an average of $2.88 each for a net profit of $2,488. Mrs. Thom has 1,666 turkeys for egg production and next year's trade.

South St. Paul—The 1935 junior livestock show at South St. Paul was brought to its close when nearly 1,000 of the youthful exhibitors were guests at a dinner and entertainment program in the Masonic building, St. Paul. The show was concluded with an auction sale of all entries.

St. Paul—Kenneth Haycraft, former University of Minnesota football star, now an investigator for the state securities commission, is reported as heading the list being considered as secretary to Governor Floyd B. Olson, succeeding Vince Day, recently appointed Minneapolis municipal judge.

Minneapolis—Heavily loaded with miscellaneous merchandise, the last barge of the season pulled away from the municipal dock, bound for New Orleans. The load marked the end of the most successful tonnage year in history of the restoration of upper river traffic. The line will resume operation about April 1, 1936.

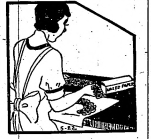
Pine City—Approximately 19,000 acres of woodland in Pine county will be made into a public playground and health restort for the underprivileged, H. W. Lathrop, director of state parks, said following announcement that President Roosevelt and the resettlement administration had approved purchase of the land. The area for this project is considerably enlarged in its amended form. The area is in the form of a triangle, spreading out from the point where the Kettle river enters in the St. Croix, northeast of Pine City, to highway No. 48, with the two rivers serving as boundares on the east and west.

St. Paul—Dr. Charles E. Cotton, executive secretary of the Livestock Sanitary Board, will be guest of honor when leaders in the fight to control tuberculosis among humans pay tribute to leaders in the fight for eradication of the disease among cattle at the 29th annual dinner meeting of the Minnesota Public Health association to be held at the Nicollet hotel, Minneapolis, Friday, November 22. Speakers will include Dr. Morris Fishbein, Chicago, editor of the Journal of the American Medical association; Dr. C. H. Mayo, Rochester, president of the Minnesota health group; Dr. J. A. Myers, professor of preventive medicine at the University of Minnesota; and F. E. Murphy, publisher of the Minneapolis Tribune.

St. Paul—Governor Floyd B. Olson bet a prize Minnesota hog against a prize Iowa hog with Governor Clyde I. Herring of Iowa on the outcome of the Iowa-Minnesota football game. Governor Herring will deliver the pig in person.

Proctor—Frank Cain, 40, a railway conductor, became crazed after a marital fight here, defied authorities after barricading himself in his home here, and shot himself through the heart. His body was found was found when police entered the tear gas fume-filled hosue.

Housewife's Idea Box



To Store Laces

If you have laces which you do not intend to use for a long time, do not just lay them in a box or drawer until wanted. They are likely to be ruined by dry rot. To prevent this, wrap the laces in waxed paper. Then store them away in a box. They will keep very nicely in this way.

IT WORKED FOR ME

Women should take only liquid laxatives

MORE people could feel fine, be fit and regular, if they would only follow the rule of doctors and hospitals in relieving constipation.

Never take any laxative that is harsh in action. Or one, the dose of which can't be exactly measured. Doctors know the danger if this rule is violated. They use liquid laxatives, and keep reducing the dose until the bowels need no help at all.

Reduced dosage is the secret of aiding Nature in restoring regularity. You must use a little less laxative each time, and that's why it should be a liquid like Syrup Pepsin.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if it doesn't give you absolute relief, if it isn't a joy and comfort in the way it overcomes biliousness due to constipation, your money back.

Both Parties Find Cheer in State Elections

J. A. Farley

REPUBLICANS shouted loudly that the victory of their party in the New York state election was a terrific blow to the New Deal and a repudiation of President Roosevelt. The Democrats declared it was no such thing. James A. Farley, who is both national and state chairman of the Democrats, gave them their cue when he declared recapture of control of the legislature by the G. O. P. was "normal" and that the Democratic vote for assembly candidates taken as a whole exceeded the Republican vote by more than half a million, which was something of an exaggeration.

The Republicans gained nine additional seats in the assembly, giving them 82 to 68 held by the Democrats. Only two senate seats were involved in the contest, both to fill vacancies. One of them went to a Republican and the other to a Democrat, leaving the setup of the upper legislative body unchanged.

In 45 cities of the state, the Republicans elected 33 mayors, including Roland B. Marvin of Syracuse, possible nominee for governor next year. The President saw Hyde Park go Republican and Farley failed to hold his own district in Rockland county.

The Democratic organization in New York came through strongly and menaces the prospect of a re-election for Mayor LaGuardia, observers hold. The Fusion forces, which turned Tammany out two years ago, crumbled.

In Philadelphia S. Davis Wilson, Republican, was elected mayor, but the vote was close enough for the Democrats to call it a virtual victory for the New Deal. Cleveland, Columbus and 23 out of 42 other cities and towns in Ohio chose Republican mayors, and so did a number of municipalities in Massachusetts. Connecticut Socialists re-elected Jasper McLevy mayor, and Democratic mayors were returned in Hartford and New Haven. Republicans gained control of the New Jersey legislature, but Hudson county, including Jersey City, went Democratic by a record vote.

Results in the spectacular election in Kentucky gave the New Dealers a real reason for rejoicing, for A. B. Chandler, known as "Happy," the Democratic candidate for governor, who had the support of the national administration, handily defeated Judge King Swope, the Republican nominee. This despite the fact that Democratic Governor Lafoon had declared himself against Chandler and threw his support to Swope. The referendum on repeal of the state prohibition amendment gave the repealists a good majority.

In Virginia and Mississippi all the Democratic nominees were elected which was to be expected.

George Accepts Offer of Greek Throne

THREE Greeks went to London to invite George II to return to the throne, in accordance with the plebescite of the Greek people. Deeply moved, he replied:

"I shall never forget the past. I shall return almost immediately to my beloved people. May we have divine guidance to bring happiness, peace, and prosperity to our Greece!"

Following the ceremony, the forty-five year-old monarch, with the Princes Paul and Peter and the Princesses Catherine and Olga, the latter a sister of the duchess of Kent, attended a special service of thanksgiving at the Greek orthodox church. Then the Greek king lunched with King George and Queen Mary of England at Buckingham palace.

Norris Wishes to Retire From the Senate

GEORGE W. NORRIS, veteran Republican independent senator from Nebraska, has announced that he desires to retire from the senate. He is seventy-four years old, and has served 32 years, including ten in the lower house, and said: "I am no candidate. I am getting old. Younger men can and should carry on the work which I have tried to do during my years as senator."

Senator Norris

His friends in Washington and Nebraska could not see any available fit man to succeed Norris, and expressed the belief that he could be persuaded to run again, either as a Republican, or as an independent if both parties in Nebraska nominate men whom he regards as stand-patters.

Senator Borah of Idaho, informed of Norris' announcement, said: "If I could do it, I would command him, for his country's sake, to change his mind."

Roosevelt Will Visit Chicago Dec. 9

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has accepted an invitation from Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau federation, to appear before that organization in Chicago on December 9 and deliver an address. Mr. Roosevelt will arrive in Chicago at nine o'clock that morning, make his speech, and start back to Washington three hours later.

The President's promised trip to Indiana to take part in the dedication of a memorial to George Rogers Clark at Vincennes has been postponed until June of next year, when he will also visit the Texas centennial exposition in Dallas.

Omens for Luck Are Still Guide

Superstition Rules Many Activities, Especially in England.

Old superstitions remain and new ones are added. When winners in the Irish Sweep were asked to say to what they attribute their good luck, a heavy percentage replied that they had a "lucky number" to thank. (The number 13 was considered both lucky and unlucky.)

Others attributed their good fortune to spiders, "money spiders" particularly, and one individual believed he won because he had carried a piece of coal about with him since the dawn of 1933. One gave the credit to a fall of oak leaves upon him, and another wrote: "Last year was the first time that swallows built on my property, and my wife said immediately, 'Oh, don't disturb them, swallows bring good luck.'"

In England superstition is not confined to the countryside; it is to be found even in the center of business London. No member of the Rothschild family, for instance, will shake hands with a customer in his own bank or place of business. The Rothschilds consider it unlucky to do so.

Again, London's Bush house has eight of its pillars ornamented and one plain. The idea, derived from the ancient Greeks, is that God alone can achieve perfection and that man therefore could not attempt it.

Practically every member of the London Stock exchange carries a mascot. One especially favored is a crooked coin, a sixpence for choice. But for the crooked coin to bring luck it must have been given to you. You must not have received it in change.

For the last 70 years, a well-known diamond merchant asserts, the fortunes of his firm have been influenced by a large and beautiful sapphire. This merchant is K. D. Parikh of Antwerp and Bombay, and the sapphire, which came from the Kashmir mines, was bought by his grandfather 40 years ago.

The gem is named "Shani," which means "Luck Bringer." It is kept in a special safe, on New Year's day. Once it was sold and immediately misfortunes befell the firm. It was bought back, and all went well.

"Shani," which originally cost $10,000, has gained so remarkable a reputation that $60,000 was offered for it not long ago. The offer was rejected.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

LONGEST FIRE-BREAK

The Ponderosa Way, said to be the longest fire-break in the world, is nearing completion, J. H. Price, writing in American Forests, reported recently. It extends lengthwise through a major part of California, from the Pitt river in the north to the Kern river in the south, a distance of 650 miles. It varies in width from 50 to 200 feet, and follows the lower edge of the Ponderosa pine-belt, protecting the pines from fires starting in the foothills below.

OLSON IS SEEKING PROGRESS ON RED LAKE RIVER WORK

Declares Project Has Been Held up by WPA Organization

Final approval of the Lac Qui Parle water conservation project in Minnesota as a WPA project was announced Monday by Governor Floyd B. Olson.

Governor Olson said, it would cost $1,236,738 and provide jobs for about 2,000 men. He said he hoped to remove Tuesday the last obstacle to approval of the Roseau river and Red Lake river projects which he said were being held up in the works progress engineering division.

The Roseau and Red Lake projects, he said, had been approved by President Roosevelt and Comptroller General McCarl but were being delayed by the WPA.

The Governor estimated the three water conservation projects would put 5,000 men to work. He said there was not sufficient unemployed labor in the counties affected but that workers would be taken from the cities and housed in barracks. He said work could start immediateyl because much of the preliminary work had been done.

NEW TRAFFIC CODE FOR STATE URGED BY SAFETY GROUPS

Changes in Motor Vehicle Laws to be Asked of Legislature

A new state traffic code designed to simplify present traffic laws, remove obsolete regulations, add new ones and speed up prosecutions has been prepared for submission to the legislature when it meets in special session in December.

The new code, backed by automobile clubs, safety organizations, the railroad and warehouse commission and the state highway department, embraces findings of state and national safety conferences. Copies are being printed by the Highway department and will be distributed to all state senators and representatives prior to the session, as well as to other interested groups.

Designed to replace the present traffic code, adopted principally in 1927 the new act would eliminate many features outgrown by modern traffic conditions both of rural highways and city streets. If it becomes law the code will automatically force all city ordinances to conform in a large measure. Sharp changes, designed better to protect the motorist and the pedestrian, have been made. Some of them are:

Traffic signs, including stop-go signals, would gradually be made uniform throughout the state.

A new charge, "negligent homicide", would be created to apply where the operation of a motor vehicle "in reckless disregard of the safety of others", results in the death of any person within one year. This charge would be a gross misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment for up to one year or a fine of up to $1,000 or both.

Drunken driving, reckless driving and failure to stop after an accident would become misdemeanors, thus permitting speedy trials in any municipal or justice court. Quicker revocation of drivers licenses also will be possible. At present drunken driving charges are tried in municipal courts in cities of the first class but must face long delays for district court sessions outside the large cities. In reduing both charges from gross misdemeanors to misdemeanors the punishments are reduced to imprisonment for up to 90 days or a fine of up to $100 or both, but sponsors of the bill believe more charges would be filed and conviction would be more certain.

Speed laws would be changed to eliminate the old " 15 miles an hour" minimum in certain localities. The proposed law defines prima facie evidence of speed "greatter than reasonable and prudent" as over 20 miles an hour in any business district, over 25 miles an hour in any residential district and over 45 miles an hour on any other stretch of highway not designated as dangerous by the commissioner of highways. It would also make driving at a speed so slow as to interfere with traffic a law violation.

The bill would permit passing at either the right or left on any highway having room for four traffic lanes. It is now unlawful to pass on the right anywhere in the state.

All "U" turns on curves or crests of hills would be prohibited.

The bill would give the commissioner of highways power to regulate design and operation of all school busses.

It would require safety glass, six months after the passage of the act, in vehicles used for transportation of passengers for compensation, in school busses and, after one year, in all new motor vehicles.

It would require a reflector on the rear of all vehicles in addition to the regular tail light.

It would require proper control of headlights on meeting other vehicles, such as dimming or lowering of beams.

Any driver involved in an accident causing death, injury or $50 property damage would be required to report to the commissioner of highways, whether the accident was in a city or on the rural highways.

Pedestrians on highways would be required to face traffic, walking on the left side of the road, and at night to wear clothing of a visible color or carry a light.

Organizations backing the new bill include Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth Automobile clubs, the Minnesota League of Municipalities, State Safety Concil, Minnesota Public Safety committee, trucking and transport organizations and the National Safety council. It has been endorsed generally by automobile clubs throughout the state. W. F. Rosenwald, chief maintenance engineer of the State highway department, is chairman of the committee which drafted the revised code. The committee was formed at the invitation of the League of Municipalities.

Chauffeurs' Licenses Required to be Renewed This Month, Holm Says

Mike Holm, secretary of state, calls attention of all chauffeurs to a change in the law made by the last legislature which becomes effective this year. Now, as before, chauffeurs licenses may be renewed during the month of November for a fee of $1.00 and without examination. The new law extends the time for renewal without examination for 30 days, but if application is not made before the first of December an additional charge of $1.00 as penalty must be paid.

"We have absolutely no authority to waive the penalty," said Mr. Holm, "so we trust that chauffeurs will send in their applications for renewal during the month of November and thereby avoid the doubling of the fee."

Application blanks for renewals were sent to all licensed chauffeurs before November 1. Many were returned because the licensee evidently had moved to a new address without reporting to the department. Any chauffeur who has not received his application blank should write immediately to Mike Holm, secretary of state, Saint Paul, and the required blank will be supplied.

Third Party Is Needed, Governor Olson States in New York Address

Governor Floyd B. Olson of Minnesota declared Friday night in New York City, that a third party, founded on the economy of abundance and production for use, was the nation's solution for a crisis developed by "decadent capitalism".

Governor Olson, a leading third party figure and candidate for the United States senate from Minnesota on the Farmer-Labor ticket, made his first important appearance in the east as a third party advocate from the platform before a meeting sponsored by the Commonwealth Federation of New York.

"We can expect only reaction from one of the old political parties," he said, "and sincere but ineffectual reform from the other.

80 Prospective Patrons Sign for Electric Line, Says Senator Tungseth

Senator E. L. Tungseth, who has been cooperating with residents of the Goodridge vicinity in seeking the installation of electric service from this city as a federal rural electrification project, announced this week that approximately 80 prospective patrons of the line had been signed to date He stated that a tentative rate of 2½ cents a kilowatt hour had been quoted by the city administration to supply current for the line, the same rate as is now charged by Warren for patrons in Alvarado. At a well attended meeting Monday evening in the school house near the Kratka bridge, a committee was named to continue an investigation of the project in that community.

HUNTING SEASON COMES TO CLOSE

With the closing of the pheasant season on November 12 and the migratory waterfowl and bob white quail seasons on November 19, the 1935 hunting season has come to a close. Mink and skunk seasons are now open and will last until February 15 and May 1 respectively. The raccoon season, also open, terminates December 1.

BIDS TO REMOVE GRADE CROSSINGS ON T. H. 59 ASKED

Marshall and Kittson County Projects Included in Call for Bids

Bids on Minnesota's first large group of railroad grade crossing elimination projects, to be financed with special federal funds, will be received by the state highway department November 29, according to an announcement by N. W. Elsberg, highway commissioner. Included are projects on Highway 59 in Marshall and Kittson counties.

Elimination of 13 grade crossings by the relocation of highways, and grading work preparatory to the elimination of 2 more crossings by means of overhead structures, will be accomplished by the projects included in this letting. Paving jobs in Crookston and Grand Rapids also are listed in the November 29 jobs.

The work will be in Itasca, Kandiyohi, Kittson, Marshall, Ottertail, Pipestone, Polk, St. Louis and Washington counties. Estimated cost of the projects is approximately $400,000.

Following are the jobs for which bids are asked:

Trunk Highway Number 2 in Crookston, one mile, 14,000 square yards of concrete paving and a minimum of 12,000 man hours of empolyment.

T. H. No. 59 between north Marshall county line and 3 miles southeast; elimination of one grade crossing over Soo Line Ry., involving 3.4 miles of grading and 60,806 cubic yards of excavation.

T. H. No. 59 between one mile south of Bronson and Halma; elimination of 2 grade crossings over Soo Line Ry., involving 4 miles of grading and 68,501 cubic yards of excavation.

T. H. No. 59 between Karlstad and south Kittson county line; elimination of 2 grade crossings over Soo Line Ry., involving 2.3 miles of grading and 45,620 cubic yards of excavation.

Shevlin Man Files for Governorship Thursday

Seeking the Farmer-Labor nomination for governor at the June, 1936 promary, Adolph W. Olson of Shevlin filed as a candidate Thursday. Olson was the second candidate to file. The first was Edgar B. Barnard of Anoka.

FOUR DEER FIND "HOME SWEET HOME" BEST PLACE

Moorhead—"Home Sweet Home" apparently means as much to a deer as to a human being. The four deer recently liberated from the "bull pen" at the Moorhead zoo and driven north along the river to "freedom" and an opportunity to forage for themselves, refused to leave town. The day after they were released they returned to the park and have been hanging around ever since, hungry and forlorn. As a result they have created somewhat of a problem. Recent snows have covered the ground furnishing but little chance for animals to find enough to eat. Not only that says Nels N. Melvey, park commissioner, they were born in the zoo and have not learned how to shift for themselves. Park funds are low—the deer were released to save the expense of feeding them, but Melvey is considering asking for donations toward a fund to keep the animals until spring, when they would have a better chance of finding feed in their natural habitat.

SPECIAL SESSION OPENS ON MONDAY

Legislators from all districts of the state leave latter part of this week for St. Paul to be on hand for opening of the special session of the state legislature called by Governor Olson for December 2nd. Organization meetings of the two groups have been held during the past two weeks, and after opening of the session these groups will decide whether the session will be thrown open to introduction of all types of bills, or will be confined to a limited schedule of work. If the first named course is taken, it is very likely the special session will continue until some time in January, otherwise it may end before the Christmas holidays. Among the most pressing matters to come up will be social security or old-age pensions, new tax laws and new methods of taxation to provide funds for administering the old-age pension act.

Habits of Baldpate Duck

The baldpate duck, also known as the American Widgeon, feeds mostly on vegetables, says the American Nature association. It has been found from Alaska to Central America. It builds its nest of grass and down in a marsh, and lays six to twelve eggs. It is of moderate size with much white below and on the wings.

NEW STATION OPENS

About three hundred people from village and surrounding territory attended the formal opening of the new Land O'Lakes co-operative oil station last Friday. Free lunch was served to all who visited the new place during the day. Because of cold weather setting in so early last fall, it was found necessary to delay part of the remodeling work until next spring. Manager Olness reports a nice run of business at the station, and a good increase is noted each week.

SCHOOL CARNIVAL IS WELL ATTENDED

A good sized crowd turned out Friday night for the carnival given at the school building, and sponsored by the school pupils. A neat one act play was given prior to the carnival proper, and later people were invited to visit the various places of entertainment provided. A candy booth, keno game, fish pond, cafeteria, etc., were all well patronized. Gross proceeds of the evening amounted to about $90.00 of which more than half is clear and will be used for school activities.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Annual fall term of district court in this county closed Friday at Thief River Falls.

The M. E. Community Aid will be entertained by a group of ladies at the church Friday, December 6th. All welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Black have gone to Farmington where they will be employed on a farm during the winter months.

Orville Gulseth leaves this week to take over his duties as night fireman at the Oakland Park Sanatorium at Thief River.

A good attendance was noted at bi-weekly meeting of the B. M. Club held Monday evening at the club rooms in the Bilden & Olsen building.

Roy Engr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Sigward Engh of Edinburg, N. D., came last week to spend the winter months with his uncle, Wm. Engh, at his wood camp southeast of the village.

A new concrete floor has been laid in the creamery barbershop, and the place is to be redecorated. While this work is being done, W. Corbet is using the Harry Winter shop across the street.

There will be no school either Thursday or Friday this week in order that members of the teaching staff may spend Thanksgiving Day and the week-end at their respective homes.

RED CROSS MEETING

Next meeting of the Red Cross will be held at the home of Mrs. R. Larson next Tuesday, Dec. 3 at 2:00 P. M. We invite all who feel interested in this work to come and join with us. Whether a member or not, you are heartily welcome at the meeting. We also wish to remind you of the "Red Cross Christmas Cheer Boxes."

Curran-Patterson

Relatives here have received word of the marriage of Donald Patterson, son of Mrs. Anna L. Patterson of Minneapolis, to Miss Irene Curran of Hibbing, Minn. The ceremony occurred Friday, November 22 at the home of the bride at Hibbing. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson left the following day for San Francisco, Calif., where he has accepted an engineering position. Numerous friends in this community will join in expressing best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Patterson.

Punishment for Crimes

Crimes vary greatly in kind and penalty throughout the world. England imposes a 20-year sentence for carrying a revolver without a permit, India gives 25 years for killing a cow and China inflicts the death penalty for chopping down a camphor tree.—Collier's Weekly.

Senator E. L. Tungseth of Thief River Falls, visited briefly with friends in this village Monday morning.

Annual business meeting of the Norwegian Lutheran Ladies Aid will be held at the church parlors Friday, December 6th.

Mrs. O. G. Mathison of Red Lake Falls has been assisting this week at the Johnson Cafe here which is operated by her brother, Elroy Johnson.

A large crowd attended the dance given here last Saturday evening at the Young & Olsen hall. Much better attendance has been noted at these gatherings since cold weather set in.

BACK FROM WESTERN TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Satterberg returned Thursday night after a very enjoyable auto trip to Denver, Colo., where they visited at the home of his brother, Albert, whom they had not seen for about thirty years. They also visited with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Peterson at Laramie, Wyo. While in Denver they took occasion to visit a number of historical and interesting points in that state. They had a most delightful trip, finding no snow on the whole route except in northern half of Minnesota.

VILLAGE ELECTION SET FOR TUESDAY

The annual village election takes place next Tuesday, Dec. 3rd. No filings have been made for any of the offices to be filled, so voters will receive ballots with blank spaces in which to fill in such names as they choose. The officers to be elected will be a president of the council for a one year term; a councilman for a three year term, and a justice of the peace for two years. Other village officers were elected for two year terms last year and hold over until next year.

CONTRIBUTED

Captain John Berling of Thief River Falls was a caller in town one day this week. Mr. Berling is now actively engaged in relief work for The Good Samaritan Army, that well merits its name, and the public in general has well found this out in the last three months. We find misleading statements reflecting on Mr. Berling's character has been circulated and Mr. Berling presented credentials proving that the charges made against him were unfounded.

Some two weeks ago Captain J. L. Emmans formerly of South Dakota, affiliated with The Salvation Army of Thief River Falls stated that Captain Berling had in his employ two women well known as Salvation Army workers in the past, which is true, and we wish to state that two St. Hilaire girls whom we are well proud of, come from a good reliable family, and we love the stand they take in extending the cause of God and their fellowman. We wish them success in this relief effort in Pennington county and elsewhere. We are asking the endorsement of every good citizen and the general public at large.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING NOV. 10TH

Mr. and Mrs. William Eickhoff of Wittenberg, Wisc., formerly residents of St. Hilaire, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Sunday, Nov. 10 at the First Lutheran church at Wittenberg following afternoon services. Appropriate addresses were made by Revs. T. August Lillehei, H. M. Mason and N. B. Ursin. Songs were sung by a ladies' quartette and the church choir. Dinner was served in the church parlors by the Ladies Aid society. Covers were laid for twenty members of the family at a table decorated in yellow and white with a wedding cake as a center piece. About 200 guests were served cafeteria style.

Among the guests were Harold Eickhoff and family of Antigo, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Aubol and two children and Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Hed and two children, of Crandon, Peter Simonson of St. Hilaire, Minn., Chris and Oscar Larson, Mrs. Emil Vetting and son, Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Larson and Mrs. Joseph Jacobson of Manitowoc. Mrs. A. J. Hed, of Crandon, was also a guest at the wedding fifty years ago. The decorations at Sunday's function were in yellow and white with flowers, candles and gilded horseshoes. A purse of silver was handed to Mr. and Mrs. Eickhoff.

Miss Laura Larson and William Eickhoff were married November 8, 1885 at St. Hilaire and resided here until they moved to Wisconsin some over twenty years ago. Mr. Eickhoff, a native of Brooklyn, N. Y., is 75 years old, and Mrs. Eickhoff, who was born in Wisconsin, is 72. Both are in good health.

Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Eickhoff, they being Harold of Antigo, Mrs. Henry Hanson of Wittenberg, Miss Dora of Chadron, Neb., and Mrs. Martin Hagen of Nashwauk, Minn. Another daughter, Mabel, died in infancy. Mrs. B. E. Burkee and Mrs. Mary Aubol of St. Hilaire are sisters of Mrs. Eickhoff. Friends in the old home community will join in extending congratulations and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Eickhoff on their golden anniversary.

GOING TO ARGYLE

Friends here have received word that Theodore Skatrud, formerly of this village, and now G. N. station agent at Aneta, N. D., is soon to be transferred to Argyle, Minn. The Skatrud family left here about two years ago to locate at Aneta. Friends in this section will be pleased to know they will again locate in Minnesota.

Friendly Competition Or Greediness

We believe in friendly competition. We believe it is the whip that makes the mare go, and that it is an important factor in the business world.

Fair, legitimate competition is one thing, and greediness is quite another. When we see a strong co-operative creamery constantly endeavoring to expand their territory at the expense of their weaker co-operative competitors, we are inclined to compare them with the small boy who ate so many green apples that they gave him the stomach ache. "Delivering the Goods" to the utmost to the dairymen of your territory is to be commended. Overlapping into the territory of a sister creamery is plain greediness and an economic waste, as it costs money to haul cream long distances, and someone must pay the bill.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted

by William Bruckart

National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—One of the New Deal policies about which there is an ever increasing complaint is its wanton destruction of the civil service. It used to be said, under Democratic and Republican administrations alike, that it was next to impossible to get a government job except through examinations conducted by the Civil Service commission. That is, there were few appointments available other than under civil service below the rank of Presidential selection. Now, the scene has changed to such an extent that there is little chance to get in the government through civil service and the bulk of the appointments therefore are of a purely politically-indorsed character.

Ignore Civil Service

I do not mean to say that the Civil Service commission has shut up shop, although it has been virtually dehorned, but I do emphasize that as of September 30—the latest pay roll figures for the government—the number of civil service workers was only slightly more than half of the total on the government pay roll exclusive of the army, navy and Marine corps and Civilian Conservation corps.

The Civil Service commission continues to issue its monthy statements on the government personnel but they are becoming increasingly less reliable because one of the most difficult things to get in Washington these days is the accurate figure on the number of workers employed by Uncle Sam. The commission records are complete as far as they go but they fail to go far enough. At this time, for example, the Civil Service commission reports that the government pay roll covers 794,467 employees. That figure, however, does not include the vast army of employees of the Agricultural Adjustment administration who are scattered in every county in the nation. I have heard estimates that the number of these county chairmen, inspectors, investigators, etc., exceeds 110,000 but whether that is too large or too small I cannot be sure for the reason that there is no way by which the number can be checked. Similarly, it is next to impossible to ascertain the number of workers in some of the newer agencies, created under the guise of emergency conditions, because they too are scattered far and wide but the fact remains that the personnel of the government has been expanded more rapidly than ever in history and to the highest recorded peak even for war time.

* * *

Personnel Increases

The number of employees on June 30 was given by the commission as 719,440 from which it will be seen there has been an increase of more than 75,000 in three months. That is, there has been that much of an increase for which the commission has records, but again it must be remarked that the commission has no way of compelling some of the alphabetical agencies to supply it regularly with the number of employees on their pay rolls.

The number of federal employees aside from the military services when Mr. Roosevelt took office was approximately 585,000. The number of employees on the federal pay roll when Mr. Coolidge retired and Mr. Hoover became President was roughly 545,000. From these the enormous growth of the government bureaucracy is at least hinted if not demonstrated fully.

Then, there are more yet to come. Several new agencies were created under acts of the last congress and others have since been created by executive order of the President. Take the Rural Rehabilitation administration, for example. Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell, who used to be brain truster No. 1, has a fund of $250,000,000 with which to play and obviously Mr. Tugwell will need a great staff to assist him. The National Youth administration is another new one. It will not have as much money as Mr. Tugwell but it is starting its operation with $50,000,000—and that is quite a chunk of money to most of us. The National Labor board is hardly organized yet and the Social Security board has just begun to arrange a setup. Likewise the board to administer the Guffey coal law—a little NRA for the soft coal industry—has been appointed and is operating with only a few clerks. It cannot get along without a sizable corps of inspectors and examiners and investigators. It will have to have an extensive research staff in order that it can be supplied at all times with whatever facts and figures it needs or wants. So it goes on through the list almost unending.

One newspaper columnist had the audacity to say in his column the other day that if Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins really wants to solve the unemployment problem he ought to turn his attention to the government itself. At the rate of expansion, the government probably could be made to absorb the 3,500,000 unemployed to whom Mr. Hopkins was preparing to give work by December 1.

Where's the Jobs?

December 1 is hereabouts. But Mr. Hopkins has not succeeded in his much publicized plan to give all of the 3,500,000 unemployed workers jobs. He was doomed to failure from the start. He announced, it will be remembered, that all federal relief was to end on November 1, by which time he figured that made-work would be available for the 3,500,000. This figure was the topmost limit for which the federal government was to be responsible. The states and municipalities were to take care of the remainder of roughly 5,000,000 who had to have help.

November 1 came along and Mr. Hopkins changed the date to December 1. He did this after consultation with the President who announced with considerable emphasis that he meant just what he said and that federal relief was going to stop as of December 1. But it seems the machinery was too ponderous to get in motion in time to absorb all of these workers. Most folks recognized it weeks ago but Mr. Hopkins steadfastly clung to his dream and that dream, like so many others, was dissipated in the thin air and sank almost without trace.

* * *

Serious Problem

On top of this Hopkins failure has come a serious problem. It is serious for the administration not only because of the fact that winter is coming on and people must be fed and clothed but it is delicate from the political standpoint. In the last few weeks a considerable number of complaints have reached Washington officials from those who were provided with work. They contend that the government wage rate is insufficient to meet their needs. This results from the increased cost of living—higher prices for food and clothing and the other necessaries of life.

The administration is being blamed for this condition. Opponents of the New Deal are capitalizing this discontent. They are saying to the folks who find the wages too small that they have been made the victim of New Deal policies, such as tampering with the currency, nationalizing silver, paying bounties for reduced production on the farms and the like.

The upshot of the situation is that not only those on made-work who are paid by the government and those who are on legitimate pay rolls of industry are becoming thoroughly dissatisfied. They are demanding more money. I do not believe anyone can forecast what will happen. One thing is certain: if industry must increase wages, consumers will have to pay the price. There will be further increases in the things we all buy in event higher wages are obtained from commerce and industry. And, if the government raises wages to those on made-work, the drain on the treasury will be correspondingly faster. The taxpayer has to pay this. So all in all there is a difficult problem to be solved by the President and his relief advisers.

It's Some Big Job

Few of us ever stop to think what a job it is to maintain the supply of money in circulation. Omitting any consideration of the paper currency which keeps the gigantic bureau of printing and engraving operating 24 hours each day and considering only the coins that jingle, it requires the operation of two or three great plants to mint our money.

The bureau of the mint in the treasury gave out some figures the other day that seem to me to be most interesting. They are interesting because of their size. On the basis of these figures, it is calculated that there are actually in the pockets of the American people the following number of coins, each figure being an approximation: 1,000,000,000 dimes, 1,400,000,000 nickels, 5,500,000,000 pennies, 400,000,000 quarters, 200,000,000 half dollars and approximately 33,000,000 silver dollars.

These figures furnish an interesting commentary as well on our present modes of living. They supply a sidelight on our system of taxation which calls for pennies, nickels and dimes here, there and everywhere as a result of sales taxes. Besides, transportation systems like the street cars call for an exceptionally large quantity of the minor coins like nickels and dimes. One could enumerate a score of factors in modern life that compel each of us to carry and use these small coins.

The mint bureau is authority also for the information that even this stupendous sum of minor coins seems insufficient. The mints, accordingly, have been speeded up and they are now working at a rate almost double that of 1934. How much further they will have to expand cannot be foretold, but as an innocent bystander, I fear that if I have to carry coins in any greater number than I have had them loaded in my pockets, it is going to mean new business for the tailors. They will have steady work replacing trouser pockets.

Discipline of Seamen

Danger at sea may bring out either the best or the worst traits of human nature. Nothing can be more inspiring than the general discipline and courage shown on shipboard in most emergencies; nothing more sickening than the manifestation of panic in exceptional cases. In this respect a great responsibility devolves upon the commander. It is he who sets the example for both crew and passengers.

MINNESOTA NEWS

Hibbing—Hibbing's memorial to its soldier dead, a new $500,000 community building was dedicated.

St. Paul—Governor Floyd B. Olson said a formal protest would be filed against a reduced tariff schedule on Canadian seed potatoes.

Little Falls—Crawford Sheldon, 71 years old, law associate of Charles A. Lindbergh, father of the transatlantic flier, died here.

Worthington—Banks in Worthington have more than $250,000 in deposits above the same time one year ago according to statements recently issued.

New Prague—Sleek cattle, fat hogs, and well-groomed sheep contended here for $5,000 in cash prizes as the annual four-day southern Minnesota livestock show was held.

Marshall—The city council voted to accept as a WPA project, construction of a municipal airplane hangar. Under the plan the city will appropriate $4,057 and the WPA $19,026.

St. Paul—Minnesota, with 35,928 relief workers on WPA projects, is far ahead of the national average for providing employment under the new federal set up, state WPA officials report.

Redwood Falls—F. L. Tout has just finished 25,000 games of solitaire, begun in 1929, playing upwards of 10 games nightly. He kept books on the solitaire game to determine winning percentages.

Hastings—Three hundred farmers of Dakota county attended a wheat control meeting at the courthouse here and virtually all of them signed applications consenting to reduce their wheat acreage.

Belle Plaine—The village fire department demonstrated its ability to meet an emergency by extinguishing with trivial loss, fire which threated a truck-load of whisky. Two cases were destroyed by the flames.

Staples—Striking a woman deputy sheriff a blow in the face that knocked out several of her teeth during a dance near Aldrich brought Neil Hallet of Staples a suspended sentence of one year in the state penitentiary.

Le Sueur—Carl Eastwood, editor of the LeSueur News-Herald, has been named chairman of the Minnesota Knox-for-President committee. Colonel Frank Knox of Chicago is a potential Republican candidate for president.

Fulda—Representatives of the Minnesota state railroad and warehouse commission conferred with county warehousing boards and county grain inspectors of southern and central Minnesota to outline provisions of the new corn loan program.

Minneapolis—A trail of nine dead and at least 32 wounded lay in the wake of Minnesota's hunting season, as 30 days upland game and waterfowl shooting ended. The casualty list included loss of one or both eyes, facial disfiguration and minor hurts caused by skin wounds.

Minneapolis—Figures from the bureau of records of the police department show the highest percentage of pedestrian deaths in automobile accidents for the first 10 months of the year in the city's history according to Frank C. Berry, director of safety of the Automobile Club of Minneapolis. Seventy-seven persons were killed.

St. Paul—Minnesota will produce 66,000,000 more bushels of corn this year than last, the crop reporting service of the United States department of agriculture estimated. The total estimated yield for 1935 is 142,791,000 bushels, as compared with 76,619,000 for 1934. The acre yield this year is 33 bushels. It was only 17 in 1934.

Minneapolis—Two train loads of new automobiles, representing the peak of the automobile industry's achievement, are here for the new Auto Show. In time these cars, and thousands like them, will be on the highways, but for the time being they were used for the sole purpose of showing the motoring public just how well the manufacturers have fulfilled their promise that the 1936 models would be better looking, more comfortable and more dependable than ever.

St. Paul—The state banking division has about 2,000 farms for sale, ranging from five to 1,500 acres each and priced from a few hundred to $7,000 dollars, Elmer A. Benson, banking commissioner announced. These farms were among the assets of state banks that are being liquidated and are offered by the liquidation department. A buyer can find what he wants, whether it be a chicken farm or subsistence homestead or a big wheat ranch. Mr. Benson said. Most of the farms are 40 or 80-acre tracts. Some are unimproved while others have complete stands of buildings. The average price that the banking division asks is $60 an acre for its farms, an increase of about 20 per cent over the 1933 average.

Stillwater—Operation of the Stillwater municipal barge terminal on the St. Croix river, saved the Minnesota state prison $20,206.25 in freight charges during the past year as compared to all-rail rates, a report of the state prison reveals.

St. Paul—Turkeys will put about $4,000,000 into the pockets of Minnesota farmers this year. There are fewer of them than in 1934 but market prices are around 25 per cent higher, L. L. Getten, manager of the egg and poultry department of Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc., said.

Leaves Over 600 Living Offspring; 5 Generations

Over six hundred living descendants have been left by Engel Dine Janssen, a widow who has died at Esens, East Frisia, at the age of ninety-one years. The old lady had one husband and fourteen children, ten of whom married young, having in their turn an average of ten children apiece. These grandchildren married young in their turn, till at the end of her life Frau Janssen could point proudly to five generations of offspring.

Her family, from children to great-great-great-grandchildren, was spread over the whole region and beyond it.

NO UPSETS

The proper treatment for a bilious child

THREE STEPS TO RELIEVING CONSTIPATION

I II III

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

ANY mother knows the reason when her child stops playing, eats little, is hard to manage. Constipation. But what a pity so few know the sensible way to set things right!

The ordinary laxatives, of even ordinary strength, must be carefully regulated as to dosage.

A liquid laxative is the answer, mothers. The answer to all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be measured. The dose can be exactly suited to any age or need. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no help.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

The doctors use liquid laxatives. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for home use. The liquid laxative most families use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist has it.

Gum-Dipped CORD BODY Prevents Internal Friction and Heat

How Firestone TIRES CUT OPERATING COSTS

CERTAIN construction features must be built into tires to give you the greatest safety and lowest operating cost in your type of service.

To make Firestone Tires blowout-proof, the cord body is built up of Gum-Dipped cords. To give you greatest non-skid safety and long mileage, the Firestone tread is scientifically designed, with a flatter contour and more rubber on the road. There are two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords, to lock the rugged tread securely to the Gum-Dipped cord body.

Firestone Truck Tires are the only tires made that give you all these exclusive advantages.

More Humble About Our Opinions in New Kinship

At the moment, many people are deploring "a lack of leadership" in religion, says Lloyd C. Douglas in Cosmopolitan. "In my opinion, the confessed bewilderment of the churches is a sign of health and progress. The recent use of the soft pedal has made the prophet of more value to the people. They sense an intellectual kinship with the honest man who admits he is a bit at a loss to know exactly where we are.

"Editors who were used to saying the last word necessary for the adequate instruction of their constituents are writing in phrases tempered by a new shyness. Statesmen, teachers, parents, even half-grown children are no longer laying down their beliefs with a bang. We are all becoming humble about our opinions. This is the type of kinship we have needed more seriously than any other. It is somewhere along this road that we may find our peace."

WHY MILLIONS CARRY TUMS!

MILLIONS now know the smart thing is to carry a roll of Tums, always. Heartburn, gas, and other symptoms of acid indigestion have a habit of occurring at unexpected times. You don't have to drench your stomach with harsh alkalies which physicians have long warned may make the tendency toward acid indigestion worse. Tums, a real scientific advancement, contain no soda or other alkalies. Instead a wonderful antacid that simply neutralizes stomach acidity, the balance passing out of the body inert. Pleasant to eat as candy. Only 10c a roll. Put a roll in your pocket now.

Quick, Complete Pleasant ELIMINATION

Let's be frank. There's only one way for your body to rid itself of the waste matters that cause acidity, gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts—your intestines must function.

To make them move quickly, pleasantly, completely, without griping. Thousands of physicians recommend Milnesia Wafers. (Dentists recommend Milnesia wafers as an efficient remedy for mouth acidity).

These mint flavored candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly in accordance with the directions on the bottle or tin, then swallowed, they correct acidity, bad breath, flatulence, at their source and at the same time enable quick, complete, pleasant elimination.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48 wafers, at 35c and 60c respectively, or in convenient tins containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately an adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores carry them. Start using these delicious, effective wafers today.

Professional samples sent free to registered physicians or dentists if request is made on professional letter head.

Sanctions Against Italy Now in Effect

SOMETHING new under the sun is now being tried out—an economic war to put a stop to a military war. Fifty-two nations are united in the imposition of sanctions against Italy, which became an outlaw nation on November 18 by decree of the League of Nations. Four league nations, all unimportant, refused to participate. They are Austria, Hungary, Albania and Paraguay. Indirect support is given the league by two nonmember nations, the United States and Germany. Nearly all the world's chief ports are closed to Italian goods, and exports to Italy of arms, war materials and a long list of key products has stopped. Loans and credits for the Italian government, public bodies, corporations and individuals are forbidden.

Gen. Badoglio

Should this momentous action succeed, it would seem that the end of Benito Mussolini and the Fascist regime in Italy is in sight. Should it fail, the League of Nations fails, the British communications in the Mediterranean would be threatened, and the peace of the world would be menaced.

Standing steadfast against the sanctions, Premier Mussolini proclaimed the day on which they were established "a day of ignominy and iniquity," as had been declared by the Fascist grand council. The day was made a holiday, flags flew from all buildings and there were numerous angry demonstrations against the member nations of the league. The frontiers of Italy and its ports were closed to goods of those nations except for certain necessities. Restrictions of food, fuel and light were put in force.

As for the Ethiopian war itself, Mussolini announced an important change in commanders. Gen. Emilio de Bono was recalled with warm praise for having achieved his mission "under extremely difficult circumstances" and was to be elevated to the rank of marshal. Gen. Pietro Badoglio, chief of staff, was appointed to succeed De Bono as commander in chief of the invading armies.

The Italian forces in northern Ethiopia were preparing for a new forward movement, their objective being Amba Alaji, 40 miles south of Makale. It was learned that Emperor Haile Selassie had sent to his men in that region an order not to retreat further, so there were prospects of a real battle. Ten thousand well trained and well armed warriors from the rich province of Walega arrived at Addis Ababa to fight the Italians.

Treaty With Canada Is Made Public

AMERICAN business generally is pleased with the terms of the new trade treaty with Canada, made public simultaneously in Washington and Ottawa. Farmers and the lumber men of the northwest will not like it. High tariff advocates in congress are sure to attack the pact, but its terms cannot be affected for three years, even were congress to repeal the reciprocal trade act under which President Roosevelt acted in negotiating the agreement. It is considered a trade agreement rather than a formal treaty, and goes into effect January 1 next.

Government officials, foreseeing adverse reaction in some quarters because of some of the sliced American duties, sought to show the pact would lead to greatly increased trade and employment which would benefit the country.

President Roosevelt stressed that while duties were lowered on Canadian cattle, cream, seed potatoes and certain kind of lumber, quotas placed on these articles would prevent serious interference with the American market.

An analysis of the pact shows that the United States grants concessions to Canada on 79 major commodities, including:

Tariff slash on four-year-old whisky from $1 to 50 cents per fifth of a gallon.

Reductions in duties on specified quotas of beef cattle (from 3 to 2 cents per pound on animals over 700 pounds); dairy cows (2½ to 1½ cents); cream (56.6 cents to 35 cents per gallon); white or Irish seed potatoes (75 to 45 cents per 100 pounds); Douglas fir and western hemlock (50 per cent).

Reduced duties on lumber and timber of other kinds; cheddar cheese, turnips, apples, hay, maple sugar, live poultry, horses, halibut and some other fish; some leathers and ferro-manganese.

A pledge to keep on the free list Canadian pulpwood, newsprint, unmanufactured wood, shingles, lath, lobsters, certain furs, crude asbestos, artificial abrasives and fertilizers.

A promise to maintain the present 10 per cent duty on feedstuffs for animals.

On the part of Canada the duties are cut on 180 commodities, some of the leading concessions being: Reductions on wheat (from 30 to 12 cents a bushel); off-season fresh vegetables (50 per cent); vegetables imported in marketing season (35 per cent); most classes of farm machinery (50 per cent); industrial machinery (35 to 25 per cent); mining and textile machinery; radios (30 to 25 per cent); electric refrigerators; tinplate manufactures; dressed lumber; building materials; motor vehicles; cotton fabrics, furs, chemicals, silk fabrics, cotton manufactures, electrical apparatus.

Also rate cuts on oranges, grapefruit, nuts, iron and steel manufactures.

Place magazines and potatoes on the free list.

A pledge to grant the United States, on 767 articles, the lowest rates paid by any non-British country.

A promise to seek legislation to permit Canadians visiting the United States to carry $100 in American goods duty free back to their homes each month.

A pledge to liberalize the system of establishing arbitrary valuations on American products.

A promise to keep raw cotton on the free list and to put tractors on that list.

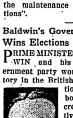
United States Will Not Interfere in Mexico

REQUESTS made by the Knights of Columbus that the United States government make an investigation of alleged religious persecution in Mexico have been denied by President Roosevelt in a rather sharply worded letter to Supreme Knight Martin H. Carmody. Mr. Roosevelt said:

"I decline to permit this government to undertake a policy of interference in the domestic concerns of foreign governments and thereby jeopardize the maintenance of peaceful conditions".

Baldwin's Government Wins Elections

PRIME MINISTER STANLEY BALDWIN and his Conservative government party won an impressive victory in the British parliamentary elections, although the Laborites succeeded in decreasing the Conservative majority in the house by about 60 seats. Baldwin himself was unopposed for re-election, but Ramsay MacDonald, lord president of the council and former prime minister, was badly defeated, as was his son, Malcolm, who has been minister of colonies. The elder MacDonald left the Labor party to form the national government, and the Laborites had been after his scalp ever since. The government party will have a majority of about 250 in the next house of commons.



Stanley Baldwin

"It was a splendid result," Baldwin said in a statement. "The country has renewed its support of the national government. It has expressed decisively its confidence in our will and ability to continue our work for national restoration and world peace."

The newly elected members of parliament meet at Westminster on November 26 to take their oath of allegiance to the crown. This procedure will occupy three days after which commons will adjourn until December 3 when King George will open the new parliament.

Clash in North China Is Imminent

WITH everything prepared for the proclamation of autonomy of North China, there was almost the certainty of serious fighting in that region between the troops of the Chinese National government and the forces of autonomy movement leaders. It was reported in Tokyo that Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, virtual dictator of the National government, had mobilized 300,000 soldiers in the northern provinces, chiefly along the Lunghai railroad in Shantung. The Japanese officials would not say what action Japan might take if Chiang Kai-shek should move his forces farther northward, but they admitted there probably would be a serious battle.

Shanghai heard that several Japanese troop ships had reached Taku, 27 miles southeast of Tientsin, to block the approaches to that city. Japanese forces already were massed at Shanhaikwan, main gateway to northern China at the east end of the great wall.

Farm Mortgage Amendment Is Declared Illegal

LEGISLATION designed to replace the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act after that law was declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme court, was itself declared illegal by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago.

The judges found, in effect, that the amendment adopted in August of 1935, reducing the moratorium period from five to three years, exceeded the powers of congress as did the original measure invalidated last May.

Bar Committee Upholds Liberty League Lawyers

NO CANON of ethics was violated by the lawyers' committee of the American Liberty league when it offered to defend gratis the constitutional rights of any citizen unable to pay fees for such defense. Moreover, the lawyers' committee is justified in preparing and disseminating "opinions upon legislation with particular reference to the constitutionality of such legislation."

Such is the opinion of the American Bar association's committee on professional ethics and grievances, given in response to a complaint made by C. N. Davie of Atlanta, Ga. The bar committee emphasized that it expressed "no opinion as to the soundness of the conclusions reached by the national lawyers' committee," and added:

"This group has organized and appears on the one side; a similar group may well organize and function on the other side. Such an eventuality is more to be desired than feared."

Filipino Commonwealth Is Established

SELF-GOVERNMENT became a reality for the Philippines on November 15, according to schedule, and it is now up to the islanders to utilize their independence wisely and safely, with only general supervision by the United States. In the presence of a great throng of distinguished persons in the magnificent legislature building at Manila, Manuel Quezon, veteran advocate of independence, was inaugurated as the first president of the commonwealth. Representing the United States were Vice President Garner, Speaker Byrns and a large party of senators and representatives with their wives. Many foreign governments sent unofficial observers, and the leading statesmen of the islands were present.

Manuel Quezon

After Quezon had taken the oath of office, Sergio Osmena, vice president, and the members of the new unicameral legislature were sworn in.

President Roosevelt was personally represented by Secretary of War Dern, who made a pleasant speech and read the proclamation, simultaneously issued in Washington, terminating the old government of the islands and establishing the commonwealth government which is to lead to complete independence of the archipelago in 10 years. A cablegram of congratulation also was received from Mr. Roosevelt.

Business Is Encouraged by Secretary Roper

IF SECRETARY ROPER in addressing the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America in New York was speaking with authoritative knowledge of the intentions of the administration, business may feel considerably reassured. He said "the breathing spell which we are now enjoying is to be the end of governmental regimentation." He declared business was the "scapegoat" of the depression and he upheld the profit system. Of Mr. Roosevelt's announcement of a "breathing spell," the secretary said:

"This declaration of the President is clear-cut and concrete. It means specifically that the basic program of reform has been completed. It means that business no longer needs to feel any uncertainty as to what may come in the future with respect to governmental measures."

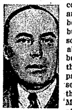
According to a Washington dispatch in the New York Times, informal orders have been issued by President Roosevelt to administrative officials to cut federal expenditures under the 1937 budget to $500,000,000 less than the newly estimated total for 1936.

As a result, the dispatch says, the lives of many federal bureaus and agencies were reported to be hanging in the balance.

The economy wave is heightened by signs of better business, the Times says.

Some Industries Won't Be Co-Ordinated

MAJ. GEORGE L. BERRY, industrial co-ordinator of the New Deal, is having a hard time co-ordinating industries. An industry-labor conference has been arranged for December 9 in Washington, but it is evident that some very considerable industries will not be represented. First, the Ford Motor company refused curtly to send a representative; then the Automobile Manufacturers' association objected to the affair, announcing its opposition to any revival of the NRA, though most of its members signed the old NRA code; and next came a sharp letter from the National Hardwood Lumber association, one of the country's oldest and largest trade associations, flatly refusing to attend the conference. The letter, written by J. W. McClure of Chicago, secretary of the association's board of directors, labeled any attempt to impose a new NRA on industry as "impractical, unworkable, unenforceable, a menace to respect for all laws and therefore opposed to public interest."



George L. Berry

Nevertheless, the conference will be held, and representatives of labor are expected to advocate a plan for licensing industry, a proposal that all government contractors comply with code provisions and the 30 hour week.

Back to American Names; We Have Individuality

A German historian, who has come to this country to take notes on the cities, towns and villages named after Hanover, Germany, says that there are no less than 77 of these in the United States. And there are, also, according to the same authority, 66 Hamburgs, 22 Bremens and 22 Brunswicks in this country.

The number of places in the United States named after places in Great Britain and on the continent of Europe is legion; for it was natural for the early settlers in the New world to wish to perpetuate here the memories of the communities in the Old world from which they had come.

While this was altogether proper, as long as America was composed of European colonies, we are not sure that its continuation today would be helpful. We have a feeling that the recent tendency to go back to native American place names is more useful in developing a consciousness in Americans that the United States is something more than an offshoot of Europe; that it is evolving, as generation follows generation, a distinctive individuality.—Detroit Free Press.

Character, Ability Need for Rhodes Scholarship

The founder of the Rhodes scholarship was Cecil John Rhodes, an Englishman, who left most of his wealth to provide scholarships at Oxford university for both Americans and Britons. These scholarships are for a period of three years each and are granted to persons between the ages of nineteen and twenty-five. Chief qualifications are scholastic ability and character.

Students are selected by committees of ex-Rhodes scholars, who judge the candidates by record and interview. Each year there are 34 students selected from Britain and her provinces and 32 from the United States and her possessions.

Marrying Younger

Americans are getting married at a younger age than in years gone by, according to the census bureau. In 1930 most men married at twenty-four and most women at twenty-one. Although comparable figures were not given, the bureau said marriage ages were much higher in 1890. The bureau did not speculate on the reason.

Air Service to China Will Force New Travel Concept

You can now buy an air ticket to carry you to the Orient. It will put you on board the "China Clipper" in San Francisco bay late in the afternoon. You will be settled in a comfortable compartment in time for dinner—dinner beneath a star-studded sky far above the highest clouds of the eastern Pacific. You will roll out of a larger-than pullman berth to thrill at the early morning sun splashing gold over Honolulu harbor.

Then on again, by daylight now, over a necklace of surf-ringed coral keys to the little Midway islands, where a well-appointed inn awaits your overnight stop. A short flight next day to Wake island, a tiny dot in the vast Pacific. There, too, you pass a night. Another daylight flight. A night on Guam. The next night finds you in exotic yet modern Manila. Then the following morning you step ashore for luncheon, in China itself.—W. L. Van Dusen and Daniel Sayre in Cosmopolitan.

Influence Immortal

The men who are gone seem to have left behind them in the world much of their power of vitality; and I suppose hardly a day passes in which we do not do some act, small or great, under this power of inspiration of our predecessors, something we should not have done, or should have done differently, if, even with all the machinery of living and all the truths we know now, we had had no predecessors, had been the first tenants if our earth.—Phillips Brooks.

Find Out

From Your Doctor if the "Pain" Remedy You Take Is Safe.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuritis or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it — in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains . . . and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store — simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saying BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

25 Years Ago

Miss Inez Patterson, who had just graduated from the state normal school at St. Cloud, accepted a position as teacher in the city schools at Bemidji.

After a long illness at the home of his parents here, Charles Hooper had sufficiently recovered to return to his studies at the state university at Madison, Wisc.

J. B. Schalz of Iowa, who had bought the Bessler farm west of town, came in that week with a carload of stock and machinery.

Mrs. Ingeborg Sundman died Nov. 18 at her home southeast of the village at the age of 67 years. Among survivors were three sons, five daughters, and a sister, Mrs. P. A. Blixt of this village.

Oldus Winje, injured in a runaway here that fall, was taken to a Crookston hospital where amputation of a leg was found necessary in order to save his life.

SCHOOL NEWS

The first of a series of Assembly programs will begin Thursday, Dec. 5, at 3:00. The Fanbell Novelty Duo will present a one hour program of music, impersonations and ventriloquism. Glady Fanbell comes highly recommended by Northwest Assemblies, Inc., of Minneapolis. These are fine, clean programs of the sort a community should sponsor. Programs are open to the public. Admission is 5, 10 and 15 cents for grades, high school and adults, respectively. Remember the time and place.

P. T. A. has been postponed to Thursday, Dec. 19. An operetta is being prepared for a Christmas program.

Sale of Christmas Seals will officially begin Thursday, Nov. 28. Sales will be made by grade and high school students. Let's make our quota which has been set at 10% higher than last year.

There will be no school Thursday or Friday of this week.

The St. Hilaire boys held true to form Thursday evening in their game with Climax. The latter took a lead in the first quarter. From then on the locals played ball, but found a large lead is hard to overcome. It seems like they have to get accustomed to a larger floor, and when they have done so they play a fine game. We hope the jinx will be broken after some practice games on Thief River floor.

The final score was 33-22 in favor of Climax. Arlo Jacobson was high point man, and the only forward to make a point. The Climax coach predicted a victory for St. Hilaire at beginning of the game. However, looks do not count and what we need is baskets.

Let's see more of the town people out to support the team in our next game which is a double header with Thief River Falls.

NOV. 30TH IS FINAL DATE TO SIGN 1936 WHEAT CONTRACTS

Farm Agency at Washington Announces Deadline for Signers

The farm administration at Washington Thursday fixed November 30 as the final date for signing applications for the 1936-39 wheat adjustment contracts and announced that reports indicate the amount of commercial wheat acreage under contract in great plains areas will be maintained or increased.

Under the new contracts, allotments of producers are being adjusted where necessary to correct allotments made under the first contract. As a part of this procedure, the average county yield method is being superseded by the estimated yield method. Under this plan farmers who do not have adequate records on their past production may have their average yield estimated by a local farmer committee.

Under the new contracts the farmers during 1936 will plant 95 per cent of the average acreage allotted to them compared with 90 per cent in 1935 and 85 per cent in 1934. The agriculture department estimated that approximately 66,000,000 acres will be planted in wheat next year and that production in an average basis would be 825,000,000 bushels.

HEN IS STOWAWAY ON BUMPER OF CAR

Hastings.—There have been tall tales of stoways in aeroplanes, ships and other conveyances but it took a Buff Arpington hen to add a new wrinkle to the sagas. The hen, who may be christened "Amelia Earhart" for its daring, rode down town on the bumper of an automobile, more than fifteen blocks, before being discovered. Mrs. Nettie Weiland, owner of the hen, who resides on West Fourth Street drove her car out of its garage and went to the Hastings Hotel to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Radke. The hen was discovered perched on the rear fender, about half hour later by Floyd Linz. Mrs. Weiland was certain the hen was not on the fender when she left home so it must have made the trip on the bumper. Taken home the hen, a good layer, will be guarded against any future stoway trips.

Hickory

Hickory is a tree of wide range and was formerly found in every state east of the Mississippi and in several on the western side of the river. Now, after hundreds of years of use and abuse, about 80 per cent is obtained from 10 of the principal producing states. There are more than thirty known species of this wood, made up of true hickories and pecan hickories, but only about five or six are known commercially.

OUTLINES RESULTS OF SAFE MOTORING CAMPAIGN IN SEPT.

Director of Safety Submits Report to Governor Floyd Olson

Responses by counties and municipalities to the proclamation issued by Governor Floyd B. Olson designating September as a month for intensive efforts for traffic accident reduction have been tabulated by the Minnesota Public Safety Committee and a report submitted to Governor Olson by C. H. Zealand, director of safety of the committee, today.

Detailed reports on traffic law violations, warnings issued, arrests made, and penalties imposed were furnished by chiefs of police and municipal court officials for 92 towns and cities and by sheriffs for 26 counties, and these were combined with the report of activities of the state highway patrol as submitted by Chief John P. Arnoldy.

The proclamation issued by Governor Olson urged that particular efforts be made to develop voluntary observation of traffic regulations by motorists and pedestrains, and that punitive measures be invoked only where warnings were disregarded or where the type of traffic law violation involved marked hazard to persons or property. Reports from the various enforcement officials indicate much safety educational work to have been done during the month, particularly by the newspapers and schools. Practically every newspaper in the state carried the Governors' proclamation one or more times, and in a number of instances supplementary proclamations were issued by mayors and sheriffs. Safety exhibit booths were maintained by local public safety committees at a majority of county fairs held during September.

A summary of the consolidated report submitted to Governor Olson shows the following as correctional activities by police and sheriffs' forces and the state highway patrol: reckless driving—warnings given 1165, arrests 291, drivers convicted 220, number fined 209, sent to Jail 17, released without penalty 54, drunken driving—warned 81, arrested 171, convicted 162, fined 96, sent to jail 57, released without penalty or put on probation 10; incorrect lights—warned 5476, arrested 617, convicted 296, fined 275, released without penalty 459; defective brakes—warned 2628, arrested 539, convicted 496, fined 425, released without penalty 126; vision illegally obstructed— warned 38, arrested 173, released without penalty 17; failing to give proper signal—warned 139, arrested 67, convicted 11, fined 7, released without penalty 42; failing to regard arterial stops—warned 916; arrested 432, convicted 321, fined 317, released without penalty 103; speed hazarding the safety of others—warned 1621, arrested 617, convicted 309, fined 290, sent to jail 14, released without penalty 20, miscellaneous other traffic law violations warned 20, arrested 24, convicted 18, fined 15, released 3. Totals: warned 12,085. arrested, 2,781, convicted 1,833, fined 1,639, sent to jail 88; released 836.

Dr. W. A. Billings, Well Known Turkey Authority, Gives Thanksgiving Tips

Holiday-time turkey purchasers need not worry about whether to choose a young hen or a young tom, says Dr. W. A. Billings, University Farm, who is hailed all over the United States as the No. 1 turkey man. Owing to the modern way of growing turkeys in close confinement, sex makes no difference in tenderness or quality of young birds. The size of bird wanted will usually determine the sex one buys, as toms usually run much heavier than hens.

Billings says ten guests will require a 10 to 12 pounds, if there are to be big helpings and "seconds." birds of grade No. 1 may cost a few cents more per pound, but make a roast that is perfect in appearance. No. 2 birds are cheaper, make nearly as good eating, but do not look as attractive.

In his dressing or stuffing recipe, Billings takes especial pride, because it makes a light, fluffy, airy dressing that "is a positive delight to put away," as he expresses it. Here's the recipe: Take "yesterday's" bread, trim off crusts and grate with coarse grater. About three loaves will make stuffing for a 16-pound bird. Stir one finely-chopped Bermuda onion into the bread: shake in salt to taste. Sprinkle on powdered sage—just enough to add a pleasing tang. Then add one pound of melted butter, stirring while you pour. This dressing should then be put inside the turkey, but not packed in tightly, as that would make the dressing soggy.

Billings dislikes putting giblets, chestnuts, sausage or other knickknacks into dressing. He says they make the dressing black, soggy and sticky. Ladies who scorn a mere man's recipe will miss something if they don't try this one, Billings says. It's so easy, too, that he can make it himself.

COUNTY BOARD PROCEEDINGS

November 12th, 1935

Pursuant to law the Board of County Commissioners, Pennington County, Minnesota, met at the office of the County Auditor at 10:00 A. M. November 12th, 1935.

Roll was called and all members present.

Minutes of the meeting of October 8th and 9th and a special meeting of the Board on October 22nd were read. There being no corrections or ommissions the minutes were approved as read.

Moved by Commissioner Roy and seconded by Commissioner Bredeson that round trip railroad fare to University of Minnesota Hospital be furnished Ralph Erickson. Carried.

Moved by Commissioner Mulry and seconded by Commissioner Lee that abstracts to Lots 17 and 18 and Lot 19, in Block 10, all in the Original Townsite, Thief River Falls, now in charge of the Auditor, be turned over to J. L. Archambault. Carried.

Moved by Commissioner Roy and seconded by Commissioner Lee, that dance permits be granted to Joe Kulseth, dances to be held on November 16th and 27th. Carried.

On motion of Commissioner Mandt and seconded by Commissioner Mulry the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"WHEREAS: Lots 19, 20, 21, 22, 23 and 24 of Block 56, of the Original Townsite of Thief River Falls, Minnesota, have been taken for public purposes by condemnation proceedings, and,

WHEREAS: The sum of Eight Hundred and no-100 ($800.00) Dollars was allowed as damages for the taking of said lots by the Commissioners or Appraisers and,

WHEREAS: There are unpaid taxes outstanding against the said lots, including paving taxes against lots 23 and 24,

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED: That if the City of Thief River Falls, by a proper resolution will waive and surrender all claim to said damages and moneys which it may have on account of paving taxes and assessments, then in that event H. O. Berve, as County Attorney be and he is hereby authorized and directed to enter into a stipulation with Theo. Quale as City Attorney, of Thief River Falls, and H. O. Chommie, as attorney for the owners of Lots, that when said sum of $800.00 is paid into court, then the Court may make its Order distributing said moneys as follows, viz:

1st. To Pennington County on account of unpaid taxes shall be paid the sum of $266.66, plus taxes on Lots 19, 20, 21 and 22, for the year 1933, amounting to the sum of $29.07, and in addition thereto the further sum of all taxes for the year of 1934, amounting to the sum of $38.43, said 1934 taxes not to be paid to the County unless the Court shall determine that the 1934 taxes are a lien and charge against said lots.

2nd. To the Owners of said lots all of the remaining part or portion of said moneys remaining after the payment of the above sums of money to Pennington County, on account of taxes.

TOWED CAR DRAWN INTO PATH OF FAST TRAIN

Claremont. It's rather a helpless feeling to be pulled into the path of a train, and Clarence Hagen of Byron, near Claremont, did the best thing under the circumstances—he jumped! Hagen was being towed in his car by Carroll Bell, who passed over the crossing safely, but Hagen saw that he had no chance. The train was bearing down the track, and it didn't take a very practiced eye for him to estimate that about the time his car reached the middle of the track, the train was going to dispute his right of way. He could not stop the car, nor could he turn it sufficiently to avoid the collision. Some people might have been paralized with fear, but not Hagen. Without waiting to remove the heater or the radiator cap, he jumped, and just in time. A second after, his car was hit by the train and almost completely demolished. Hagen was uninjured in the jump, which saved his life.

THE AFTER-SERVICE
After accurate fitting, next in importance comes the after servicing of glasses during the entire period thru which they are worn. Glasses often become loose, bent, and twisted before the eyes so they cannot give the proper service, and may even be a new source of eye-strain. Dr. Spofford's frequent and regular visits give ample opportunity for this after-service not obtainable in any other way. Investigate and tell your friends of this extraordinary service which is brought regularly almost to your very door.

62 VOTES CAST IN VILLAGE ELECTION

The annual village election, which took place Tuesday, proved to be a rather quiet affair. Only 62 voters were listed on the tally sheets at close of the election whereas St. Hilaire normally polls from 125 to 150 votes. Evidently there were no seekers of village offices this year as no one filed, and there were no names on the ballots. Lester Olson, manager of the creamery, received the highest vote for president of the village council to succeed A. Satterberg. Frank Sweet was elected councilman for three years to succeed Tom Larson. For justice of the peace, fully a dozen people received votes with indications that none of them will qualify for that office.

25 Years Ago

Arne and John Loberg, Hilmer Nelson and James King went to Baudette to be employed in the lumber woods.

Pete McAndress of Highlanding, came to spend a few days here with his parents.

John Fureseth of Halstad, was here viewing some village property with view of buying.

Duncan McAllister, who had charge of the barbershop during the absence of its proprietor, returned to his home at Badger.

Martin Hoff, carrier on route 2, saw a large timber wolf near the Soo tracks east of town.

DEATH SUMMONS MRS. C. G. ANDERSON

Local friends of the family were deeply grieved last week to learn of the death of Mrs. C. G. Anderson, wife of Rev. C. Gustav Anderson, formerly pastor of the local Evangelical Mission church, which occurred Wednesday at the family home at Roseau. Mrs. Anderson suffered from a heart ailment even before the family moved here, and her ill health continued during all the time the family resided in St. Hilaire. For three weeks prior to her death, Mrs. Anderson was confined to bed.

Mrs. Anderson was born in Sweden on Feb. 4, 1885 and came to this country in 1905. She resided at Lincoln, Neb., until 1911 when she came to Minneapolis. She was united in marriage to Rev. Anderson in that city in 1913.

Before coming to St. Hilaire about four years ago, the family lived at Ellsworth, Wood Lake, Siren and Freya, Wisconsin while Rev. Anderson served congregations in and near those towns. After serving the local Evongelical Mission field for three years, Rev. Anderson and family moved a year ago to a new and larger field at Roseau.

To mourn the loss of a loving and faithful helpmate and mother, Mrs. Anderson leaves her husband and three children. The latter are Verner, Edith and Paul, who all reside at home.

Funeral services were conducted Saturday in the Swedish Mission church at Roseau and burial was made at the cemetery near that village.

Sympathy of a large circle of friends in St. Hilaire and vicinity is extended to Rev. Anderson and children in their time of trial and sorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Just and Gustav Just motored Monday to Wylie and spent the day at the Peter Scherrick home.

Frank Breneman, who is employed in a bakery at Crookston, spent last week-end at his home here.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Graham and baby daughter returned Sunday after having spent Thanksgiving vacation with relatives at Bertha, Minn.

Ed. Moren returned Monday after spending two weeks with relatives and friends at Alexandria and other points in southern part of the state.

Manford Dahle, medical student at the University of North Dakota, spent Thanksgiving Day here with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. M. Dahle.

School children have started canvass of the village for sales of Christmas Seals. The quota for St. Hilaire has been placed at ten per cent above that of last year.

Fred Marquette and family, who left a few weeks ago to spend the winter in Kansas and Oklahoma, may decide to return soon as the southern climate does not agree with them.

Leo Carpenter has been busy the past few days painting the interior of the creamery basement barbershop. Soon as the work is finished, W. Corbet will again occupy the quarters.

Martin Peterson, Mrs. Albert Anderson and son, Raymond, and Hattie Dahlstrom motored last week to Grantsburg, Wisc., to spend a week or ten days at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Elmer Dahlstrom.

Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Reiersgord and son, Tommy, motored here Saturday from Fosston and spent the afternoon with friends and former neighbors, returning to Fosston that evening.

Word has been received that Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Skatrud and family of Aneta, N. D., plan to move to Argyle, Minn., in a few days. After they get back to the "ould sod" local friends hope to see them oftener.

Ardell Olson, who has attended the printing school at Dunwoody Institute at Minneapolis for past four months, returned home yesterday. He leaves this week to be employed as machine operator by the Journal at Fertile.

The local Red Cross met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Richard Larson. Plans were made for distributing Christmas cheer boxes this year as has been the custom for several years past.

Large crowds attended the dances given here both Thursday and Saturday evenings of last week.

The M. E. Community Aid will be entertained by a group of ladies at the church Friday afternoon, Dec. 6. All are welcome.

Regular monthly meeting of the village council was held Monday night at the office of the president, Adolph Satterberg.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Johnson are the happy parents of a daughter born Nov. 27, at the hospital at Thief River Falls. All concerned are doing well.

Miss Helen Erdman, who teaches in the public schools at Brainerd, spent Thanksgiving and week-end at the home of her parents southeast of the village.

The Mission Ladies Aid will hold its annual business meeting and election of officers at the church on Friday, Dec. 13, at 2:00. Every member is urged to be present.

Guests at the Emil Just home on Thanksgiving Day were Henry Stensrud and family of Thief River Falls, Harry and Gustav Just. The latter is a nephew of Emil Just.

Improved business conditions in the northwest were reflected in the Soo Line statement for October, it was announced last week in Minneapolis. Total revenues for month were $1,709,339.01, compared with $1,287,200.42 for October, 1934. Net operating income was $581,449.02, compared with $311,808.98, and net for month showed an income of $66,027.33, compared with deficit of $192,890.91 in October last year. For first 10 months of 1935 total revenues were $11,208,387.53, compared with $10,653,307.59 in corresponding period last year. Net operating income was $663,007.12, compared with $756,795.37, and net deficit was $4,370,743.81, compared with $4,241,259.84.

Farmers Union meeting will be held Monday evening, Dec. 9th, at 8:00 at school house in Dist. 178 in River Falls twp. The only farmers' organization that has a national marketing program controlled by farmers. Speakers will be A. Van Buren, Richard O'Leary and Geo. W. Blake.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION OPENS

Special session of the Minnesota legislature called to consider old-age pensions and other social security, opened Monday. Among the most important bills that may come before this session, aside from those mentioned above, is one to provide for payment in full of state aid to schools instead of 75% as set by the 1935 session.

Tax delinquency, which is rapidly mounting thruout the state, will likely come in for much discussion. Governor Olson has announced his opposition to any form of sales tax for Minnesota, and has submitted a plan of new taxation to raise the money necessary for old-age pensions.

Card of Thanks

To our friends of St. Hilaire and vicinity we wish hereby to express our heartfelt appreciation and thanks for the beautiful floral gifts and expressions of condolence sent us after death of our beloved wife and mother. This kindness on part of our St. Hilaire friends shall ever remain a pleasant memory with us all.

JUDGE FRANK M. NYE DIES AT AGE OF 83

Judge Frank M. Nye, last member of a famous family, died Friday morning at his home at Minneapolis after an illness of a year. Mr. Nye was 83 years of age at the time of his death. A brother, Judge Carroll A. Nye died two weeks ago at Moorhead, and "Bill" Nye, the noted humorist, died years ago.

Judge Frank Nye had a distinguished public career as attorney and member of the legislature in Wisconsin, and later as county attorney of Hennepin county, member of congress from this state, and later as district judge at Minneapolis. He was noted as an orator and was considered one of the best public speakers in this country.

Judge Frank Nye is survived by his widow, three daughters, one son and ten grandchildren.

During the years 1913 to 1916 when their daughter and family were residents of St. Hilaire, Mr. and Mrs. Nye were frequent visitors in the village. During one of those visits Mr. Nye delivered his famous Lincoln's Birthday oration here, and at another time he gave an address at commencement exercises held at the local school.

Funeral services were held Monday at Minneapolis, and burial took place at Mr. Nye's former home at River Falls, Wisc.

Wm. Olson has straightened his blacksmith shop building and is installing a new front in the structure. He is also contemplating making a number of other improvements about the building.

Friendly Competition Or Greediness

We believe in friendly competition. We believe it is the whip that makes the mare go, and that it is an important factor in the business world.

Fair, legitimate competition is one thing, and greediness is quite another. When we see a strong co-operative creamery constantly endeavoring to expand their territory at the expense of their weaker co-operative competitors, we are inclined to compare them with the small boy who ate so many green apples that they gave him the stomach ache.

"Delivering the Goods" to the utmost to the dairymen of your territory is to be commended. Overlapping into the territory of a sister creamery is plain greediness and an economic waste, as it costs money to haul cream long distances, and someone must pay the bill.

Canadian Trade Pact

Washington.—Through some months past, Cordell Hull, secretary of state, has been proceeding cautiously and quietly in the negotiation of trade agreements with foreign nations. His work has attracted comparatively little public attention although throughout the negotiations individual economic interests who stood to gain or lose depending upon their lines of business have made known their feelings quite emphatically. Six of these trade agreements, now called trade treaties, had been consummated in this manner. When the seventh agreement came along, however, the story was different. That was the treaty with our northern neighbor, Canada.

It is impossible here to set forth the list of commercial products encompassed in the new trade agreement with Canada. I doubt if most of the people of this country ever will know details of that treaty. By the nature of things, few persons can be interested in all of the items. But, I do not believe that it is the question of individual interest in the entire list that ought to concern us. Aside from the policy involved in the negotiation and agreement on tariff concessions, the importance of the Canadian treaty to the average individual lies in the one or two, or half a dozen at most, items that affect each one personally.

I do not mean to say that the policy involved is unimportant. The contrary is decidedly true. From a political standpoint, of course, it is general policy that will be debated; from an individual standpoint it will be the direct effect that execution of that policy has on each of us that will determine our ultimate views and to that extent determine whether we will be for or against the general policy of reducing tariffs enacted against certain kinds of imports.

* * *

Had Free Hand

The new agreement with Canada takes effect January 1—provided the Canadian parliament ratifies it. No such ratification is necessary in this country. The treaty was negotiated by Mr. Hull and President Roosevelt under the authority granted by congress in legislation passed a year ago which gave to the President the privilege of working out trade treaties without further congressional sanction. That law restricted the President in only one way, namely, the requirement that an increase or reduction of tariff rates included in those trade treaties may not exceed 50 per cent of the rate fixed in the present tariff laws. So it is seen that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull had virtually complete authority. It will operate for three years and, as far as I have been able to discover, it will be effective after Canadian ratification and there will be nothing anybody can do about it, be it good or bad.

In making public the agreement negotiated by Mr. Hull with Prime Minister MacKenzie King, the President asserted his belief that the agreement will initiate or revive a flow of commerce back and forth across our northern frontier in a manner that will be most helpful. He considered that the agreement would mean additional markets for some of our products and therefore additional work for some of our unemployed. The Canadian prime minister was of the opinion that in this agreement a long step had been taken toward healing a breach that has existed between the two countries for 69 years. He was hopeful, like President Roosevelt, that the channels of trade again will be filled, perhaps not to the levels of the boom days of 1928 and 1929, but would again carry satisfactory volume.

It will be recalled that our shipments to Canada in 1930 amounted to about $900,000,000. The depression cut those shipments to approximately $300,000,000 last year. So, if the predictions of the President and Mr. MacKenzie King are in any way fulfilled, a considerable traffic is due to begin upon the operation of this new treaty.

Any discussion of the treaty, however, that failed to call attention to basic conditions, in my opinion, would be short of its goal. So, it seems to me that while the President and the Canadian prime minister hold such high hope for trade revival, one ought not forget that trade will not flow if no market, no demand, exists for the goods. It may well be that by reducing the tariff duties that must be paid at the frontier on goods enumerated in the treaty that a reduction in prices will follow. It may then follow that the consequent reduction in prices will stir up a demand for the products. But that is not certain.

* * *

Political Standpoint

Now from the political standpoint, examination of the treaty must take into consideration individual items. And how those individual items affect communities and economic interests in this country. Already, we here in Washington have been deluged with the complaints of certain communities against provisions of the treaty. Likewise, we have heard those provisions praised from other sections. Thus, from the political standpoint we see developing a fine old fight over the tariff.

Tariff questions are and always have been sectional questions. Industrial communities want to be protected against inroads of foreign competition where labor is cheaper. Agriculture wants to be protected against imports from bountiful producing lands in those countries where vast open spaces and high productivity exist at the minimum of cost. Importers and consumers of imported products always have fought and always will fight to have low tariff rates so that the things they buy may enter this country at the lowest possible price. With reference to the Canadian treaty, these same conditions exist.

Early outbursts indicate that cattle raising communities and dairy producing sections are up in arms because the treaty reduced a tariff protection accorded against imports of cattle and cattle products and the products of the dairy.

Lumber interests are upset. It is true that the lumber market in the United States has been in the doldrums for several years and naturally the lumber people do not want to have Canadian shipments absorb what little market they have.

These are just a few of the complaints. They are offset partially at least by the praise and the hopes of some other phases of agriculture such as fruit and vegetable growers who feel that they can now market their products in Canada. Without even a careful analysis of the more than seven hundred items involved in the treaty, it is to be seen that there will be possible markets available after January 1 to a number of agricultural lines and to some industrial interests. Yet it remains, as I said earlier, for the passage of time to disclose exactly whether the net result will be favorable to us commercially or whether the Canadians have put over a fine bargain from their standpoint.

Political Dynamite

All of the discussion about the Canadian treaty, however, brings back memory. As a result of these recollections, I dug back the other day into the congressional debates of 1911 when a Canadian reciprocity agreement was under consideration, backed by the late William Howard Taft. After reading those debates, particularly the observations of the late and distinguished Champ Clark of Missouri and Representative George Norris, now a senator from Nebraska, I could not fail to realize the political dynamite embodied in the new course of international trade relations adopted by President Roosevelt. It was the Canadian reciprocity proposal that defeated Mr. Taft for re-election to the Presidency. It was, indeed, that controversy that caused the organization of the Bull Moose party and that sent Mr. Taft into political oblivion.

I am not predicting here that the same consequences are in store for President Roosevelt but it is fair to recall, it seems to me, that the reciprocity proposal of 1911 burned the fingers of every political leader who touched it. The cases are not exactly comparable nor analogous. Mr. Roosevelt has retained a number of tariff duties which were swept aside in the proposed Taft reciprocity arrangement. He is therefore fortified to that extent. But you may be sure that those who sponsor the present Canadian agreement are going to meet the same sort of fight that was made against the Taft proposal.

Then there is in the current treaty circumstance another factor to be considered. It links back to the Champ Clark observations which were made on February 14, 1911. At that time, Mr. Clark was expressing the view that the reciprocity agreement constituted a step at least in the direction of universal peace. In the debate just mentioned, Mr. Norris asked Mr. Clark to elaborate on his view concerning the value of the agreement as an instrument of peace.

"I wanted to ask the gentleman a question along the line of universal peace," said Mr. Norris. "As I understand it, the gentleman favors the bill for at least one reason—that it will have a tendency to bring Canada into the Union."

"Yes," Mr. Clark replied. "I have no doubt about that. I do not have any doubt whatever that day is not far distant when Great Britain will joyfully see all of her North American possessions become a part of this republic. That is the way things are now tending."

So, if the controversy over the present Canadian tariff agreement becomes violent, I think it is fair to expect that again we will hear the question discussed whether the United States is seeking to annex Canada—to make Canada part and parcel of the United States. Of course, as far as anyone can see today, annexation of Canada is inconceivable but the incident is related here simply to show how far-reaching such controversies may become.

Rochester—More than 350 citizens from 11 counties assembled here to map out a legislative tax program to be presented the special session of the legislature December 2. It was the largest and most representative tax meeting held in southern Minnesota in years.

The Unposted Christmas Letter

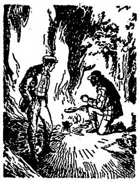
By

Jocile Webb Pearson

THE gray day was settling into a grayer night. A white mist obscured the pine covered hills and spread itself over the valley like a vast curtain shutting out familiar objects. The shriek of a locomotive sounded ghostly and unreal, as its glaring headlight penciled the darkness for a moment and disappeared. The doorway of the little railway station was outlined in a blaze of light as the attendant entered.

Despite the chilling blanket of mist a campfire a few hundred yards down the track crackled and glowed cheerily, bringing into sharp relief the figures of a man and boy. The latter, seated on a log, gazed moodily into the fire as the pine boughs rapidly consumed. His beardless face had the healthy tan of the open road, his clothing showed its neglect. The heavy shoes, soggy with the moist earth, steamed as the heat waves beat upon them, but he was unmindful of any discomfort.

The man was grizzled and weather stained, a typical person of the out-of-doors life. For the moment he was intent on arranging slices of bacon on a flattened piece of tin, later to be slid over the red coals where a can of bubbling coffee already sent out an appetizing odor. He worked deftly, as one long used to this method of preparing meals. Occasionally he cast anxious looks at the boy, as he turned the sizzling bacon and sandwiched it between thick slices of bread. With steady hand he poured the steaming coffee into separate cans, then called to the boy:



A Campfier Brought Into Sharp Relief the Figures of a Man and Boy.

"Sit up, Jimmy! Ye must be starved after the day's tramp. Walkin' the rails is hard work, but we're not ones for stealing rides, we pay like gintlemen or walk, eh, lad?"

The boy started from his reverie. "Hitch hiking beats walking for rapid transit if you're in a hurry, Tim," Jimmy grinned. "Gee, that bacon smells great. I'm as hungry as a camp robber."

They ate in silence, each busy with his own thoughts. When the meal was finished, the man produced a short-stemmed pipe from an inner pocket of his heavy woodsman coat, filled it, crowding the tobacco in with his thumb; then stooping he scooped a live coal from the fire and puffed a moment in quiet satisfaction; watching the boy from under his shaggy eyebrows as he added fresh fagots to the dwindling blaze.

The boy, with hands thrust deep in his pockets, continued to move restlessly about. "Gee, Tim, this weather is getting on my nerves. We've had days of it. I'm beginning to want to see the sun again."

The old man laid aside his pipe. "Now, lad, suppose ye tell Tim all about it. What's botherin' ye—I've missed that whistle of yourn. What's on yer mind?"

Jimmy resumed his seat on the log. "Oh, nothing much, Tim. I guess I'm sort of cuckoo tonight, just thinking—oh, shucks! it's nothing, anyway."

"Go on, lad, I'm listenin'."

A slow color mounted to the boy's face. "It's thinking of Christmas, Tim. It's only three days off, and—and I've never been away before. It doesn't matter, forget it." He hastily threw a pine bough into the fire.

"Three days, ye say, lad? An' me forgettin' it. Now, where'd ye say ye come from?"

"Iowa, Tim."

"Now, do tell. I been in Ioway meself, lad, but it's a long time ago—a long time. Ye're from a farm, mebbe?"

"No, Dad's no farmer. He's a carpenter, and got along fine till hard times struck—you know how things went."

"Sure I do," Tim supplemented. "An' there wasn't much work."

"That's right, Tim, and I wasn't keen on school. I wrote a note telling Mom and Dad not to worry about me—they have three more to look out for—and I hit the trail for the great Northwest."

Tim gave him a reassuring pat. "I see, lad. An' ye're fed up an' sort of disapinted an' homesick?"

"I guess that's right, Tim. But, gosh, it was thinking of Christmas that got under my skin. They'll all be there but me. Nobody to get the tree—that was my job. We always had one, even in the hardest times. Mom's a corker to manage. Doesn't Christmas get you, too, Tim? Haven't you folks somewhere you'd like to see?"

"Mebbe, lad, an' mebbe I'd be gladder to see them, than they me. Now this town, 'Podunk,' did you say it was?"

"No. It's Mobray, and the dandiest town—not so hot for size, but it has about everything a fellow needs there, and the best grid team in the county. Gee, Tim you ought to see them huskies go after that ball and smash the line—and the crowd roaring like mad, rooting for their teams." The eager look faded—he rose abruptly.

"Guess I'll be turning in. See you later."

"Sure, lad," Tim ignored the break in the conversation. "Better bank them pine boughs under that shed over there. This drizzle will likely be snow by mornin'. I've an errand of me own to do, but I'll be back in no time. Git yer rest whilst ye kin."

An hour later the boy was awakened by a hand on his shoulder, and Tim's voice calling: "Wake up, Jimmy, I wants to talk to ye."

Jimmy sat up, rubbing his eyes. "Okay, Tim, what's on your mind? Shoot."

Tim fumbled in his pocket and produced a bit of paper. "First I want to say Merry Christmas from Timothy Ryan to Mr. James Madden of Mobray, Ioway. Here it is—a ticket to ye're old home town. An' the fast train will pick ye up in exactly forty minutes. We got to get goin', lad.

"But Tim," Jimmy blinked the last bit of sleep from his eyes. He turned the paper over and over until he was convinced it was genuine. "I—I don't understand, Tim. How did you get this and where?"

Tim laughed merrily. "One at a time, lad. First: I got it over yon at the little railway station where they sell tickets. Second, I paid fer it with money, earned money I laid by when work was good."

"That's fine of you, Tim, but I can't take your money. You need it for yourself."

"Sure ye kin, lad, an' there's enough left fer me—an' yer welcome to it. Ye see, Jimmy, I sort of tuk to ye the day we walked inter the loggin' camp jest as they were closin' down fer the winter an' we tuk the trail togither. An' when ye talked of Christmas, an' sich, ye set me thinkin'. The gift is not fer you alone, but fer yer folks who misses ye more than ye know. Old Tim's made many a mistake, I says to myself, but this ain't one, an' mebbe it will help square some of the others."

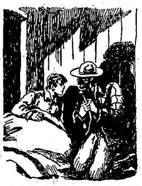
He laid a gnarled hand on the boy's shouder. "There's only one thing I'm askin', lad, an' that is: ye'll stay off the road. It's not fer the likes of ye. Go home an' finish yer schoolin'."

"You're right, Tim," Jimmy replied soberly. "I've come to realize that. You've helped me to see things differently, Tim. I've got a dandy idea." His face glowed with eagerness. "Go home with me, Mom and Dad would make you welcome; and you say you have money." But the old man shook his head. "No, no, lad, I bin on the road too long. I know yer folks wud be grand to me; much obleeged to ye fer thinkin' of it—I'll be gettin' along where there's housin' quarters, an' mebbe a bit of work."

* * * * * * * *

The eastbound train came to a stop. As the slender youth was climbing aboard, with a last handclasp, old Tim pressed a crumpled bill into his hand. "Ye must eat, lad, an' don't lose yer ticket. Don't fergit ye're ridin' like a gintleman." The old man laughed, but there was an undertone of wistfulness.

Jimmy took the money. "I hadn't thought of eating, Tim. It is just that I'm going home. Home, Tim, and I owe it to you. I'll pay it back some day—I'll tell Mom and Dad what a good pal you've been—and you promised to write. I'll be thinking of you Christmas."



Tim Fumbled in His Pocket and Produced a Bit of Paper.

"Thankee, lad, thankee. Tell yer folks howdy, an' Merry Christmas fer me."

The train roared away in the white fog. Old Tim watched till the red light disappeared and the rumble grew faint in the distance. He rubbed a moist hand across his brow. "An' he called me pal. 'Tis a fine lad he is, an' I'll be missin' him. Three days to Christmas; he'll make it." By the dim light from the station window, he pulled a worn purse from his pocket and emptied the few remaining coins into his hand. He shook his head slowly. Reaching into an inner pocket he drew forth a letter addressed to a small town in Iowa; slowly he read:

"Dear Tom: I been hankerin' to see ye an' the old home agin. I'll be comin' fer Christmas. Yer brother Tim."

He tore the letter into bits. "He's worth it," he said. "The lad will be home fer Christmas."

Old Tim smiled happily as he trudged back to camp.

Warriors Beat Cameraman, Fear Photos Ruin Souls

A belief among Ethiopian tribesmen that they will lose their souls if they are photographed was blamed for a recent violent assault on Edward Genock, Paramount News cameraman, in Harrar, Ethiopia.

Genock, who said he was unaware of the official ban on taking pictures in Harrar, was set upon by warriors as he was making motion pictures of the arrival of Chief Arrisis and his followers. Shouting their native war cries, the blacks seized the cameraman, smashed his camera, and pommeled him before Chief Arrisis succeeded in calling them off.

Ras Fitonrarai Bande, in charge of the Harrar territory, answering a protest lodged after the attack, said the irregular warriors were members of a fierce and primitive tribe which regards cameras with evil superstition in the belief that whoever obtains their pictures also takes their souls.

Joy of Life Comes With Consciousness of Doing

The real joy of life has little to do with comfort; it comes from the consciousness of strength to suffer and bear and achieve; it comes from the consciousness that one is doing a man's work and earning a man's wages in the world.

The thrill of the mountain climber as he comes suddenly upon the vision of half a continent spread out before him contains more real joy, more true life, than a year brings to the sluggish comfort-seeker in the valley below; the scholar, as he surveys fields of knowledge opening in broader vistas before him, forgets the days and nights of unbroken study behind him; the great leader in statesmanship, as he notes the steady improvement of opinion towards him, feels a joyous sense of mastery which the memory of years of defeat and misconception does not embitter.

GAS, GAS ALL THE TIME, CAN'T EAT OR SLEEP

"The gas on my stomach was so bad I could not eat or sleep. Even my heart hurt. A friend suggested Adlerika. The first dose I took brought me relief. Now I eat as I wish, sleep fine and never felt better."—Mrs. Jas. Filler.

Adlerika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adlerika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adlerika greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli."

Give your stomach and bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and chronic constipation. Sold by all druggists and drug departments.

League Postpones the Oil Embargo

NOVEMBER 29 had been set as the date for a meeting of the League of Nations sanctions committee to consider the impositon of an oil embargo against Italy, but Premier Laval and British Ambassador George Russell Clerk, after a conference in Paris, recommended that the session be indefinitely postponed, and this action was taken. The statesmen feared early oil sanctions would seriously aggravate the political situation, and Laval thought if he were given more time he might bring about the conciliation of the Italo-Ethiopian quarrel.

Premier Laval

There were good reasons for the uneasiness of the French and British governments. Benito Mussolini had bluntly told the world that the imposition of an oil embargo would mean war in Europe, the warning being given through his ambassador to France, Vittorio Cerruti. Furthermore, there was doubt in London and Paris concerning the ability of the United States government to prevent the shipment of oil to Italian ports. In Washington it was reported that Ambassador Augusto Rosso had discussed the matter with Secretary of State Hull, suggesting that attempts to choke off exports of oil, copper, cotton and other commercial articles did not constitute "orthodox" neutrality.

Emperor Haile Selassie made two airplane flights to the fighting fronts in Ethiopia and cheered up his forces so that their resistance to the invasion was measurably stiffened, especially in the South. The government at Addis Ababa announced that its armies had driven the Italian troops back from Gorahai, recapturing the town of Gabredarre. In the North the advance of the Italinas beyond Makale was very slight because of attacks on the supply columns and patrols, and Italian casualties were increasing, though the Ethiopian losses probably were much larger. The invaders are finding out what they were told from the beginning, that most of the occupied territory is untenable militarily.

Communists Stir Revolt in Northern Brazil

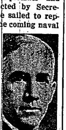
BRAZIL was experiencing another revolt, in the northern part of the country. Latest advices said the rebels had control of the city of Natal and that a hot fight was on for possession of Pernambuco. The uprising was laid to the Communists and was believed to be led by Luis Carlos Prestes, Communist leader for all of South America. It was said he planned to spread the movement all over Brazil, Argentina, Paraguay and Chile.

Under command of Gen. Manuel Rabelo, the federal troops, army and navy airplanes and two cruisers were hurriedly sent northward to combat the rebellion.

The revolt started when non-commissioned officers of the Twenty-first battalion, at Natal, began a march on the palace of the provincial governments, trying to seize Gov. Rafael Fernandez, who took refuge in the police barracks. The rebels then engaged in a battle with loyal regulars.

American Delegation for Naval Conference

ELEVEN American diplomats and naval officers, selected by Secretary of State Hull, have sailed to represent this country in the coming naval conference in London. At their head is Norman H. Davis, the President's ambassador-at-large for Europe, who participated in the preliminary conversations last year. Acting with him will be Undersecretary of State William Phillips and Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations. Advisers to the delegation will be Ray Atherton, counselor of the American embassy in London, and E. H. Dooman of the State department, who knows all about Japanese and other Far Eastern affairs.



N. H. Davis

Noel H. Field of the division of western European affairs, who attended the last naval conversations, and Samuel Reber, secretary of the American legation in Bern, Switzerland, will act as technical assistants.

The navy's four technical experts will be Capt. Royal E. Ingersol, Commander Roscoe E. Schuirmann, Lieut. Arthur D. Ayrault, and Lieut. J. R. Fulton.

David M. Key, assistant chief of the division of current information, will act as press officer for the delegation in its contacts with foreign newspaper men, and R. Allen Haden will serve as the delegation's secretary.

When the conversations in London have gone far enough to indicate what the several nations may be expected to do, President Roosevelt will direct the course to be followed by Mr. Davis and his colleagues. It is taken for granted they will strive to bring about an agreement for the limiting of future naval construction.

Federal Reserve Bulletin Notes Business Recovery

GOVERNORS of the federal reserve banks, in the bulletin of the reserve board, have sounded a most cheerful note concerning business conditions. Summing up facts gathered all over the country, they concluded that the United States was undergoing the most substantial economic recovery since the depression began, with every sign pointing to its continuance.

Business activity has been sustained for ten months near the high level it reached the first of the year, the bulletin said, "in contrast to the course of business in the three preceding years when advances were not sustained but were quickly followed by declines."

Here are some of the elements the bulletin says are contributing to this most desirable state of affairs:

Industrial activity during the first ten months of this year has been at a higher level than in any of the four preceding years, with the chief acceleration in industries producing durable goods.

Residential building has shown a "marked and sustained" increase for the first time since the decline, which in this industry began in 1928.

The greater industrial activity has been accompanied by increased incomes to both industrial workers and farmers, and greater distribution of commodities to consumers.

Continued ease in the money market and accumulation of a vast amount of idle money have been reflected in a revival of the capital market, resulting in security flotations in larger volume than at any time since 1930.

Profits of large corporations have increased, accompanied by a "sustained" advance in security prices, representing primarily the effect of cash buying by investors.

China Clipper Carries Air Mail to Orient

PAN-AMERICAN Airways opened a new chapter in the story of aviation when its huge China Clipper carried the first consignment of air mail from Alameda, Calif., to Manila, with stops at Honolulu, Midway islands, Wake island, and Guam. Capt. Edwin C. Musick, veteran chief pilot of the company, was in command of the craft and was aided by a crew of six men. Fourteen passengers started on the flight and twelve were dropped off to relieve the staffs at Midway and Wake. The 1,700 miles between Guam and Manila had not been flown heretofore.

Capt. Edwin C. Musick

After one or two more flights to Manila the clipper will continue to China and operate on through schedules thereafter.

The Philippine Clipper, second of Pan-American Airways' trans-Pacific air fleet, arrived at Alameda from the Atlantic coast and her crew began preparations for a flight to Manila beginning December 6. The plane flew 500 miles from San Diego in three hours 50 minutes. Previously she had flown from Miami, Fla., to Acapulco, Mexico, 1,590 miles, and Acapulco to San Diego, 1,600 miles.

Split in the American Federation of Labor

FOR a long time it has been apparent that there would be a split in the American Federation of Labor over the issue of industrial unionism versus craft unionism. That split now has occurred, and in the ranks of organized labor there is coming a great battle between the two elements. The matter was precipitated by the resignation of John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers of America, as vice president of the federation. He is the chief protagonist for unit unionization of mass production of industries, and his opponents, the craft union advocates, are led by William Green, president of the organization. The latter have had a majority in the late conventions of the federation, but Lewis has a lot of followers and is a determined fighter. He has set up separate headquarters in Washington and seven international union leaders joined him immediately. It was reported that the "rebels" had a war fund of $10,000,000. Four-fifths of this came from a special assessment of $1 each on the 4,000,000 United Mine Workers this fall.

John L. Lewis

President Green sent a stern rebuke to Lewis and those associated with him.

It is not believed that the industrial unionists will secede from the federation, but will wage a bitter fight for supremacy within that organization.

Greece Joyfully Greets Its Restored King

KING GEORGE II on his return to Athens was welcomed by the wildly enthusiastic Greeks who insisted on carrying the restored monarch on their shoulders, despite the charges of the cavalry escort. While big guns were firing salutes, George, dressed in an admiral's uniform and wearing a monocle, landed at Phaleros, the port of Athens, from the cruiser Helle, and drove to the capital in an automobile with the crown prince. There were formal ceremonies under an arch, and then a procession to the cathedral for a te deum mass. Next George drove to the royal palace and resumed the throne he abdicated in 1923 when army and navy officers drove him into exile

Japan Drops Northern China Autonomy Move

JAPAN suddenly learned that the autonomy movement in the northern provinces of China, fostered by the Japanese army commanders, was likely to prejudice her case in the naval conference soon to open in London. Therefore the army high command in Tokyo told its subordinates on the continent to "lay off," and the ambitious schemes of Maj. Gen Kenji Doihara came to naught, at least for the present. That plotter, who had become known as "the Lawrence of Manchuria," quietly departed from Peiping, going to Tientsin.

Kenji Doihara

Thus, for the first time in recent years, the Japanese militarists have been checked, by the Tokyo government, which informed them that the mission of the Japanese army in Manchukuo did not include intriguing for separation of the Chinese provinces and that it would not be permitted to pass south of the Great Wall without an imperial order.

Instead of the autonomy coup, the Nanking government was told by the Japanese authorities in China that it must institute reforms in the northern provinces. Akira Ariyoshi, Japanese ambassador, had a long conference with Dictator Chiang Kai-shek in Nanking, and told the press he had received assurance that the Chinese government was adequately prepared to cope with the situation in north China. Ariyoshi said he had also received assurance that Nanking desired to continue friendly relations with Japan.

At this point Yin Ju-keng, administrative commissioner of the demilitarized zone in north China, came forth with a proclamation of autonomy for the territory south of the Great Wall to within a few miles of Peiping and Tientsin, announcing that he stood for the rescue of China and close harmony with Japan. It was expected this lead might be followed by Sung Cheh-yuan, overlord of Hopei and Chahar provinces, but the attitude of other north China leaders was uncertain. Martial law was declared in Shanghaikwan, where the Great Wall dividing northern China from Manchukuo reaches the sea.

Twenty New Cardinals Named by Pope

POPE PIUS surprised the world by naming twenty new cardinals, who will be installed at a secret consistory December 16 and a public one December 19. In the group are fifteen Italians, two Frenchmen, one Argentine, one Spaniard and one Czechoslovakian. With these additions the sacred college will have sixty-nine members, the largest number in the history of the church and only one short of the full complement of thirty-nine Italians and thirty non-Italians.

The pope also named the Most Rev. Joseph C. Plagens, recently auxiliary bishop of Detroit, as bishop of the diocese of Marquette—Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, auxiliary bishop of Philadelphia, as bishop of the Savannah diocese.

Committee Is Named to Gather G. O. P. Fund

CHAIRMAN HENRY P. FLETCHER of the Republican national committee issued a call for a meeting of the committee in Washington on December 16 to fix the time and place of the party's national convention of 1936 and to consider the apportionment of delegates. It was reported that Chicago was in the lead among the cities seekin the convention.

Mr. Fletcher also announced the appointment of a committee of sixteen prominent industrialists and lawyers to raise a big campaign fund. William B. Bell of New York, president of the American Cyanamid company, will be chairman of the committee, and Charles B. Goodspeed, assistant treasurer of the Republican national committee, Chicago lawyer, will be vice chairman. Many of the members have never before participated actively in national politics.

Death of Earl Jellicoe, Jutland Battle Figure

ANOTHER prominent figure of the World war passed with the death of Earl Jellicoe, who commanded the united British fleet in the great battle of Jutland and was severely criticized because he did not succeed in completely defeating the German fleet. Jellicoe, who entered the navy as a cadet at thirteen years of age, had a colorful career on British ships and in administrative positions throughout the world until at the end of four years as governor general of New Zealand in 1924 he practically retired from official public life.

Fishermen Stranded for Five Days on Sea Bottom

Thousands of fishermen returning to Caspian ports recently told an astonishing story of having been marooned on the bottom of the sea for five days. They reported that at the busiest period of the fishing season the sea itself retired from under the fleet.

The sea receded along 150 miles of the northern shoreline, leaving the boats stuck several kilometers from solid earth. Airplanes dropped food to the stranded men until the tide flowed back and allowed them to refloat their ships.

Short of Saints' Names; Therefore Virgin Islands

History records that the Virgin islands puzzled Columbus when he sighted them on his second voyage. Amazed by their beauty and number, he could not think of enough saints in whose honor to name them. So he took a short cut and called them the Virgin islands.

This was a tribute to St. Ursula and her 11,000 virgins.

THIEVES LOOT STORE
AS OWNER LOOKS ON

LeRoy—Four well-dressed men, apparently drunken hoodlums rather than holdup artists, stole several articles of clothing and walked out while the helpless owner looked on at LeRoy recently. The men entered the store of E. L. Corsen on a Saturday night about 11 p. m. when Mrs. Corsen was alone, about to close for the night. When they began to pick up gloves, shirts, socks and other articles, Mrs. Corsen protested. One of them replied with an oath, and the four walked to a large car and sped away. Mrs. Corsen said she saw no evidence for guns on the thieves, but detected a strong odor of liquor on them. The men made no effort to loot the cash register.

Senator E. L. Tungseth Fares Well With Senate Committee Assignments

Senator E. L. Tungseth fared well in the allotment of senate committee assignments in the special session of the legislature which got under way Monday. In addition to being appointed chairman of the committee on rural credits and state development, he retains membership on all committees on which he served at the last regular session, including dairy products and livestock; municipal affairs; public highways; liquor control; public welfare; University; education; and insurance. Membership on the public welfare committee is of special importance in the current session, since all pension legislation will be routed thru this group.

COMMUNITY CLUB PROGRAM FRIDAY

Members of community clubs thruout the county will present a varied program Friday evening this week at the new municipal auditorium at Thief River Falls. Each of the seven groups participating, will present one number. The clubs taking part are Silverton, Smiley, Wyandotte, Steiner, Kratka, Rocksbury, and the Parent-Teachers Association of St. Hilaire. A program of musical numbers will be rendered prior to opening of the evening program. The Rocksbury club will present a number entitled "Amos and Ruby's Wedding"; the Steiner club will put on a mock wedding; the Smiley group will have a skit entitled "Family Jars"; the St. Hilaire P. T. A. group will present a one-act playlet entitled "The Dummy"; the Wyandotte club will have a musical skit "The Muff"; the Kratka club will present their version of Major Bowes and his amateur hour, and the Silverton group will have a musical number.

A similar program was given at Thief River last year and won hearty approval of all who saw it. All who attend this year can be assured of equally good entertainment. A nominal entrance fee will be charged at the door to help defray expenses of preparing the program.

Many roads in western Dakota were blockaded by drifting snow first of this week. At other points where sleet fell, the roads are very slippery and in dangerous condition for fast driving.

TO PAY DIVIDENDS

Ten thousand depositors in 23 Minnesota closed banks will receive "Christmas presents" within the next few days of dividend checks aggregating nearliy $200,000.00. Checks are being mailed by Elmer A. Benson, state banking commissioner, to reach depositors by December 20th. Banks in this section to make payments at this time are located at Crookston, Halstad and Viking. Dividends in other banks will be paid as soon as sufficient funds accumulate for that purpose.

MANY ARE PRESENT AT POULTRY SHOW

A large number of people from this locality were at Thief River Falls this week to attend the eighteenth annual Pennington County Poultry Show held at the municipal auditorium. The show opened Monday morning and closed today. Quality of birds seems to be improving year by year, and some excellent specimens were shown this week. Not only is Pennington county known far and wide as a heavy producer of fancy market poultry, but its breeding stock is in demand and is shipped to many states of the Union.

Friendly Competition Or Greediness

We believe in friendly competition. We believe it is the whip that makes the mare go, and that it is an important factor in the business world.

Fair, legitimate competition is one thing, and greediness is quite another. When we see a strong co-operative creamery constantly endeavoring to expand their territory at the expense of their weaker co-operative competitors, we are inclined to compare them with the small boy who ate so many green apples that they gave him the stomach ache.

"Delivering the Goods" to the utmost to the dairymen of your territory is to be commended. Overlapping into the territory of a sister creamery is plain greediness and an economic waste, as it costs money to haul cream long distances, and someone must pay the bill.

Big Problems Ahead

Washington.—Since it is only a few weeks until congress comes back to Washington for the second session of the Seventy-fourth congress, some of the problems which Persident Roosevelt must face have begun to take recognizable shape. There are any number of them, some great, some small, but that one which stands out at this writing involves the alignment shown between President Roosevelt and business interests.

It is a very interesting situation. Some weeks ago, the President promised business a "breathing spell." No one knew at that time how long this "breathing spell" was to last nor did anyone know exactly what it meant beyond the President's verbal statement that his New Deal program was virtually completed insofar as legislation was concerned. Through a combination of circumstances, the President's promise of a "breathing spell" for business has not only failed to placate business but at the same time has led to a determination on the part of business to go to bat with the New Deal. All of the information I have been able to gather indicates a distinct stiffening of resistance to the New Deal by all types of business interests, either corporate of individual.

There can be no doubt that a large segment of business is emphatic in its demand that New Deal spending be reduced. That section of the country's economic life is determined to force New Deal plans for spending back within the boundaries of what business interests hold to be reasonable. Having that determination, opponents of New Deal spending have at once something into which they can sink their teeth, namely, the annual government budget. In the nature of things, it and the President's annual message on the state of the Union go to congress in its first week of life. That means the country will hear at the very outset of the session something of Mr. Roosevelt's plans for further cash outlays.

The budget cannot be balanced in the next year. Consequently, the government debt, now above $30,000,000,000, will be further increased. It means, moreover, that before long there will have to be additional taxes. These increases in the tax levies probably will not come before the forthcoming session of congress but they cannot be much longer delayed because retirement of the gigantic debt is pressing even now.

The business viewpoint, of course, naturally is concerned most of all with potential tax increases. Business realizes that once the relief expenditures are cut down, common sense will demand revision of the tax structure in order that the vast amount of government bonds, notes and bills outstanding shall be liquidated in an orderly basis. So, in concentrating at this time on government spending, opponents of the New Deal actually are looking into the future and planning as far as they can to hold down the tax load they know they must carry sooner or later. It is quite obvious that there will be no change in the way of increased levies of taxes at the 1936 session of congress because, after all, political parties do not raise tax rates in an election year. But this government is due to continue as a government for this nation and the retirement of the $30,000,000,000 debt cannot be dodged.

Turns to Economy

From the White House and from Warm Springs, Ga., where the President lately took his annual Thanksgiving rest, there came announcements, both direct and inspired, that the President was turning to economy in the government outlay. The information, of an official character, indicated a desire on the part of the President to cut the ordinary expenditures of the government by $500,000,000 for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1936. The budget that will go to congress in the first week of January will cover the so-called ordinary expenses. On the surface it appears that this budget will aggregate about $4,000,000,000—just about the same as the budget for ordinary expenses of the government in the current 12-month period. But there has been no indication yet what the total of the extraordinary expenditures of the government will be.

We have, as you know, really two budgets. The ordinary budget is like the budget that has been used since the passage of the budget and accounting act in 1922. It covers the running expenses of all of the established governmental agencies, provides for all field work and carries appropriations for payment of interest on the government debt and a bite or two for retirement of outstanding bonds. The extraordinary expenditures under President Roosevelt's practices have been handled separately, being passed by congress in the form of a resolution for recovery and relief or some other such language making a lump appropriation.

It will be a matter then to which attention should be paid when the regular budget goes to congress and the President in his annual message gives some idea of what he proposes to spend for relief and recovery later on. The two must be taken together. Further, I believe if past practices are repeated, there will be White House requests for supplementary appropriations for the ordinary expenditures as well so that the total may not be disclosed for several months after congress meets.

Difficult Task

Under conditions that always have prevailed, the political party in power has always avoided tearing down bureaucracy in Washington in an election year. The civil lists of the government include most of the local politicians on whom the party in power must depend in its campaign for re-election. To remove many of them means naturally the loss of power in the local communities and no political party can hope to win by tearing down its campaign machinery in that manner.

Thus, Mr. Roosevelt's task appears difficult. He will be seeking economy in government outlays in an effort to satisfy and reassure business which is calling for economy. At the same time he is under the necessity of holding his political machine intact as the vehicle upon which he will seek to ride to re-election.

Besides this circumstance, there is the snarling and gnashing of business interests at the heels of the New Deal because business leaders contend the government is trying to run everything. Although the NRA is dead, there remain such things as the social security act which carries a tax on business pay rolls; the Guffey coal control law with its taxing powers, and the steady encroachment of government in business as is exemplified by the Tennessee Valley electric power project. It is no secret that business interests do not like any of these things and business has its heavy guns loaded to wreck the man who, by introducing the New Deal, must take responsibility for the government policies to which business objects.

Borah's Activity

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho his been much in the news lately. He is indulging in a sport, or a game, he takes up once each four years. The date of this activity always coincides each time with the maneuvering that precedes the selection of the Republican Presidential nominee.

Congress being in recess, very few sentors or Representatives are in Washington. When they are scattered to their homes, most of them rate very little publicity outside of their own bailiwicks. So, whether Senator Borah is in Washington or at his home in Idaho, he commands attention and hits the front page whenever he chooses to speak.

The current circumstances involving Senator Borah, therefore, are no different than those which surrounded him in previous periods when political discussions ran to Presidential nominees and party platforms, except that Senator Borah this time has commanded a little more attention and has been on the front pages with his statements to a greater extent than in previous years. This results from the situation in which the Republican party, being the minority party now, finds itself.

The woods are full of potential Republican Presidential nominees. Favorite sons are everywhere.

In the midst of all of this stands the figure, somewhat bulky, of Senator Borah. He has given every indication in the last several months: first, that he is not a candidate for the nomination; second, that he is a candidate for the nomination, and third, that he has not made up his mind. He has done all of these things well and no one knows whether he is a candidate or whether he is not a candidate or whether he has not made up his mind.

Having made quite clear that I am not informed as to Senator Borah's plans, I can fairly relate some of the things that have happened heretofore. I can recall for example that many times the Borah maneuvers have had as their objective the establishment of a political circumstance for the senator that has enabled him to exert unusual influence on the Republican national convention when it came time to write a party platform and select the party standard bearer. I believe it is fair to state that Senator Borah is a master tactician in this regard. I know that some of the old-line party wheelhorses fear him and his tactics immeasurably. I have seen evidences of that fear during the last several months and I have no doubt that there will be more of it displayed in the months to come.

Astute political observers around Washington contend that the senator's outward flirtation with the question of a Presidential candidacy is nothing more nor less than a repetition of what he has done before. They argue that Senator Borah wants to dominate the 1936 convention of the Republicans and he is laying the ground work to that end right now.

With the Minnesota Lawmakers

St. Paul—Relief problems and social security bills will be the order dished up to the special session of the state legislature for the next month, or maybe longer, as Governor Floyd B. Olson outlined the problems to be met. Majority leaders of both houses adopted resolutions calling for a session restricted to social security, relief and possibly minor changes in the tax laws. They took this action in the face of demands by farm and labor organizations for a program likely to keep them in session for months. By this action they hoped to rush the necessary legislation through by Christmas, although experienced veterans shook their heads over the likelihood.

Trouble over the old age pension problem appeared certain when the governor, in a statement at the opening of the session, came out in favor of a more liberal old age pension law which would cost an estimated $8,000,000 a year to the state. Taxes as a major item on the session agenda were definitely excluded by agreement of majority groups, who demonstrated at the opening session that they remained in control. But taxes for relief and pensions will be necessary, and one of the plans under consideration authorizes the city councils of Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth to levy a special sales tax to take care of the relief burden dropped by the federal government. A similar tax is now in effect in some larger cities.

Both houses went into session at noon December 2, and proceeded to organize with re-election of officials and employees who served at the regular session. In the lower house, the majority group re-elected Speaker George W. Johnson of Duluth over Harold H. Barker, Elbow Lake, liberal group nominee. Senate officers re-elected were G. Howard Spaeth, Ada, secretary; Howard Y. Torrey, Duluth, first assistant secretary; A. J. Loyear, Duluth, sergeant-at-arms; Van Lawrence, engrossing clerk; Orrin Shandorf, Faribault, enrolling clerk

"Only through state control and complete state financial obligation can we insure decent standards," the governor told the legislature in his opening address Tuesday. "I recommend a constitutional amendment empowering the state to pay pensions, funds which may be raised by taxes on payrolls." He stated that a great amount of property in Minnesota is escaping proper taxation, and advocated an increase in the money and credits tax from 3 to 6 mills. A state unemployment insurance law should provide for contributions only by employers and should be applicable to all employers of one or more employees, he said.

Rival bills on both the old age pension plan and the unemployment insurance problems came into the house. The majority bill on pensions was authored by Representative J. R. Sweizer of St. Paul, chairman of the special social security committe. Briefly, it provides that:

1—Old age pensions of not more than $30 a month shall be available to persons 65 and over who are United States citizens, have been residents of this country for 25 years and of the state of Minnesota at least five out of the 10 years preceding their application.

2—Inmates of state institutions, persons having relatives who should legally support them, and those owning property valued at more than $5,000 would be excluded from the pension-privileged group.

3—State and counties would both have a financial interest in the pension fund, the state paying 42½ per cent of the pensions, the counties 7½ per cent, and the federal government 50 per cent.

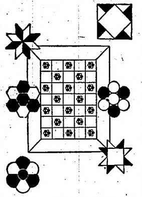
In submitting the administration proposal, Rep. Harold Barker, Elbow Lake, recommended $45 monthly pensions and $60 to married couples. This was the only major difference between the two bills.

On unemployment insurance, the two factions differed more widely, however. The majority bill, sponsored by Senator Donald O. Wright of Minneapolis, asks that employers pay 1 per cent of their 1936 pay rolls, 2 per cent of their 1937, and 3 per cent yearly thereafter into the insurance fund. Employees, under the plan, would pay .45 per cent of their wages in 1936, .9 per cent in 1937, and 1.35 per cent from then on. Senator G. T. Mullin's minority bill excluded the employees, stating that employers only should pay the same rates as fixed in the Wright measure.

Basing their demand on the claim that the law which went into effect last spring has proved a hardship to Minnesota farmers, a considerable faction of rural members asked a repeal of the tax exemption on household goods and farm machinery. The recent measure has increased taxes on livestock more than what has been offset in household exemptions, they asserted. One of two proposed corrective plans called for the outright repeal of the 1935 law, while the other advocated an increase in exemptions to $300.

Inexpensive, Easy Patchwork Quilts

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



Patchwork quilts as a rule are elaborate, cost quite a bit and represent many days of tedious work. This work and cost can be cut down to a minimum as shown in the illustration. Any of these designs can be used on eighteen nine-inch blocks and so arranged to make a full size quilt. About three ounces or one yard of prints is all that is required for the patchwork. Folder, No. 536 in colors illustrates four ways to assemble these different designs, also cut out diagrams for six different patches like the picture. Information about yardage required for back, border and blocks is also given.

The folder No. 536 and folder No. 0 with other quilting information will be mailed upon receipt of 10 cents, or send us 19 cents and we will send folder and sufficient beautiful patches to make up the patchwork on one of these simple quilts.

Capacity for Improvement Even in Worst Character

Every wrong propensity may be finally subdued or considerably corrected; every right one may be assisted by additional motives and carried on to yet higher perfection. Even in the worst characters some capacity for virtuous improvement, of which no vestige has yet been observed, may be discovered or drawn forth.—Blair.

Persistent Resistance to Temptation Proof

To resist temptation once is not a sufficient proof of honesty. If a servant, indeed, were to resist the continued temptation of silver lying in a window, as some people let it lie, when he is sure his master does not know how much there is of it he would give strong proof of honesty. But this is a proof to which you have no right to put a man. You know, humanly speaking, there is a degree of temptation which will overcome any virtue. Now, in as far as you approach temptation to a man, you do him an injury: and, if he is overcome, you share his guilt.—Doctor Johnson.

RANKS HIGH IN CLEANLINESS

Lanai was a cattle ranch 20 years ago, but today is noted for pheasants and pineapples. Sixth island in size in the Hawiian group, its Lanai City is called the most immaculately kept American municipality in all the islands. Roofs are painted in various colors, streets are shaded by Norfolk pines and yards glow with hibiscus blooms and flowering trees.

DOCTORS KNOW

Mothers read this:

THREE STEPS TO RELIEVING CONSTIPATION

I II III

A cleansing dose today; a smaller quantity tomorrow; less each time, until bowels need no help at all.

Why do people come home from a hospital with bowels working like a well-regulated watch?

The answer is simple, and it's the answer to all your bowel worries if you will only realize it: many doctors and hospitals use liquid laxatives.

If you knew what a doctor knows, you would use only the liquid form. A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the secret of any real relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular liquid laxatives have become. They give the right kind of help, and right amount of help. The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara — both natural laxatives that can form no habit, even in children. So, try Syrup Pepsin. You just take regulated doses till Nature restores regularity.

Santa Explains

Mary Pines for Her Pines

(A Christmas Story)

By Luella B. Lyons

MARY MINTER left her home from south of the Mason-Dixon line to marry Jack Howard. That's how she happened to be hating her new home in the North—hating the snow and cold and the fireworks she knew she was missing down home that Christmas day. Gazing out of the window all she could see were pine trees from four inches to sixty feet in height. Cedars! Pines! Spruces! She hated the words, even.

They Reached Ann Spear's Hospital Room and Made Explanations.

"How about a Christmas tree in the house, honey? Maybe that would help cheer you, do you suppose? I know you're eating your heart out with lonesomeness for home this, your first Christmas away," Jack offered, but Mary spurned his sympathy.

"A tree. A tree, did you say? Ha ha," she laughed bitterly, "go out there and on up the Ridge and look at those trees there by the hundreds and thousands. Imagine they are all Christmas trees if you like." Jack gave up trying to placate her but he understood—she was at that stage of homesickness.

About noon there came a phone call from their nearest neighbor, Milt Spears. His wife was in the city hospital, 40 miles away, and he had promised to visit here there, taking the two youngsters, but about an hour ago Milt had sprained an ankle and now—would Mary and Jack take the kids and go in his place?

What difference did it make if it was nearly nightfall when the pair and the two youngsters reached Ann Spears' hospital room and made the explanations and witnessed the relief that was so evident on the anxious wife's face.

"But where did you find such a novel tree arrangement, Mrs. Howard?" Ann's doctor wanted to know the moment he sighted the midget Christmas tree Mary had fixed up at a moment's notice. "Why, they are the niftiest things I've ever seen yet, and I'd like to buy a dozen of them."

A strip of painted tin that was bent to hang over the head of a bed into the shape of a shelf or bracket formed the foundation. A tiny cedar seedling about eight inches high formed the tree. Mary had stripped a wealth of tube roses she had been growing, to tie the blossoms all over that midget village tree. Fitting into a slot on that little tin bracket, it smiled its blessing upon the gathering.

Any Yuletide you might stop by the Howard Midget Christmas Tree Farm to find Mary and Jack getting a bit of rest from their labors, another glorious selling campaign over for another year. Yes, you'll find Mary there, for she does get pretty lonely when she must be away from her thousands of beloved midget conifers any length of time!

Christmas Cracker From France

The Christmas cracker came from France about eighty years ago.

Mrs. Durkee's Christmas Gander

By Martha B. Thomas

MRS. DURKEE had a gander, a fine strong bird with fine strong wings. Wherever Mrs. Durkee went the gander went, too.

Some years ago a goose egg had been given to Mrs. Durkee. It was a very large egg and ready to hatch, but a fox had killed the mother goose. It should make, when hatched and grown up, a fine Christmas dinner! Just as Mrs. Durkee prepared a nest for it, the shell cracked and out popped a head with very surprised eyes. From that moment the gosling and Mrs. Durkee became friends. She no more thought of him in terms of roasting than she would think of a neighbor in that unkind manner.

The widow lived alone and as the gander grew to manhood (so to speak), she depended more and more on him. Sometimes at night she would rouse him and he would untuck his head from his wing and escort her forth under a wintry moon.

And now, at the Christmas season, Gander was in full plumage and of a stern temper.

Christmas eve she sat alone by her kitchen fire, and there came a knock at the door. A man stood there and before she could speak pushed his way in. Seeing no one about, he ordered her to bring him bread and coffee and meat. She brought the man what he asked, and when he had eaten he said, "Now, give me all your money and I'll go with no trouble."

"No," said Mrs. Durkee. "I will not!"

Out came his fist and she just escaped a hard cuff on the head. She was angry enough to fight but instead went to her pantry. "I keep money in a jug here," she said and jingled some coins. At the same time she softly raised the window and whistled.

"Hey . . . come on with the cash! I'm in a hurry!"

"Yes, yes . . . some has stuck in the bottom." She made a great to-do at jingling. Then she heard a sleepy "Honk-Honk!" Her heart lifted.

"I have a few bills tucked behind the cookie jar," she added. "Let me get those." (Anything to take up time!)

She came slowly into the kitchen. "Here is your money," she said. "Oh, dear, I do believe some one is at the door. Take it quick!" She threw the coins at the man, and opened the door. In stalked the gander ready for anything.

The man shoved out his foot as if to kick him. In a moment, hissing and nipping, the great bird seemed to surround the man with heavy beating wings. The harder the unwelcome guest tried to escape the harder he was beaten back. At last, crouching and fending off the blows, he fled through the door . . . scattering coins all the way. The wad of bills had merely been a piece of make-believe.

The door slammed and the lonely widow sat down in a chair and laughed and laughed and laughed. The gander stood beside her, looking dignified and preening his ruffled feathers.

"I'd rather have you for a friend," cried Mrs. Durkee, "than all the roast ducks, turkeys and geese in the world. Merry Christmas . . . and I'll give you some fresh lettuce this minute."

The gander's bright eyes roved about the room, and he followed Mrs. Durkee into the pantry.

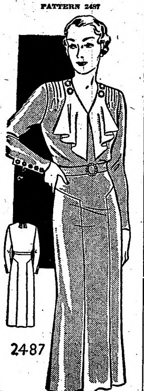
A Frock With Slender Lines for Matron Who Wears Size Forty-Six

PATTERN 2487



Here's a real "find" for the woman who's a size forty-six, and has been seeking a dressy frock that will ably conceal extra pounds, yet allow her to look as young as she feels. Then, too, there's also a wealth of slenderness to be gained by center panels, front and back, which hold a wide box pleat in seam. Deserving of the title "bosom friend" is that dressy, graceful twin jabot that so successfully conceals too ample curves. The matron will do well to choose a smooth, sleek silk, satin, or crepe for her "very best" frock, let the jabot contrast, and bright buttons do a little "highlighting."

Pattern 2487 is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3½ yards 39 inch fabric and ⅞ yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to the Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 243 West Seventeenth St., New York City.

Pigs Ain't Pigs

"Pigs is pigs, maybe," observed Farmer Julian Brown of Kinston, N. C., "but mine ain't." His pigs, Brown said, "regard cleanliness next to godliness." That is why he rigged up a shower bath for the sow and her litter of six. "The pigs keep sleek and clean," he said, "and enjoy the shower immensely."

That Touch of Madness Which We Call Genius

The word "genius" has fallen into disrepute during late years, for if a man builds a better mousetrap than his neighbor, breeds a better heifer, sits an hour longer on a steeple or paints a more unintelligible picture—we hail him as a "genius."

To be a genius, it is not enough to produce a technically perfect piece of work. It must be something which is above being technically perfect, something to which has been lent for the moment a touch of the supernormal. Mental, physical and spiritual qualities working in harmony can achieve a technically perfect product. If, to these qualities, there is added another element which one can perceive but cannot understand—then we have, in truth, a work of genius.

Even in the world of sports, where sheer physical superiority wins eighty times out of a hundred, we come across performances which make us cry loud in wonder. We know they are humanly impossible and we can only believe that for the moment the artist has been touched with the tincture of madness.—Quentin Reynolds in Cosmopolitan.

Smiles

A FRESH ONE

A college professor and his wife entertained at dinner a few weeks ago. In the midst of the gayety at the table a child's voice was heard coming from the floor above.

"Mother!"

"What is it, Archie?" she asked.

"There's only clean towels in the bathroom. Shall I start one?"

Hardly!

"My dear," said the professor's wife, "a truck ran over your best hat."

"Really?" answered the professor. "Was I wearing it?"

Interference

"Are you still writing profound articles?" asked the lady with a roll of manuscript.

"No," answered Miss Cayenne, "I found it interfered with my more serious duties. You can't spill ink and pour tea simultaneously."

Child Will Read Story That He Thinks Is Good

"Who shall define interest for another person, compounded as it is of the raw material of which personality is made?" queries a writer in the Parents' Magazine, declaring that there is apt to be one of two reasons why a child does not like to read. Either he has not mastered the technique of reading to an extent where no voluntary effort must be exerted or else he has not had access in sufficient numbers to books which correspond to his idea of a good story.

"Your child will read if he but discovers the books particularly right for his interests and tastes," declares the writer whose experiences with children and books has convinced her that there does not live the youngster who will not listen to a good story, and since reading is only a method of listening to a good story, will not read if the book is about something in which he is either actually or potentially interested; is written in words and style suitable to his reading ability; has the degree of advancement suitable to both his emotional and intellectual age levels. Those two developments, by the way, are at entirely different rates of speed. As the writer adroitly puts it: "Children do the strangest juggling and somersaulting as regards these ages, going into a handspring a poised adolescent, coming up at the end, an emotional eight-year-old."

In the Senate

The special session of the State Legislature recently called by the Governor to consider and enact social insurance legislation is now fully organized and at work.

There are few changes in the committee appointments for this session. Most of the committee assignments of the former regular session were continued. There being in the Senate two new members some re-assignments, of course, became necessary. Some committees which during this session will deal with major bills were increased in membership. Your Senator retains all former committee assignments and was given the Chairmanship of the Committee of Rural Credit and State Developments.

General legislation will not be given much consideration at this session. Such general legislation will necessarily cause a serious delay for the issues as are most vital at this time and for which the special session has been called. The time for any special session must be necessarily be limited and therefore is cannot accept for consideration the hundreds of bills dealing with every angle of legislation. All legislation which deals in principle with matters pertaining to relief have therefore become privileged at this session. These vital matters are worthy of the full time of any special session

The Governor gave his message on Tuesday December 3rd. His message was clear and concise. It dealt with the scope of legislation for which the Legislature had been called into extraordinary session. He did not, however, suggest any limitations of the legislation to be considered as that would be infringement on the sessions own authority. The means he suggested from where additional revenue might be raised for pension purposes were fully in accord with taxation principles which he formerly has been the spokesman for. Except for the suggestion of pensions with no fixed maximum and his suggestion of depriving counties of their present revenue from cash and credit taxations and that of diverting these revenues into the State Treasury the result of which would be an additional county levy on real estate, his message is much worthy of consideration. Taxes must be levied where there actually are sources of revenue. While all who have citizenship privileges should pay some taxes in return for the services they receive from their government the bulk of the load must be made to rest where returns are available. It would be futile to sink any well where there was no vein from which to draw water.

The Welfare Committee which will deal with pension legislation will begin its work next week by conducting public hearings after which it will immediately begin work on such pension legislation as has been introduced. It is also planned to have a public hearing concerning rural credit legislation in order to discover any weaknesses there actually may be in present rural credit legislation. The Rural Credit Department reports a doubled amount of liquidation activities since the legislation of the last regular session. That indicates very forcefully that the legislation which was enacted in the last regular session has been beneficial. There are, however, yet several phases of the rural credit problem that must be solved. Our effort at the last session to lower the rate of interest on rural credit loan without cost to the Rural Credit Department and therefore also without cost to the taxpayers has failed by the refusal of the State Executive Council to accept payment of such rural credit bonds as comprise investment of state trust funds. In their recent explanation of this refusal given to me and the other members of the Rural Credit Committee and which explanation was also released to the press the Executive Committee maintains that it would be poor business for it to withdraw the state trust funds from this investment since there is no other place where such safe and profitable investment of these funds can be made. We can readily grant the truth of this statement realizing that nowhere else can our State Executive Committee at this time invest state trust funds and receive over four per cent (4%) interest, but when this has been said it must also be noted that the farmers of our state who have rural credit loans are asked to pay the State of Minnesota a higher rate of interest for its trust funds than anybody else will pay for them and not only that but at the same time this investment of state trust funds in the Rural Credit Department is considered one of the safest investments that can be made.

Lest this column becomes too lengthy we shall close here for this week. May I express my appreciation to all of the papers who accept these columns, which quite regularly will appear while the Senate is in session. We believe that these columns are of importance to all of the people of our district and that the newspapers who accept these columns are giving a valuable public service.

Sincerely,
Senator E. L. Tungseth

MANY ATTEND PROGRAM

It is estimated more than a thousand people from thruout the county attended the program given last Friday evening at the municipal auditorium at Thief River Falls when seven community organizations participated in presentation of plays and other entertainment features. Clubs taking part were Silverton, Smiley, Wyandotte, Steiner, Kratka, Rocksbury and the St. Hilaire Parent-Teachers Association. The latter organization presented the second number on the program, a one-act playlet entitled "The Dummy." All acts were very well presented and won hearty approval of all who witnessed them.

CORN-HOG CHECKUP IN COUNTY ENDED

The final Corn-Hog compliance has been completed, says R. M. Douglas, County Agent, and farmers cooperating in the 1935 Corn-Hog program are urged to stop in at the County Agent's office to sign the final compliance certificates so that the final payment on the 1935 contract can be made as soon as possible.

In order to prevent unnecessary delay in making final payments all Compliance Certificates should be completed by December 31, at which time all completed forms will be forwarded for payment. Any not completed by that time will have to be submitted at a later date, resulting in delayed certifications.

There will be services at the local M. E. church next Sunday evening at 8:00 with a social hour following. All welcome.

Fred Marquette has purchased a small tract of land along east side of the Red Lake river south of Thief River Falls and expects to move his family there in the near future.

According to information received at this office, work of clearing and improving the local cemetery under WPA is to be started in the near future.

A few people turned out for the adult education meeting held here fore part of the week. It was planned to organize and have regular weekly meetings, but organization was deferred until after the holidays.

Miss Ruth Onerheim, who had had charge of the 7th and 8th grade room at the local school since opening of school last September, has resigned her position and will return to her home at Madison, Minn.

The Mission Ladies Aid held its annual business meeting on Friday at which time all officers were re-elected for the coming year as follows: Mrs. Alex Swanson, chairman; Mrs. G. M. Erickson, Vice chairman; Mrs. Walter Hilligoss, secretary; Hattie Dahlstrom, treasurer; Mrs. Geo. Peterson, assistant treasurer.

Regular monthly meeting of the board of education was at the school building Tuesday evening this week.

A meeting of the Woman's Club was held at the B. M. Club rooms at the Bilden & Olsen building Wednesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nelson of Fargo, former residents of this village, are in charge of opening of the new National Tea Company grocery store at Thief River Falls. Mr. Nelson is district manager for the concern.

CALENDARS HERE

The 1936 community calendars issued by the Business Men's Club of St. Hilaire have been received and are now ready for distribution at the Spectator office. There are two kinds this year, one for those residing in town, and another for country use. Both have a picture of the creamery. As has been the custom before, it is especially requested that none but adults ask for copies. Positively none will be given to children as the supply is limited and the club desires there be no duplications in placement.

MR. AND MRS. LOUIS W. GIESE HONORED ON ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Louis W. Giese, who live at Sirek near East Grand Forks, were surprised in their home Tuesday evening by about 30 of their friends who gathered to help celebrate the 20th wedding anniversary of the couple. Grand-nola played at several tables provided the entertainment with score honors going to Mrs. Dan McDonald and John Bruman. Lunch was served by the self-invited guests with a wedding cake centering the table. Yellow tapers in crystal holders were a part of the decorations. The honored couple were presented with a china dinner set by their friends. Mr. and Mrs. Giese were married November 25, 1915. Mrs. Giese was formerly Miss Ella Jackson of St. Hilaire, Minn.—East Grand Forks Record.

After being incapacitated a couple months because of an injury to his right hand, Harry Winter has re-opened his barbershop in the Branum building.

NOW MAKING BEE HIVES IN SHOP HERE

Albert Brink and August Berglund have commenced operations at their recently completed bee hive manufacturing shop. They have sufficient orders ahead to keep the place running every day until the honey season opens next summer. At present they are engaged in making up the "furniture" for interior of the hives of which they will make many thousands of pieces. Later on they will make up the hives. Three or four men will be steadily employed at the shop during the winter months.

Local apiarists are planning to expand their business in this territory by a hundred per cent or more next year. Sam Pearson, Harry Winter, Al Brink and August Berglund all contemplate having twice as many stands of bees in 1936 as they had this year.

MUCH WOOD COMING IN

More wood is being marketed here this year than has been customary for many years past. As weather has been quite mild thus far this winter, most villagers have used wood in preference to coal. After the holidays, both the school and the creamery will purchase their annual supply of wood which will furnish ready market for a large amount.

Vernon Hagglund came Friday evening from Fargo and visited until Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ole Hagglund. Vernon is employed in a job printing shop at Fargo.

Political Problems

Washington.—A politician without a problem confronting him is virtually unknown. Whether he be a big shot in political life or just a ward heeler, his life is constantly beset with difficulties. Those difficulties always have and always will force him to wiggle and squirm and sprout additional gray hairs.

The newest problem worrying politicians is the Townsend old age pension proposal. Promoters of that fantastic scheme are gaining such a headway that even James A. Farley, postmaster general, chairman of the Democratic national committee and chairman of the New York state Democratic committee, is currently reported to be developing frowns on his otherwise smiling face. When Mr. Farley begins to get worried, there is cause, indeed, for all of the other politicians, big and little, to get worried. The Republicans also are concerned about the Townsend plan. But it is not quite as important to the Republicans as it is to the Democrats to take a stand on the Townsend plan because the Democrats are in control of the national administration and obviously they are on the defensive.

The battle being pressed by Mr. Townsend and his satellites is no small concern. Impossible as it is of operation; doomed to ultimate failure as such a scheme must definitely be, it continues to expand in its scope of political influence and has arrived at the point where it constitutes a power that must be reckoned with by all.

I am convinced that anyone who will analyze the Townsend plan cannot help arriving at the conclusion that it is comparable to the fantasy of the "Mississippi bubble." When the Mississippi bubble broke, not thousands but millions were disillusioned, if not utterly destroyed, and their economic future, so glowingly painted, was completely wrecked.

* * *

Townsend Plan

The Townsend plan which contemplates payment of two hundred dollars per month to the indigent is one of those things that develops invariably in periods of economic distress. It is distinctly a product of hard times.

When people are out of work and without resources; when they are suffering, they are always prey to any and all argument offering them relief. The conditions exact even a greater toll, a toll leading to crime. Only a few days ago the chief of the secret service, W. H. Moran, told me that it was a characteristic of hard times that counterfeiters of currency were more active. Idle hands will find something to do and the clever crook will take advantage of the situation. While every one who has talked with Doctor Townsend recognizes his sincerity, his earnest desire to accomplish relief for the aged and indigent population, I believe it is an indisputable fact that Doctor Townsend's plan would not get to first base except for the fact that this country now has millions of citizens who are almost if not quite without food.

The point I am trying to make is that Doctor Townsend's scheme, idle dream that it is, has been put forward at one of the few times in this nation's history when it is possible to amass a following of political importance. It is only in times such as these that people would pay attention to it. It will die down and his organization will crumble sometime in the future but this will not happen until it has caused plenty of grief, until it has wrecked political fortunes of countless scores of men and women who guess wrong and until probably it has produced a burden of taxation upon this nation the like of which never has been seen before.

In the forthcoming campaign, I believe we will see numerous political candidates, otherwise sound in their thinking, affirm the validity of the Townsend plan. They will commit themselves to its support because political maneuvers will force them into that position. Some of them, probably more than we now imagine, will be elected to congress and they will bring a gigantic headache to Uncle Sam who must foot the bill.

Townsend plan supporters in all of their preachments have consistently talked of their proposition from its beauteous side. It is susceptible of that because it is easy to point out what a blessing it would be to have each aged person receive a monthly check of two hundred dollars from the government.

But there is another side to the picture. It is basic. Where will the government get the money? Townsend spokesmen have figured out a visionary taxation scheme to raise the amount of money required but the thing they do not discuss is the fundamental fact that by their taxation scheme they will depreciate our national currency and will load upon those who are willing to work such a burden of taxation that soon there will be a clamor from three out of four of the population for some kind of a government payment. The end then would be obvious because after all government as such produces nothing. All that it pays out must be taken from those who produce.

Another Problem

In adverting to the Townsend plan as I have done, I have attempted to set forth in a manner what I believe to be one of the greatest dangers of the present day, namely, the absence of clear thinking. In the Townsend plan, as in many other problems that confront the nation at the moment, individuals seem prone to jump at conclusions without analyzing what conditions actually are and without considering what the ultimate effect would be.

It seems worth while to consider another national problem which, though of an economic nature and less sensational in its outward appearance, is nevertheless very real. This problem concerns our transportation system.

Shortly after President Roosevelt took office we were deluged with argument that amounted to propaganda favoring government ownership of the railroads. There was a reaction against this idea. The reaction was so strong that few politicians dared to unloose their demagogery in favor of government ownership. Yet, it is perfectly evident that those who favor perpetuating private enterprise which is always more efficient and less wasteful than any government are in danger of being lulled to sleep. Crack pots and misguided theorists in great numbers still favor government ownership of the railroads. They are still working. The government ownership problem is not dead. It is only concealed from the eyes of most of us for the time being.

Certain developments of the past several months confirm the statement I have just made. Taken singly, these developments appear insignificant. Collectively, they are very important.

I have heard it charged that government ownership advocates have a well-laid plan to wreck private ownership in the rail industry. This charge goes further. It asserts that those who seek to destroy our profit system are proceeding, piecemeal, to load a burden of charges upon the railroads so that in the end it will be a physical impossibility for the railroad corporations to earn a profit. Indeed, it is alleged that the scheme contemplates eventual burdening of the rail lines to the extent where they cannot make their expenses.

* * *

Means Bankruptcy

Obviously, if that end were attained, bankruptcy would follow. Then, there would be no alternative but legislative action placing the railroads in government ownership. Our wartime experience ought to be sufficient to demonstrate how the costs mount when the government operates the railroads. It means more taxes on every one of us who has income whether it be large or small.

But to get back to the developments mentioned earlier. Whether there exists an actual plan to drive the railroads into bankruptcy or not, the developments certainly are subject to that surmise. One of the items of expense, a new burden of cost that is proposed to be loaded on the railroads, is the rail pension law. I have seen some statistical calculations which were convincing to me at least that the charges proposed to be levied upon the railroads by the law will not work out in the manner their proponents claim. The bill would assess each rail corporation 3½ per cent of its payroll and each worker would contribute a proportionate amount of his salary toward his pension when he retires. Like the Townsend plan, no one can argue against the fine spirit actuating a move to protect the retired workers. But to go behind the figures at the start one finds certain astonishing facts. Almost any way, almost any method, one uses to calculate this cost, forces the conclusion that after eight or ten years the pension system will have expanded to such an extent that the railroads will be carrying an annual charge on their payroll of not 3½ per cent but approximately 15 per cent. I think it goes without saying that no industry can bear such a tax.

In addition to the pension proposition, labor unions, aided by their cats'-paws in congress have kept up a steady machine gun fire, demanding first one thing and then another from the carriers. For instance, one of the current demands—and it is likely to succeed in some form—is the movement for shorter hours for practically the entire list of railroad employees. Of course, the railroads cannot justify working their employees longer than eight hours except in an emergency. It is possible that a seven-hour day might be practiced. But even a seven-hour day would mean that the railroads must add to their operating costs, and any item added to operating costs reduces the chance of the corporations for an even break between income and outgo.

There are a number of other such demands or movements under way or in the offing. Each one means a new burden, a new tax on the railroads.

With the Minnesota Lawmakers

In an effort to get an old age pension bill on the law books before Christmas, state legislators knuckled down to the business of drafting a measure designed to include the best features of conflicting proposals so far laid before them. To expedite the task, the house appointed a special committee headed by Representative George MacKinnon of Minneapolis. Other members are Representatives M. F. Ettel of St. Paul, George W. Champlin of Lake Crystal, T. S. Slen of Madison, Marcus Nelson of Tamarack and R. G. Johnson of Forest Lake, who is chairman of the public welfare committee.

Representative MacKinnon called his group into immediate action and advised them to remain at the capitol over the week-end to get a bill to the house within the first three or four days of the new week. Despite controversial opinion on the amount of the monthly pensions, the beginning age and administrative problem, Representative MacKinnon said difficulties can be ironed out for final approval on the floor.

While preparations were being rushed for enactment of the old age pension bill, indications were that unemployment insurance will be a long time getting on the statute books. Legislative leaders indicated there will be a long adjournment over the holidays, beginning December 20 and probably ending in the middle of January. There was no disposition to rush back after the holidays unless the relief situation requires immediate attention.

Meanwhile there is a strong disposition in both houses to let the unemployment insurance bill go until the 1937 regular session, although many leaders insist that some sort of measure should be passed simply to assure the state protection under provisions of the federal social security law. The state law, it was explained, could be so drafted that it would become inoperative should the supreme court nullify the federal act.

With an approval of the demand for the repeal of the 1935 law which dropped levies against personal property but increased them on livestock, the house tax committee let down the first barriers in the rural legislators' fight for a restoration of the personal property tax on household goods.

In presenting their case to the committee, rural legislators said that farmers throughout Minnesota are demanding a restoration of the old status, which exempted $100 of household goods, farm machinery, and livestock from the levies. The low $25 exemption on the machinery and livestock items the advocates declared, has more than made up the difference of what the agriculturist has saved on household goods.

Estimating that the administration of the old age pension law and its adjuncts will cost $608,500 during the next year, Mrs. Blanche la Du, chairman of the state control board, told joint committees of the two houses that her board will seek to administer the law through county welfare boards.

The rural credits body of the senate decided not to request the rules committee to recommend consideration of a bill designed to expedite liquidation of the state rural credits department. They agreed, however, to confer with Theodore Arens, conservator of the department, concerning rural credits problems, and set 1 p. m. on December 19 for a meeting with farmers holding rural credit loans.

Shocked by the brutal murder of Walter Liggett, crusading Minneapolis publisher of the Mid-West American, legislators planned action along two lines after copies of the last issue of Liggett's paper had been placed on their desks.

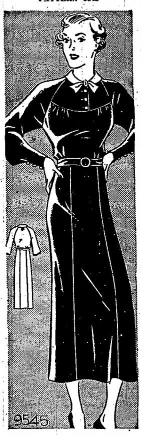
One move was for the appropriation of $2,500 as a reward for the apprehension and conviction of the killer or killers. Several legislators hinted that they would introduce such a bill, and it was understood that Gov. Olson would sign the measure, if passed. Conservative senators were considering requesting an appropriation up to $50,000 for a state-sponsored investigation of underworld activities in Minnesota, particularly in and about Minneapolis.

Senator Tungseth has resumed his campaign to force refinancing of $25,000,000 of rural credit bonds now held in state trust funds, which so far has been held up by State Treasurer, Julius A. Schmahl.

An attack on educational institutions owning tax exempt income property was launched by Rep. R. J. Julkowski, Minneapolis, who introduced a bill authorizing submission of a proposed constitutional amendment at the next election. Adoption of the amendment would pave the way for the levying of real estate taxes on such property now owned by colleges, universities, and schools. Rep. Julkowski's proposal recalled the Pillsbury academy case which aroused great controversy in the regular session last year.

A Dressy Frock Fitting Budget

PATTERN 9545



"As easy as pie" to fit between two graceful raglan sleeves, a wedge-shaped yoke is a distinguishing feature of this rather dressy, yet inexpensive afternoon frock. You'll find it hard to decide which sleeve treatment is the more charming, the one that tapers to a snugly buttoned cuff, or the one which stops just short of the wrist. Don't forget to note the very new, gored skirt with its subtle flare: If it's a dressy dress you want, black satin is ideal; but if you're out for color, choose a richly hued novelty synthetic.

Pattern 9545 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards 39 inch fabric and ⅜ yard contrasting. Complete diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., 232 West Eighteenth St., New York, N. Y.

Funny Business

The University of Kansas' "dime-a-date" bureau went to the wall with assets of 45 cents and a handful of practical jokes. Leo Gottlieb, who operated the bureau only a week, offered dates for men or coeds at 10 cents and "25 cents if satisfied." He admitted practical jokers furnished two-thirds of his business.

Joys and Troubles

The fact that our joys rarely come up to anticipations is more than counterbalanced by the fact that our troubles are never as bad as we anticipate.

Fairy Story Is Told on Danish Postage Stamps

A fairy story from the post office is very unusual, but the Danish post office is sending them out in millions.

It is a hundred years since Hans Anderson was born, and running through the leaves in the books of stamps that bear his picture is the famous but sad story of the little girl who sold matches and struck the last three or four she had to try to keep warm before she died.

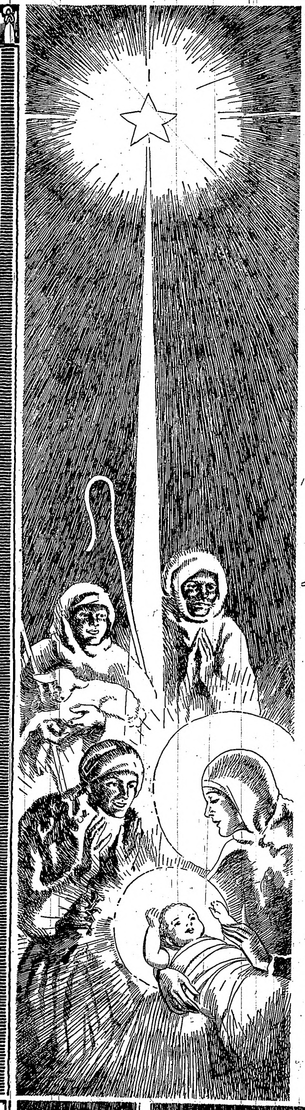
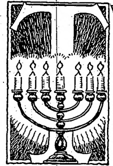
Where Christmas Really Began

By Sara Lockwood Williams





TWO THOUSAND YEARS AGO Augustus Caesar issued a decree that all the world was to be taxed.

Thus Joseph took Mary, his betrothed, from the home of her mother Ann in Jerusalem and journeyed to Bethlehem to pay their taxes. Now the way was six miles. Mary, seated sidewise on a small donkey, with their few belongings tied in a cloth hanging across the donkey's neck, and Joseph trudging beside her, found their way through the narrow streets of ancient Jerusalem, through the Joppa (or Jaffa) Gate down into the Valley of Gihon, then up to the ridge or water-shed of Palestine's hill country and on to the Plain of Rephaim. Midway on the plain they probably paused beside the road to drink from a well. They did not know this well would some day be called the Well of the Magi because the three Wise Shepherds following "God's bright star" would stop there to drink and to see the star reflected in the water's depths as they traveled by camel to Bethlehem in search of Jesus, the Son soon to be born of Mary.

Joseph and Mary were humble and fine and they loved each other. They gazed happily across the well-cultivated terraced valleys, across the fields where shepherds guarded their flocks, noted the old stone watch towers where the farmers and shepherds could go to look far across their lands in all directions. Then they glimpsed the city of Bethlehem, a small and humble village whose rock walls, cobbled streets and stone buildings showed gray and uninviting.

The man and woman wended their way through the throngs of tax-payers about the bazaars and found the inn where they sought lodging. The inn was overflowing. People were having to sleep by the wayside. Now Mary was with child and Joseph wanted to protect her and make her comfortable, but no room was to be had. So the couple sought shelter in the stable beside their tiny donkey. The stable was a cave or grotto in the rocks with crude wooden mangers filled with hay. Here, in the year 4 B.C., the thirty-third year of the reign of Herod the Great, Jesus of Nazareth was born. Mary wrapped Him in swaddling clothes and laid Him in a manger. Here the shepherds, to whom angels had announced the Saviour's birth, came to kneel low beside the humble bed and lay their gifts before the Babe whom they adored.

Because this Babe was born the whole world rejoices and celebrates Christmas. Joy, peace, love, humility—all the great truths of Christianity came to the world with His birth. The basis of modern civilization lies in the little town of Bethlehem.

Even as the Wise Men 2000 years ago made their way to the shrine, so pilgrims, tourists, believers and non-believers journey today across the self-same road, still the main artery of communication between Jerusalem and all the southern part of Israel. They see the Well of the Magi, the terraced gardens, the shepherds' fields, and the old, old watch towers. The highway is now smoothly paved. The travelers all too often ride in luxurious motor cars. But they still pass caravans of camels and asses and see pedestrians garbed in costumes of many lands. For pilgrims come from near and far to the Holy Land, particularly to ancient Bethlehem, whose grayness has increased with centuries of dust and erosion on its leaden-hued stones. But dull as is its outward appearance, few approach the city without a thrill of reverence and awe, without renewing acquaintance with the Holy Scriptures and gaining inspiration and faith. Today they cross the lively bazaars where "objects of piety" made of shells, mother-of-pearl and olive wood have wide space among the food-stuffs and goods for sale. They go to the Church of the Nativity, Bethlehem's greatest relic of antiquity. In 330 B. C. Constantine built this basilica above what is believed to be the grotto-stable in which Christ was born. The church looks like a fortress and its entrance door is so small even a short person must stoop to enter. It was made thus not, as some say, to cause thoughts of humility and reverence upon entering so holy a place, but to prevent the ancient Saracens and Turks when they were in power from desecrating the place with cattle. Five different nationalities of Christians now guard this church and hold services here. The place is strikingly simple. The Greek Orthodox and the Armenian and Syrian churches occupy the main floor. Two circular stairways lead to the dark caves below. There is a chapel in the grotto. On the floor is a great silver star with silver nails over a hollow where Mary is said to have given birth to Jesus. Around the star is the inscription:

"Hic de Virgine Maria Jesus Christus Natus Est."

Fifteen silver lamps unceasingly burn day and night over this holy place. Four belong to the Latins, six to the Greek Orthodox, and five to the Armenians and Syrians. Representatives from many Christian nations kneel in common before the little altar. Seldom is the grotto without worshippers. Whether or not they believe this to be the authentic spot of the Nativity, it carries the atmosphere of holiness and spirituality. The handsome, proud natives of Bethlehem seem always a happy people, but at Christmas time Bethlehem radiates Joy.

DICK TAPPITT put down his glass of applejack and looked across at Garrison with eyes that shone.

"Maybe you've heard of grander, crazier guys than Sam," he said; "I never have."

"And you mean to tell me," the publicity man asked, "that he deliberately broke his leg so you and Mollie would take this job? Man, what a story!"

He pulled a scratch pad toward him and began scribbling notes on it. The two were alone in his office, near the west end of Zenith studio's administration building. Dick Tappitt lounged back on the big leather davenport and approved!

"Good! This is something I'd really like to see played up. It might help Sam get a better break, and that's what I want more than anything else. He's the best honest-to-Pete pal a man ever had, and I—well, I feel as if I'd given him kind of a raw deal.

"You see, Sam, and I've been hoofing together for about three years—five-a-day routine on the small time back East. Six months ago we met Mollie; she was on the same bill with us in St. Joe. Well, right away Sam wanted her to join, so after the show he looked her up, they had a talk, and next day we were rehearsing a new trio song-and-dance act.

"Mollie did worlds for us," he went on; "she added the sex appeal and the touch of class our stuff had been needing. What's more, we all got along well together. In a way, though, that was the rub: before long both Sam and I were nuts about Mollie.

"She wasn't the sort of a girl to bust things up by being partial, so she handled us with kid gloves. Still, Sam could guess what I knew: that Mollie really cared for me. Understand, I'm not taking anything for granted; Sam talked to me and offered best wishes the day before we left to come out here. That's the kind of 24-karat boy he is, and ever since then he's tried to help us along and ease himself out of the picture. But I wouldn't have that."

He lit a cigarette, rose, and commenced to walk about the room. It was evident the situation affected him deeply. Garrison wore a look of encouraging interest and kept pencil poised above paper. This, he knew, was first-rate material on a subject worthy of attention. Mollie Hoppe and Dick Tappitt were certain to become as famous as any dancing team in pictures. The screen test of them he'd seen today established that.

"We were getting up in the game," Dick resumed; "making a hit on the bigger circuits. But we all knew there wasn't much further to go; vaudeville's a very sick business these days. So we pooled our dough, bought a flivver, and steamed West. We had some fancy ideas about what we'd do when we hit Hollywood; but a month of pounding the pavements and chasing agents after we got here cured those.

"That was when Sam began to do his stuff. First he took an usher's job to keep us going, then he landed Mollie and me a tryout in a cabaret down at the beach. And now—now he's pulled this. What a d—n' fool—and what a prince!"

"Just how did this leg-breaking business happen?" asked Garrison. The dancer grinned to hide his emotion.

"Well, when we clicked in the beach job, we wanted to have Sam back with us, but he stalled and said he guessed he'd stick with what he had. Of course I knew the answer: by that time Mollie and I weren't hiding our feelings much, and Sam thought he'd be in the way.

"Poor guy—he sure had the wrong slant! Mollie felt bad about it, and naturally I did too. I mean, after losing her to me and then with all he'd done for us, it seemed just plain lousy to have him cut out of the act. That's why when this offer came along, we said nothing doing unless Sam's included. It was Mollie's idea, and I backed her up strong.

"Well, sir, Sam goes out to the ABC plant, tells 'em he's an experienced stunt man, and gets on as a parachute jumper. They sent him up to bail out at a thousand feet, and he on purpose doesn't pull the cord until he's two hundred feet from ground. See the scheme? He knew if he had an accident that laid him up, we'd sign on here.

"Mollie went over to the hospital to visit him; that's why she's late for this conference. I wanted to go along, but—Gee, what can you say to a bird like that? First I let him support me, then I glaum onto all the good breaks, and finally I grab off the girl he loves—and this is how he hits back! Lord, it sure gets me!"

As he dropped down on the divan again, a bell rang. Garrison picked up the phone at his elbow, said: "Yes?"

"McSweeney of the Journal," a crisp voice announced; "what's the lowdown on this thing the dancer you were raving over just pulled?"

"I haven't," said Louis after an instant, "the cockeyedest notion who or what you're talking about."

"Come on—cut it, will ya? You know d—n' well what I mean. That Mollie Hopp you claim is due to be a wow phoned the license bureau from Good Samaritan hospital ten minutes ago; she wants to file notice of intention with some bird named Sam Trotter. One of my boys called her and asked for details, but all she said was she'd just found out how close sympathy is to love. Now what's the angle?"

Mother Shipton Famous as Guesser of Events

According to tradition, Mother Shipton lived in the Fifteenth century and foretold such events as the suppression of the monasteries in England, the burning of heretics at Smithfield, the Great Fire of London, etc., says the Detroit News. Most of her supposed prophecies, however, were not published before the middle of the Seventeenth century, and some of them were written by Charles Hindley not much more than 50 years ago. These include the invention of the automobile, telegraph and telephone, iron ships, airplanes, submarines, great gold discoveries, the end of the world in 1881. Her World war prophecy was given as follows: "The time shall come when seas of blood shall mingle with a greater flood. Great noise there shall be heard, great shouts and cries, and seas shall thunder louder than the skies. Then shall three lions fight with three and bring joy to a people, honor to a king. That fiery year as soon as o'er, peace shall then be as before; plenty shall everywhere be found and men with swords shall plow the ground."

Death Valley Is Deepest Dry Depression in U. S.

Death valley proper is about 100 miles from north to south and from two to eight miles wide, and it lies in the midst of a vast region of rugged, barren ranges and gorges. It is the deepest dry depression in the United States, most of it lying from 200 to 330 feet below sea level, observes a writer in the New York Times. It is shut in by the Panamint, Cottonwood, Grapevine and Funeral mountains, the ranges rising abruptly on every side. Less than 100 miles away is Mount Whitney, the highest peak in the United States, with an elevation of 14,496 feet.

Varying stories are told of the disasters which gave the valley its sinister name. The most generally accepted one is to the effect that a party of 50 emigrants, on their way to the California gold fields, entered the valley by mistake, lost their way and perished of thirst. Others believe that the party was attacked by Indians and fought, with their wagons in a circle, until the last man fell. Two survivors are said to have reached the coast. It is thought, too, that the travelers may have drunk from poisonous springs, of which there are many in the valley's hemming mountains.

Cumulose Soil-Building Material

Parent soil materials are said to be "cumulose" when they are formed on the edges of ponds and lakes, and in swamps, by the continued addition of new vegetable matter which, by reason of its accumulation under water or where it is very wet, undergoes only partial decomposition. Such deposits of peat or muck may range from a few acres to hundreds, or even to thousands of acres in extent. Such soils in different parts of the country are used extensively for the growing of celery, onions and other truck crops, and in some of the mid-western states they are used, on a large scale, for the growing of alfalfa, potatoes, and mint, grown for its oil.

"Blond Baby"

By LEE CALVERT

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate.
WNU Service.

STELLA NORTON poked the pillows into a more comfortable angle at her back and picked up the open letter on the counterpane. Two warnings in one morning were sufficient to rouse her to action. Etta's telephone call had followed immediately on the receipt of a letter from the ingenue of the company whose innuendoes had not been as carefully veiled as she had hoped.

It would be like Billy to get roped by a chorus girl. Stella was frankly panicked.

"I had a letter yesterday from Fay Campbell who is in Chi with 'Pretty Baby,'" Etta had said in the cat-has-eaten-a-mouse-tone. "She says that Billy sure likes 'em young and snappy. There's a blond baby—"

"Oh, yes," Stella broke in, confident, however, that Etta would not believe the hastily invented lie, "that's Margie Ray's cousin and Billy got her with the show."

It was only the second time in their twenty years of married life that Stella had been separated from Billy. The first had been when Jane Ann was born eighteen years before. Jane Ann was the most exquisite mortal ever created, in her parents' opinion, and was still safely tucked away from the turmoil of their theatrical world in a small exclusive school in Cleveland.

Warnings had reached her then, as now, and just a few weeks after the infant's birth, Stella had lost no time in rejoining the troupe of which Billy Taylor was the leading comedian. The chorus girl who had understudied her none too well on the stage, had endeavored to replace her out of the theater.

Poor Billy! He was so susceptible. A trim ankle was as provocative to him as a sweet pea to a bee. Not that Stella believed that he had ever been more than mentally untrue to her. But it had been a slightly difficult life keeping him clear of scrapes.

"There's no fool like an old one," she muttered. "At your age, Billy Taylor, you should have some sense."

An inconsiderate appendix had sent her to the hospital just a few days before June Francis opened in Cleveland. For six weeks she had raged and fumed, for not only a well founded fear of Billy's misadventures prompted her anxiety, but also an acknowledged fact that Billy never played as well as when she was present.

"Billy ought to consider Jane Ann," Stella fussed. "Doctor or no doctor, I'm going to leave for Chicago tomorrow. I won't wait another week. That may be too late."

Stella carefully timed her arrival in Chicago. She drove directly to the hotel where Billy and she always stayed and had her bags checked in the parcel room.

"Don't you want to go up, Miss Norton?" the clerk who knew her, inquired.

"It's a surprise for Mr. Taylor," she refused. "I'll go directly to the theater, but if I should miss him, please do not mention that I am here."

She would drive to the theater and park the taxi opposite the stage entrance, she would follow Billy, and. . . . It was another nasty mess she feared, but she was not taking any chances with her happiness or Jane Ann's. Billy of course would be penitent, as always.

Stella sat back in the corner of her cab watching. The matinee jam evaporated. One by one the members of the company emerged, blinking in the bright light of the late afternoon sun. Stella's heart beat more rapidly. Any moment now and Billy would come.

The echo of Billy's effervescent chuckle reached her and she leaned as far forward as she dared, without being seen as the comedian's long slight figure appeared. With him was Jane Ann clinging adoringly to her father's arm.

What was Jane Ann doing there in Chicago? Stella shook her head to clear her eyes and then leaning forward, her arms extended, called to the pair standing in the shadow of the stage door.

"Billy—Jane Ann."

"Stella!"

"Stella!" Billy Taylor was half in and half out of the automobile, his arms around her and his lips on hers. "Stella, old girl, this is a surprise! I didn't expect you for weeks."

"So I see," she lifted her daughter's face to hers. "Jane Ann, what are you doing here?"

"Oh Mommie, darling," Jane Ann flung herself in the waiting arms, almost strangling her mother in her embrace. "I knew you would never let me go on the stage; not for years and years and years. When Daddy left Cleveland I ran away and met him at the train and he just had to take me with him, didn't you, Billy dear?" she appealed. "And Mommie, darling, no one knows who I am. I use a stage name and I'm in the chorus, and I love it so."

Stella Norton sat between them, an arm encircling each. This was the one time she need have no fear of a Blond Baby. Perhaps if Jane Ann were with him, Billy would be so busy teaching her the tricks of the game he knew so well he would have no time for anyone else. And after twenty years of vigilance, some rest was due her. . . .

"Oh, Mommie," their daughter was pleading, "please don't send me back."

Stella patted her hand gently. "You haven't an ounce of sense, Billy Taylor," she scolded, but both husband and daughter read the laughter in her voice. "The minute my back is turned you get into mischief, both of you!"

Here's Absent-Minded Professor Lost in City

Cleveland, Ohio.—Here's a true "absent-minded professor" story:

Though Dr. Paul A. Biefeld, retired professor of astronomy and director of Swasey observatory at Denver university, has traveled worldwide, he came up here from Granville, Ohio, got lost from relatives and friends and didn't know what to do.

He had attended the theater with his wife, daughter and friends. Somehow he became separated from them. He forgot his daughter's address. It didn't occur to him that her address would be in the telephone book, so he spent the night in the Y. M. C. A.

Relatives, distraught, asked police to look for an amnesia victim. Doctor Biefeld's safety was not established until finally he telephoned a friend. He occupies several lines in "Who's Who in America" and is an astronomical authority.

Wanted Youth Found Caddying for Judge

Port Arthur, Texas. — Deputy Sheriffs Claude Goldsmith and T. G. Pool put in a hard day recently searching for a youth who was wanted on an old burglary indictment.

They went to his home several times and searched all places the youth frequented, but with no results. Finally, they decided to wait at his home until he returned.

Upon their arrival they found him, less than five minutes after Criminal Judge R. L. Murray, who was to hear the case, had left him there.

The boy had been caddying for Judge Murray while the officers searched.

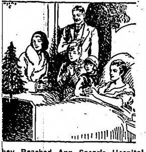
Santa Explains

Mary Pines for Her Pines

(A Christmas Story)

By Luella B. Lyons

MARY MINTER left her home from south of the Mason-Dixon line to marry Jack Howard. That's how she happened to be hating her new home in the North—hating the snow and cold and the fireworks she knew she was missing down home that Christmas day. Gazing out of the window all she could see were pine trees from four inches to sixty feet in height. Cedars! Pines! Spruces! She hated the words, even.



They Reached Ann Spear's Hospital Room and Made Explanations.

"How about a Christmas tree in the house, honey? Maybe that would help cheer you, do you suppose? I know you're eating your heart out with lonesomeness for home this, your first Christmas away," Jack offered, but Mary spurned his sympathy.

"A tree. A tree, did you say? Ha ha," she laughed bitterly, "go out there and on up the Ridge and look at those trees there by the hundreds and thousands. Imagine they are all Christmas trees if you like." Jack gave up trying to placate her but he understood—she was at that stage of homesickness.

About noon there came a phone call from their nearest neighbor, Milt Spears. His wife was in the city hospital, 40 miles away, and he had promised to visit here there, taking the two youngsters, but about an hour ago Milt had sprained an ankle and now—would Mary and Jack take the kids and go in his place?

What difference did it make if it was nearly nightfall when the pair and the two youngsters reached Ann Spears' hospital room and made the explanations and witnessed the relief that was so evident on the anxious wife's face.

"But where did you find such a novel tree arrangement, Mrs. Howard?" Ann's doctor wanted to know the moment he sighted the midget Christmas tree Mary had fixed up at a moment's notice. "Why, they are the niftiest things I've ever seen yet, and I'd like to buy a dozen of them."

A strip of painted tin that was bent to hang over the head of a bed into the shape of a shelf or bracket formed the foundation. A tiny cedar seedling about eight inches high formed the tree. Mary had stripped a wealth of tube roses she had been growing, to tie the blossoms all over that midget village tree. Fitting into a slot on that little tin bracket, it smiled its blessing upon the gathering.

Any Yuletide you might stop by the Howard Midget Christmas Tree Farm to find Mary and Jack getting a bit of rest from their labors, another glorious selling campaign over for another year. Yes, you'll find Mary there, for she does get pretty lonely when she must be away from her thousands of beloved midget conifers any length of time!

Christmas Cracker From France

The Christmas cracker came from France about eighty years ago.

Mrs. Durkee's Christmas Gander

By Martha B. Thomas

MRS. DURKEE had a gander, a fine strong bird with fine strong wings. Wherever Mrs. Durkee went the gander went, too.

Some years ago a goose egg had been given to Mrs. Durkee. It was a very large egg and ready to hatch, but a fox had killed the mother goose. It should make, when hatched and grown up, a fine Christmas dinner! Just as Mrs. Durkee prepared a nest for it, the shell cracked and out popped a head with very surprised eyes. From that moment the gosling and Mrs. Durkee became friends. She no more thought of him in terms of roasting than she would think of a neighbor in that unkind manner.

The widow lived alone and as the gander grew to manhood (so to speak), she depended more and more on him. Sometimes at night she would rouse him and he would untuck his head from his wing and escort her forth under a wintry moon.

And now, at the Christmas season, Gander was in full plumage and of a stern temper.

Christmas eve she sat alone by her kitchen fire, and there came a knock at the door. A man stood there and before she could speak pushed his way in. Seeing no one about, he ordered her to bring him bread and coffee and meat. She brought the man what he asked, and when he had eaten he said, "Now, give me all your money and I'll go with no trouble."

"No," said Mrs. Durkee. "I will not!"

Out came his fist and she just escaped a hard cuff on the head. She was angry enough to fight but instead went to her pantry. "I keep money in a jug here," she said and jingled some coins. At the same time she softly raised the window and whistled.

"Hey . . . come on with the cash! I'm in a hurry!"

"Yes, yes . . . some has stuck in the bottom." She made a great to-do at jingling. Then she heard a sleepy "Honk-Honk!" Her heart lifted.

"I have a few bills tucked behind the cookie jar," she added. "Let me get those." (Anything to take up time!)

She came slowly into the kitchen. "Here is your money," she said. "Oh, dear, I do believe some one is at the door. Take it quick!" She threw the coins at the man, and opened the door. In stalked the gander ready for anything.

The man shoved out his foot as if to kick him. In a moment, hissing and nipping, the great bird seemed to surround the man with heavy beating wings. The harder the unwelcome guest tried to escape the harder he was beaten back. At last, crouching and fending off the blows, he fled through the door . . . scattering coins all the way. The wad of bills had merely been a piece of make-believe.

The door slammed and the lonely widow sat down in a chair and laughed and laughed and laughed. The gander stood beside her, looking dignified and preening his ruffled feathers.

"I'd rather have you for a friend," cried Mrs. Durkee, "than all the roast ducks, turkeys and geese in the world. Merry Christmas . . . and I'll give you some fresh lettuce this minute."

The gander's bright eyes roved about the room, and he followed Mrs. Durkee into the pantry.

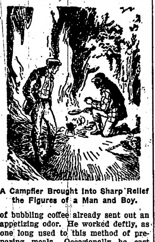
The Unposted Christmas Letter

By Jocile Webb Pearson

THE gray day was settling into a grayer night. A white mist obscured the pine covered hills and spread itself over the valley like a vast curtain shutting out familiar objects. The shriek of a locomotive sounded ghostly and unreal, as its glaring headlight penciled the darkness for a moment and disappeared. The doorway of the little railway station was outlined in a blaze of light as the attendant entered.

Despite the chilling blanket of mist a campfire a few hundred yards down the track crackled and glowed cheerily, bringing into sharp relief the figures of a man and boy. The latter, seated on a log, gazed moodily into the fire as the pine boughs rapidly consumed. His beardless face had the healthy tan of the open road, his clothing showed its neglect. The heavy shoes, soggy with the moist earth, steamed as the heat waves beat upon them, but he was unmindful of any discomfort.

The man was grizzled and weather stained, a typical person of the out-of-doors life. For the moment he was intent on arranging slices of bacon on a flattened piece of tin, later to be slid over the red coals where a can of bubbling coffee already sent out an appetizing odor. He worked deftly, as one long used to this method of preparing meals. Occasionally he cast anxious looks at the boy, as he turned the sizzling bacon and sandwiched it between thick slices of bread. With steady hand he poured the steaming coffee into separate cans, then called to the boy:



A Campfier Brought Into Sharp Relief the Figures of a Man and Boy.

"Sit up, Jimmy! Ye must be starved after the day's tramp. Walkin' the rails is hard work, but we're not ones for stealing rides, we pay like gintlemen or walk, eh, lad?"

The boy started from his reverie. "Hitch hiking beats walking for rapid transit if you're in a hurry, Tim," Jimmy grinned. "Gee, that bacon smells great. I'm as hungry as a camp robber."

They ate in silence, each busy with his own thoughts. When the meal was finished, the man produced a short-stemmed pipe from an inner pocket of his heavy woodsman coat, filled it, crowding the tobacco in with his thumb; then stooping he scooped a live coal from the fire and puffed a moment in quiet satisfaction; watching the boy from under his shaggy eyebrows as he added fresh fagots to the dwindling blaze.

The boy, with hands thrust deep in his pockets, continued to move restlessly about. "Gee, Tim, this weather is getting on my nerves. We've had days of it. I'm beginning to want to see the sun again."

The old man laid aside his pipe. "Now, lad, suppose ye tell Tim all about it. What's botherin' ye—I've missed that whistle of yourn. What's on yer mind?"

Jimmy resumed his seat on the log. "Oh, nothing much, Tim. I guess I'm sort of cuckoo tonight, just thinking—oh, shucks! it's nothing, anyway."

"Go on, lad, I'm listenin'."

A slow color mounted to the boy's face. "It's thinking of Christmas, Tim. It's only three days off, and—and I've never been away before. It doesn't matter, forget it." He hastily threw a pine bough into the fire.

"Three days, ye say, lad? An' me forgettin' it. Now, where'd ye say ye come from?"

"Iowa, Tim."

"Now, do tell. I been in Ioway meself, lad, but it's a long time ago—a long time. Ye're from a farm, mebbe?"

"No, Dad's no farmer. He's a carpenter, and got along fine till hard times struck—you know how things went."

"Sure I do," Tim supplemented. "An' there wasn't much work."

"That's right, Tim, and I wasn't keen on school. I wrote a note telling Mom and Dad not to worry about me—they have three more to look out for—and I hit the trail for the great Northwest."

Tim gave him a reassuring pat. "I see, lad. An' ye're fed up an' sort of disapinted an' homesick?"

"I guess that's right, Tim. But, gosh, it was thinking of Christmas that got under my skin. They'll all be there but me. Nobody to get the tree—that was my job. We always had one, even in the hardest times. Mom's a corker to manage. Doesn't Christmas get you, too, Tim? Haven't you folks somewhere you'd like to see?"

"Mebbe, lad, an' mebbe I'd be gladder to see them, than they me. Now this town, 'Podunk,' did you say it was?"

"No. It's Mobray, and the dandiest town—not so hot for size, but it has about everything a fellow needs there, and the best grid team in the county. Gee, Tim you ought to see them huskies go after that ball and smash the line—and the crowd roaring like mad, rooting for their teams." The eager look faded—he rose abruptly.

"Guess I'll be turning in. See you later."

"Sure, lad," Tim ignored the break in the conversation. "Better bank them pine boughs under that shed over there. This drizzle will likely be snow by mornin'. I've an errand of me own to do, but I'll be back in no time. Git yer rest whilst ye kin."

An hour later the boy was awakened by a hand on his shoulder, and Tim's voice calling: "Wake up, Jimmy, I wants to talk to ye."

Jimmy sat up, rubbing his eyes. "Okay, Tim, what's on your mind? Shoot."

Tim fumbled in his pocket and produced a bit of paper. "First I want to say Merry Christmas from Timothy Ryan to Mr. James Madden of Mobray, Ioway. Here it is—a ticket to ye're old home town. An' the fast train will pick ye up in exactly forty minutes. We got to get goin', lad.

"But Tim," Jimmy blinked the last bit of sleep from his eyes. He turned the paper over and over until he was convinced it was genuine. "I—I don't understand, Tim. How did you get this and where?"

Tim laughed merrily. "One at a time, lad. First: I got it over yon at the little railway station where they sell tickets. Second, I paid fer it with money, earned money I laid by when work was good."

"That's fine of you, Tim, but I can't take your money. You need it for yourself."

"Sure ye kin, lad, an' there's enough left fer me—an' yer welcome to it. Ye see, Jimmy, I sort of tuk to ye the day we walked inter the loggin' camp jest as they were closin' down fer the winter an' we tuk the trail togither. An' when ye talked of Christmas, an' sich, ye set me thinkin'. The gift is not fer you alone, but fer yer folks who misses ye more than ye know. Old Tim's made many a mistake, I says to myself, but this ain't one, an' mebbe it will help square some of the others."

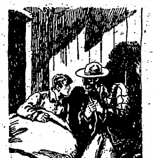
He laid a gnarled hand on the boy's shouder. "There's only one thing I'm askin', lad, an' that is: ye'll stay off the road. It's not fer the likes of ye. Go home an' finish yer schoolin'."

"You're right, Tim," Jimmy replied soberly. "I've come to realize that. You've helped me to see things differently, Tim. I've got a dandy idea." His face glowed with eagerness. "Go home with me. Mom and Dad would make you welcome; and you say you have money." But the old man shook his head. "No, no, lad, I bin on the road too long. I know yer folks wud be grand to me; much obleeged to ye fer thinkin' of it—I'll be gettin' along where there's housin' quarters, an' mebbe a bit of work."

* * * * * * *

The eastbound train came to a stop. As the slender youth was climbing aboard, with a last handclasp, old Tim pressed a crumpled bill into his hand. "Ye must eat, lad, an' don't lose yer ticket. Don't fergit ye're ridin' like a gintleman." The old man laughed, but there was an undertone of wistfulness.

Jimmy took the money. "I hadn't thought of eating, Tim. It is just that I'm going home. Home, Tim, and I owe it to you. I'll pay it back some day—I'll tell Mom and Dad what a good pal you've been—and you promised to write. I'll be thinking of you Christmas."



Tim Fumbled in His Pocket and Produced a Bit of Paper.

"Thankee, lad, thankee. Tell yer folks howdy, an' Merry Christmas fer me."

The train roared away in the white fog. Old Tim watched till the red light disappeared and the rumble grew faint in the distance. He rubbed a moist hand across his brow. "An' he called me pal. 'Tis a fine lad he is, an' I'll be missin' him. Three days to Christmas; he'll make it." By the dim light from the station window, he pulled a worn purse from his pocket and emptied the few remaining coins into his hand. He shook his head slowly. Reaching into an inner pocket he drew forth a letter addressed to a small town in Iowa; slowly he read:

"Dear Tom: I been hankerin' to see ye an' the old home agin. I'll be comin' fer Christmas. Yer brother Tim."

He tore the letter into bits. "He's worth it," he said. "The lad will be home fer Christmas."

Old Tim smiled happily as he trudged back to camp.

Christmas Is Near

A Yuletide Escapade

by

Helen Gaisford

TOOTS reigned supreme in the Martin household. Except at Christmas time. Then Toots was ordered from his favorite corners, and expressed his displeasure by a switch of his tail.

Toots was a big black persian, with long silky fur and wide yellow eyes. It was pleasant under the kitchen stove, where delicious odors of suet and fowl mingled in the warm air. "Get out of here, ye beast," shouted Cook, who was not quite herself during the holidays. "Sure I can't step but what you're underfoot."

Toots arched his back and withdrew to the parlor. "Never lose your temper", was his attitude. "Never sputter and scratch; express your displeasure in dignity and disdain."

Beside the fireplace were a stool and pillow which were peculiarly his own. Onto these Toots leaped, and curled up for a snooze. "Oh, no, Toots, darling," said Betty. "The tree's going there." And Toots was picked up under one arm, and his stool shoved off to a cold corner. "You must look Christmassy, too," Betty cried gayly, and twisted a red ribbon about his neck, and tied a bow. Toots squirmed indignantly.

"See, Mother? Why, Toots, don't tear it off! That's our Christmas outfit." The badge of merriment dangled just beyond his reach. Disgusted, Toots crawled under the sofa.

Now was his chance. Did he dare attack? The tree, gaudy with bells and tinsel, seemed to mock him.

Cautiously, Toots jumped up on the sofa, sniffed at an extended bough. A slight breeze stirred, and a golden bird in the branches quivered. Toots crouched and sprang.

The tree went down with a swish, and was ablaze in a moment. Toots was surprised and terrified. He clawed at the door, and howled to heaven.

His noise brought the family, and the blaze was soon put out, but not before considerable damage had been done. The tree was a heap of smoldering blackened limbs, and the wall above was badly burned.

"Look," said Bett. "It peels right off." And then she cried out, for a secret crypt had been uncovered, and the hoarded coins of some old tenant were brought to light.

Such excitement as the treasure chest was emptied! Toots sniffed it all inquisitively.

"Toots, darling," cried Betty, "you're a hero!" and squeezed him impulsively. "Just think, if we hadn't heard him crying, we might have been burned out of house and home! And Toots, you shall have a Christmas present.".

The parlor was locked up, and Toots' stool and cushion moved to the kitchen underneath the table. Cook was basting the turkey. A plate of goodies was offered him, but Toots only sniffed. He was tired. He found his place under the table and clawed the pillow into shape. He twisted and and scratched. He licked his fur into place. He settled down.

At peace with the world, Toots lay on his very own pillow and slept. From under one paw dangled a piece of red ribbon.

Mother's Christmas Story

By Alice B. Palmer

'TWAS Christmas eve and the children had gathered about the snow white Christmas tree, a glimmering mass of iridescent lights and icicles, to listen to that long-promised story of the Prince and Princess.

"Once upon a time," began Mother, "there was a tall handsome prince who loved a beautiful princess. They were to be married on Christmas eve—another Christmas eve, long ago.

"The gorgeous castle on the hillside was ablaze with Christmas lights. The Yule log was burning and crackling delightfully and the huge Christmas tree was sparkling gaily. But there were candles, tiny colored candles, children, instead of electric lights. They were lovely! Everything was most beautiful!"

"Oh, Mother," whispered little Rosebud, "I wish I was in that castle right now, looking at all the pretty things."

"Hurry up, Mother! Then what?" interrupted Danny, impatiently. "What happened next?"

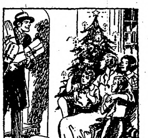
"Well, the prince and princess were married and then they all sat down to the wedding feast. Let me see," mused Mother, "they were all there—all of them, my dears. Right in the center of the table stood the most wonderful wedding cake you ever saw—a gold cake frosted with silver, and because it was Christmas the whole top was decorated with lovely little bells. You see, nothing was too good for the prince and princess, for every one loved them and wanted them to be happy, and they were happy—so happy, children."

"Well, then, did they live happy forever and ever, Mother?" Rosebud wanted to know.

"Why, of course they did," shouted Danny, indignantly. "Did you ever hear of a prince and princess who did not?"

"Only a story," pondered Mother, "Would that I, too, could be made to believe that 'twas only a story."

"The prince!" wildly shouted the children, as a tall man stood in the doorway. They felt sure they had found the real prince as they clamored for explanation.



"The Prince!" Shouted the Children. A Tall Man in the Doorway.

"Oh, look, Mother!" cried Rosebud. "Look what the prince brought—toys and dolls and everything—and—and a gold cake trimmed with silver with bells on it, too, just like the one in the story."

"Oh, boy!" shouted Danny. "This is the best Christmas we ever had. Isn't it, Mother?"

Mother whispered, "Yes, dear," and then rushed into the outstretched arms of her loving husband, the really true prince who was waiting with a great big Christmas kiss. "And they all lived happily forever after," whispered Mother, through tears of Christmas joy.

PANAMA CANAL NOT JUST MERE DITCH: A SECOND-STORY LAKE

The Panama canal is of tremendous importance, for it makes it possible for us to have one navy instead of two. The excellent way in which the locks are handled lets us move the whole of our fleet from the Atlantic into the Pacific, or vice versa, in a day and a half. And, furthermore, from a purely engineering angle this canal is more vulnerable than most.

It is not (as so many people still seem to believe) a big ditch dug across the narrow strip of mountainous land that connects North and South America. It is really a second-story lake that carries the ships from one ocean to the next by way of the attic. Instead of digging a deep ditch across the isthmus, our engineers dammed up two small rivers and created two vast artificial lakes. They then cut through the narrow mountain ridge that separated these two lakes and constructed a number of gigantic locks which carry the vessels from the Atlantic tidewaters to the artificial lake, away up high between the mountains, and which drop them just as gently when the time has come for them to go back to the other sea.

A canal like that depends for its efficiency upon its locks. Once one of the locks has been destroyed or even seriously damaged, the canal is as helpless as an automobile without gasoline.—Hendrick Willem Van Loon in Cosmopolitan.

President Defends AAA and Canadian Trade Treaty

WHILE the United States Supreme court was hearing oral arguments in the Hoosac Mills case in which the constitutionality of the whole Agricultural Adjustment act was attacked and defended, President Roosevelt was in Chicago seeking to justify the entire New Deal farm program. He addressed the American Farm Bureau federation in the International Amphitheater at the stock yards and was heard and enthusiastically applauded by some 25,000 farmers and as many others as could get into the theater and adjoining wings supplied with loud speakers.

George N. Peek

The farm program, the President said, aimed to "stop the rule of tooth and claw that threw farmers into bankruptcy or turned them into serfs." As evidence that it is succeeding, he asserted that farm income "has increased nearly $3,000,000,000 in the past two and a half years."

Necessarily Mr. Roosevelt defended the new Canadian trade treaty because only two days before that pact had been bitterly attacked by his late trade adviser, George N. Peek.

"Just as I am confident," said the President, "that the great masses of city people are fair-minded, so I am sure that the great majority of American farmers will be fair in their judgment of the new treaty.

"If the calamity howlers should happen to be right, you have every assurance that Canada and the United States will join in correcting inequalities, but I do not believe for a single moment that the calamity howlers are right.

"We export more agricultural products to Canada than we have imported from her.

"We shall continue to do so, for the very simple reason that the United States, with its larger area of agricultural land, its more varied climate and its vastly greater population, produces far more of most agricultural products, including animal products, vegetables and fruit, than does Canada.

"In the case of the few reductions that have been made, quota limitations are set on the amount that may be brought in at the lower rates."

In his analysis of the Canadian agreement, Peek showed that 84 per cent of the tariff concessions which the New Dealers granted to Canada were on agricultural and forestry products. He also showed that the articles on which the New Dealers granted tariff reductions amounted to 308 million dollars in 1929, whereas Canada in return had granted concessions on articles valued at only 245 million dollars.

After completing his speech and eating luncheon with a lot of local notables, the President went to South Bend, Ind., where he received an honorary degree from Notre Dame university and delivered another address.

Coal Act Held Invalid by Liberty League Lawyers

IN THE opinion of the lawyers' committee of the American Liberty league, the Guffey coal act is unconstitutional. Although this law, intended to stabilize the soft coal industry, has been upheld completely by one federal judge and partly by another, the committee said it violated the Constitution in that it:

1. "Capriciously and arbitrarily infringes upon the individual liberties of producers and employees" and
2. "Undertakes to regulate activities which are essentially and inherently local in character."

Neither the "pretended exercise of the taxing power through the assessment of that which is not in fact a tax but a coercive penalty" nor congressional declaraion that the industry was "affected with the public interest" made the act valid, the committee contended.

Offer Made to Italy at Ethiopia's Expense

ITALY is being punished for starting the war against Ethiopia, and will be well paid for stopping it. That in a nutshell is the status at this writing. Great Britain and France reached an agreement as to the offer to be made to Mussolini before the imposition of an oil embargo, set for December 12. This plan for peace, drawn up by British Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare and Premier Laval, was based on the proposal that Italy should retain part of the territory already conquered in Ethiopia, chiefly in northwestern Tigre province, including Adowa but not the sacred city of Aksum, and that the Italian Somaliland border should be rectified. In return, Ethiopia would be given a seaport, either in Eritrea or in British or French territory. Thus poor Ethiopia, already declared by the League of Nations to be a victim of Italian rapacity, would be still further victimized with the consent of the two great powers that dominate the league. Presumably, if Emperor Haile Selassie refuses the terms and decides to continue his fight for the territorial inviolability guaranteed by the league covenant, he will be abandoned to his fate.

Should Mussolini show a disposition to accept the proposals, it was expected the oil embargo would be postponed to permit negotiations. If he rejects the plan the embargo would go into effect and supposedly the war in Africa would continue at least until the rainy season next spring.

Italian airplanes bombed the city of Dessye three days in succession but Haile Selassie, who was there, escaped injury. However, the American hospital and a Red Cross camp were practically wrecked and many persons were killed or wounded.

Navy Limitation Parley Opened in London

PROBABLY with slight hope of accomplishing anything worth while, representatives of the United States, Great Britain, France and Japan met in London and opened the international naval conference. Italy also was represented, but only as an observer and listener. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin welcomed the delegates in a smooth address asking the chief sea powers to lessen some of their demands to "avert the calamity of unrestricted naval competition."

Admiral Nagano

Norman H. Davis offered President Roosevelt's suggestion of a 20 per cent reduction in existing naval treaty tonnage, or, failing that, a continuance of present fleet limitations.

Then arose Admiral Osami Nagano, chief of the Japanese delegation, and told the conference that Japan demanded parity with Great Britain and the United States instead of the existing 5-5-3 ratio and requested a "just and fair agreement on disarmament." He said in part:

"A new treaty, in the view of the Japanese government, should be based upon the fundamental idea of setting up . . . a common limit of naval armaments to be fixed as low as possible, which they shall not be allowed to exceed; simultaneously offensive forces must be drastically reduced and ample defensive forces provided, so as to bring about a substantial measure of disarmament, thus securing a state of nonmenace and nonaggression among the powers."

The French delegates were prepared to accept drastic limitation and even reduction of tonnage and gun calibers on individual ships; but they thought land and air armament issues must be considered in any discussion of the relative strength of navies. Italy reaffirmed her loyalty to the principle of limitation and reduction of armaments.

The pessimistic feeling that prevailed was attributed to the Japanese demand for parity, the rivalry in the Mediterranean between France and Italy, the war in Ethiopia and its sanctions developments and recent occurrences in north China. Any one of which might well wreck the conference.

Farley Thinks Midwest Safe for Roosevelt

POSTMASTER GENERAL FARLEY, in his capacity of chairman of the Democratic national committee, called that body to meet in Washington January 8, when arrangements will be made for the convention of 1936 and the place of that gathering selected. He told the correspondents that the chief bidders for the convention would be Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and San Francisco, and denied the report that the first named city already had been decided upon. He said he thought the highest bidder would be selected, provided it has adequate convention hall and hotel facilities.

J. A. Farley

Stories that Senator Donahey of Ohio or some one else would be given second place on the ticket instead of Garner were laughed at by Mr. Farley. He asserted that there was no doubt about the renomination of Garner for vice president. Asked about the two-thirds rule, he said the committee might recommend its abandonment, but that any change was the business of the convention. Commenting on the Literary Digest poll, which shows a majority in the middlewest states voting against the Roosevelt New Deal, Farley said:

"So far as the poll relates to sentiment in the midwest states, like Iowa, it is 100 per cent wrong." He insisted that the President was very strong, not only in that section of the country, but in every part.

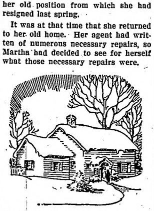
"The President will carry as many states next year as he did in 1932," said Farley. Roosevelt carried all except six states at that time. Farley said he believed Roosevelt would win the electoral vote of Pennsylvania.

The Nicest Santa Claus

BY BLANCHE TANNER DILLIN

AS SHE sat watching the fading winter sunset Martha Weeks could hear the kitten crying at the front door. Every day for a week it had been at one of the doors crying to be taken in. It was a cute little thing with its white body and black feet and tail. But Martha couldn't have it tracking mud into the house. Besides what would she do with it when she went away? For it would be foolish to refuse the offer to return to her old position from which she had resigned last spring.

It was at that time that she returned to her old home. Her agent had written of numerous necessary repairs, so Martha had decided to see for herself what those necessary repairs were.



He Was Looking for a Home for His Family.

When she saw the condition of the house and grounds, she concluded the only thing to do was to take over the work herself; find someone to help with both inside and outside work; even give up her position if necessary. It was time she was showing more love for the place; she had neglected it entirely too long. From now on she would try hard to prove worthy of her heritage. She would attempt to restore the order and beauty that had been there in former years.

All spring and summer she and her companion worked tirelessly and lovingly inside the house, painting and sewing, and outside planting and transplanting, while workmen did the heavier work. Many asked would she ever get out what she had put into it? Martha felt she was even now getting much out of it through seeing order and beauty taking the place of disorder and neglect. That her work had borne fruit was proved by many stopping to add a word of praise and those whose admiring glances were sufficient in themselves. If one of those would admire it enough to rent it.

* * * * * * * *

There wasn't much time left—she must report for work the first of the year and Christmas just a week away. How many wonderfully happy times she had had in this house at Christmas. How gay the house always was with holiday decorations. A wreath here, a rope of pine or tinsel there, here another wreath—and now the little evergreen on each side of the front step would make beautiful outdoor Christmas trees. She opened the door to look at the trees. "Meow," the kitten greeted her. Martha hesitated, then picked it up and stepped back into the house. Once inside, the kitten bounded out of her arms, looked around the room, then selected a bright orange cushion on which to take a nap. Martha's hearty laugh brought Hilda Gray, her companion, into the room.

"Behold our new tenant." Martha indicated the peacefully slumbering kitten.

"He certainly looks as though he had decided to stay."

* * * * * * * *

The sound of the knocker sent Martha hastening to open the door. The man standing on the steps asked if she was Miss Weeks. Martha gave an affirmative answer and invited him to step inside. He was the manager of the iron mills across the river and he was looking for a home for his family. He had been interested in the place ever since he first saw it, and today when he saw the kitten standing before the door he felt he just must have the house. Some one had told him that she would rent it. He hoped she would let him have the house and the kitten. The house was so like a real home and his little daughter would love the cat as she had had one just like it. He had promised her another one and if he could have the house before Christmas, he could have his family with him for the holidays, and he could give the kitten to his little girl for a Christmas gift. Satisfactory terms were soon arranged and later Martha told the kitten:

"You are quite the nicest Santa Claus I ever saw, although a queer one. And to think I almost turned you away."

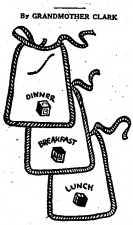
Use of Christmas Candles

The custom of using Christmas candles was introduced into this country from Europe. In Scandinavia, particularly, it is usual to place candles in the windows on Christmas eve to light Kristine, who brings the gifts. Bayberry candles are particularly appropriate because they are green, aromatic and an emblem of triumph.

Simple Set of Bibs For the Little One

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK



Plenty of bibs must always be handy for the little one and a mother is always ready to make up a few more if they cost as little as these do and also require a little handwork.

This package No. A-4 contains a set of three bibs stamped with designs like shown above on a fine quality heavy sheeting. Binding and thread are not included. The embroidery is in simple outline stitch. Send 15 cents to our stamped goods department and receive this set by mail.

Beethoven Would Appease Goethe's Anger at Homage

Goethe and Beethoven were taking the cure at Carlsbad. They spent much time together but as they were always followed by crowds of admirers they chose the most solitary spots for their walks. Soon, however, their retreat was discovered and again people followed them and passers-by respectfully stopped and took their hats off. This irritated Goethe terribly and he complained of the impossibility of escaping homage.

"Never mind, Your Excellency,' remarked Beethoven. "Perhaps these homages are meant for me!"—From Anecdotes on Goethe.

Jumping Tower Popular in Air-Minded Russia

Parachute jumping has become a very popular sport and there is a jumping tower in the Park of Culture and Rest in Moscow where you may learn to get over your first fears. The peak of the parachute is tied to a cable, which runs out as you fall.

The cost is a few kopeks a jump and the Moscow boys and girls line up and jostle one another off the hundred-foot parapet nearly all day and throughout the evening, too. This craze is symbolized by the lighting at the Cafe Sport on Gorky street—a lamp in the form of an airman with a parachute shade.

Tabby Brought Kittens Into Christmas Manger

THE celebration with the Christmas tree that touched the ceiling and had a manger beneath it, was over, and a row of little stockings were hanging for Santa Claus. Mother had just tucked the happy children into bed and by the soft glow of the nursery Christmas tree was singing Christmas carols to them.

Father was about to turn off the lights below and lock the door for the evening when he heard a faint "meow" from the cold darkness without. Upon opening the door he saw a forlorn, bedraggled tabby cat almost frozen in the Christmas snow.

"Why, you poor creature," spoke father tenderly, "come in this very minute!" For some moments father was busy making tabby comfortable. He found some milk which he warmed, and plenty of holiday food. He served kitty with generous portions of Christmas repast and then provided a soft bed in the corner, with a cushion from his own easy chair. Tabby showed her appreciation by purring and purring louder than father had ever heard a cat purr before.

Satisfied and delighted with his Christmas guest, father retired, grinning and wondering what the family would say in the morning.

Christmas morning the happy family entered the living room—the children rushing ahead, bearing their bulging stockings and shouting with laughter.

"Oh, look at the manger!" cried mother with surprise.

"Merry Christmas!" retorted father, trying to keep from bursting out laughing.

Tabby had selected the soft straw of the manger as a fitting birthplace for her litter of Christmas kittens.—Alice B. Palmer.

In the Senate

This is the second week of the special session. Bills are now coming into the hands of the respective committees. The Legislature is still determined to confine itself to the express purpose for which it has been called, that of passing Social Security legislation. Quite a number of pension bills have already come into the hands of the Welfare Committee for consideration, and a large amount of preparatory work has been accomplished by this committee. It is yet a bit too early to predict just what type of pension bill will be passed.

I know that many of you older people in my district are anxiously awaiting the results of this special session. I am glad for the opportunity I have had to confer with many of our citizens regarding their opinion as to pension legislation. As I have found the sentiment expressed, we are quite agreed that our pension must not be a pauper's pension; on the other hand, certain limitations must be fixed so that public funds are not needlessly expended. I shall give a review of the progress on this legislation in my next letter.

This time I shall confine myself to Rural Credit legislation. Many of you have emphasized the need of legislation at this session which will expedite the readjustment of loans and the resale of foreclosed farms. As chairman of the senate committee on Rural Credits and State Development, I called a meeting of the committee the other day, presenting the acute need of such legislation. Yet, strange as it seems, the senate committee was not in favor of urging this legislation at this session. For that reason no bills pertaining to Rural Credits have been reported out by our Rules Committee. Many of the members of the Rural Credits committee expressed themselves as being very much pleased with the results obtained from the legislation enacted at the last regular session.

The Rural Credits committee, however, will have a conference with the Conservator of the Rural Credits Bureau, Mr. Theo Arens, relative to progress and problems of the Department, and has also called for a public hearing on Thursday, December 19th, at which time anyone who has problems relative to the Rural Credits situation may be heard by the committee. I trust that these two meetings will result in convincing the senate committee on Rural Credits and State Development that legislation which will expedite the readjustment of loans and the resale of foreclosed farms is very much needed at this time.

Your senator, together with Senator Stiening of Clay, has introduced a bill which mainly embodies three features: first, county boards of appraisal; secondly, crop payment privileges on readjusted contracts and sales, and third, fixing the rate of interest on Rural Credit loans at 3%. Senator T. H. Johnson has also introduced a bill with a 4% interest feature and providing for district court proceedings relative to readjustments and resales. This latter bill has been introduced in the House by Representatives Melby and Erickson.

Since I have gone on record as favoring the Melby-Erickson-Dunn bill, so-called, as introduced in the House and amended at the last regular session, a brief explanation for not introducing the Melby-Erickson bill at this session is in order. The reason for not doing so is that the Melby-Erickson bill as introduced at this special session is very different from the Melby-Erickson-Dunn bill as introduced and amended at the last regular session. I have continually favored a county board of appraisal in spite of the fact that the Senate at the last session offered determined opposition to that plan, as I believe that it is about the only way whereby a speedy rehabilitation of state farms can be accomplished. The bill introduced by Senator Stiening and myself at this session, therefore, embodies the principles which have been advocated by the so-called Melby-Erickson-Dunn bill. This bill is S. F. 68. Representative Waldal has introduced the identical bill in the House. It is H. F. I.

I do not believe that we should fear a certain inevitable loss by the state at this time through its efforts to readjust excessive loans and sell foreclosed farms. This loss may seem hard to take, but when we remember that any losses sustained will soon be regained by the increased number of taxpayers and the decreased number of tax delinquencies, and when we also remember that because of the activities of the Rural Credit Department of the State of Minnesota since 1923, the average rate of interest on farm mortgages has by virtue of this competition been reduced not less than 1%, then we realize that the indirect gains have far exceeded any direct loss. Farm mortgages in Minnesota total the huge sum of $500,000,000, and since by virtue of the operation of the Rural Credits Department Minnesota farmers have saved an average of 1% in the rate of interest on these mortgages, they have actually in these twelve years enjoyed a net saving to themselves of $60,000,000. Therefore, in spite of mistakes and occasional political interventions in the Department, the Rural Credits Department in our state has been of great value.

TO BUILD COMMUNITY HALL

Red Lake Falls has secured a federal appropriation and will soon begin work on the new community building in that city. A few years ago a basement was excavated and foundation put in for a building. This was roofed over and has since been used for public gatherings as well as to provide quarters for city offices and the fire apparatus. Completion of the building will fill a long-felt want at Red Lake Falls, and will give that enterprising city one of the largest and finest public buildings of any town in northwestern Minnesota.

WILLARD YONKE WINS PIG CONTEST

A 15 year old Pennington County 4-H Club boy, Willard Yonkt, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Yonke of St. Hilaire, is the winner of the state ton litter contest, according to a communication received this week by County Agent R. M. Douglass from H. G. Zavoral, Extension animal husbandman at the University of Minnesota.

The contest is sponsored by the agricultural extension division of the University of Minnesota. The object is to raise the maximum number of pounds of pork from the offspring of one sow in the period of 180 days.

Willard Yonke raised a litter of 13 pigs to a weight of 3155 pounds on the 180 day period, an average of 242.7 pounds apiece. To do this it was necessary to practice recommended practices of feeding and management. It is of particular interest that no corn was fed to these pigs at any time, the feeds being limited to barley, oats and a small amount of middlings and tankage, in addition to skim milk.

In addition to producing the greatest number of pounds of pork, Willard also placed third in the average weight of pigs two others producing heavier pigs, but having fewer in the litter.

Among other prizes, Willard will receive a valuable medal from the Minnesota Livestock Breeders' Association. If it is possible for him to be there, it will be presented to him personally at the annual meeting of the association Saturday, Jan. 11, in connection with Farmers and Homemakers Week.

FARMER-LABOR CLUB IN T. R. FALLS ELECTS

Ward W. Long was named president of the Thief River Falls Farmer-Labor club for the ensuing year in the annual election of officers held Friday evening at the court house. Mr. Long served this year as vice president.

A. G. Anderson, who declined reelection as president, was named vice president, other officers including Herman A. Kjos, secretary Hector Bergstrom, treasurer; and Ed Odelien and Fred D. Lorentson, members of the executive committee. Helmer Halland and Otto Rehm were re-elected to serve on the county Farmer-Labor central committee.

District Judge M. A. Brattland was present at the session and discussed the cooperative movement. The club went on record at the meeting as opposing the proposed state sales tax and favoring a state old-age pension system.

Mr. and Mrs. Elroy Johnson of the Johnson Cafe, had as their guests Tuesday, Mr. Johnson's father from Audubon, and his brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Mathison of Red Lake Falls.

Regular meeting of the B. M. Club was held at the Club rooms Monday night. Officers were elected as follows, President, Ed. Christensen, vice President, Marvin Olness, Secretary, Klemens Gigstad. Frank Sweet was re-elected treasurer.

Iola Solberg, James Weckwerth, Stella Omundson and Raymond Sorvig, who attend the Northwest School of Agriculture at Crookston, are spending their holiday vacations at their respective homes in this vicinity.

Mrs. Josie Johnson of Letcher, S. D., came Tuesday to spend the holidays with her father and sisters, Henry Kalland, Helga and Amanda Kalland and Mrs. W. Janda. This is Mrs. Johnson's first holiday visit home in 31 years.

Axel Jacobson reported seeing a crow around his place last week. We were in hopes of being able to announce spring was "right around the corner", but the fifteen below weather which has since prevailed, causes us to hesitate a bit. However, Axel's story about the crow is unquestioned even if he told it during a season when doubt might be entertained.

E. M. HOFF DIES

Relatives here recently received word of the death of E. M. Hoff which occurred last month at Tacoma, Wash. Back in early days Mr. Hoff conducted a large store in St. Hilaire in the Jackson building which was dismantled last year. After selling out here, Mr. Hoff and family moved to Adams, N. D., where they engaged in farming until their retirement. For several years past they have resided at Tacoma. Mr. Hoff was a brother of the late S. M. Hoff who died here a few years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Schantzen and family spent Christmas day with Mrs. Schantzen's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hans Sande, at their farm home west of Thief River Falls.

Edgar Johnson, who teaches in the Lancaster high school, motored here Friday to look after business affairs at the Johnson Cafe of which he is part owner. He left Tuesday to spend the holidays with his parents near Detroit Lakes.

Tales About Town

Happenings of the Week, Told in Brief. News Concerning People You Know

Christmas programs were held this week in all the local churches.

A large and very orderly crowd attended the dance given here last Saturday night at the Bilden & Olsen hall.

The legislature has adjourned until after the holidays when it will re-convene to provide more headlines for the daily press.

Mrs. William Olson and son, Harwood, left Monday evening to spend Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson and family at Virginia, Minn.

Stanley Olsen, superintendent of the village school at Judson, N. D., came Saturday to spend Christmas with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Olsen.

Miss Huldah Gigstad, who teaches in the Moorhead public schools, came Saturday evening to spend Christmas vacation at home.

Miss Alice Skottem, who teaches at Climax, came Friday to spend the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sever Skottem.

E. O. Burkee of Moorhead, was here for a brief stay Monday night while enroute to Warren to look after business matters for the Federal Land Bank.

Mrs. L. E. Beebe left Saturday to spend the holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Dann, at Rio, Wis. She will also visit with other relatives and friends in that vicinity before returning.

SEN. T. D. SCHALL IS DEAD

Senator Thomas D. Schall, Minnesota's representative in the upper house of Congress, died Sunday at Washington, D. C., of injuries sustained when struck by an automobile last Friday. The body, accompanied by members of the dead senator's family, arrived in St. Paul Thursday morning and funeral services were held there Thursday afternoon. Upon Governor Olson will fall the task of selecting a successor to serve the unexpired term of Senator Schall.

Frank Breneman, employed in a bakery at Crookston, came up Saturday evening and spent until Sunday evening at his home here.

Manford Dahle, medical student at the University of North Dakota, is home to spend the holidays with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. M. Dahle.

Douglass Larson, who attends school at St. Peter, is spending his Christmas vacation here with his parents, Rev. and Mrs. H. A. Larson.

FORMER MERCHANT DIED LAST WEEK

Through friends at Minneapolis word has reached here that O. F. Post had died last week at the state hospital at Fergus Falls where he had been a patient since last spring. Details as to cause and time of death, and date of burial, are lacking.

Death of Mr. Post marks the passing of a man who was at one time one of the most influential and prosperous business men of the village. Coming here from Cannon Falls when a young man, Mr. Post went into partnership with his half-brother, Chas. Rapp and formed the firm of Rapp & Post to conduct one of the largest and strongest mercantile establishments operating in northwestern Minnesota at that time. Following death of Mr. Rapp in 1903, adverse conditions set in for the firm and continued until it went out of business in 1908. For some years following his retirement from business lines, Mr. Post was postmaster Later he was employed in stores at different points in North and South Dakota. At times when he did not have employment, he made his home in this village. He is survived by his wife who resides in Chicago, and by a son, Curtis, at Minneapolis.

Mrs. Amanda Smith and son of Chicago, came last week for a visit at the homes of her sisters, Mrs. M. Highland and Mrs. Amelia Collins.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Olsen and son motored up Tuesday from Leonard to spend Christmas with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Olsen. They returned home Thursday afternoon.

The local Red Cross met Saturday at the home of Mrs. O. Gunstad and packed the Christmas Cheer boxes which were distributed that day to people in the village and surrounding territory.

Mrs. Hilda Gigstad received the sad tidings this week that her nephew, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Hans W. Anderson of Bowbells, N. D., had passed away. The young man was 19 years of age.

Miss Helena Erdman, who teaches in the high school at Brainerd, came Friday evening to spend her holiday vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Erdman, at their farm home southeast of the village.

Because of the holiday, the creamery accepted cream only on Monday and Friday this week. The same plan will prevail next week because of New Years Day coming on Wednesday.

Mrs. S. B. Swadburgh of Portland, Ore., came Monday to spend the holidays with her father and brother, Wm. Novak and Rawlins Novak at their farm home southwest of here, and at the home of her sister, Mrs. Harold Holmes, in St. Hilaire.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Graham and baby daughter left Sunday to spend the holidays with relatives. Mrs. Graham and baby expected to remain at the home of her parents at Bertha while Mr. Graham visited with his parents at Wells. They expect to return Friday this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Damman and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Black of Farmington, and Mr. and Mrs. Chr. Stapf and son, George, of St. Paul, motored here Monday to spend Christmas at the Mrs. Hilda Gigstad home. Mr. and Mrs. Black remained here for a longer visit while the others left Wednesday noon for their homes. Miss Huldah Gigstad accompanied them on return trip and will spend balance of her holiday vacation at St. Paul, Randolph and Farmington.

WASHINGTON DIGEST

National Topics Interpreted

BY WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D.C.

Washington.—In our discussion last week of the problem facing the new session of congress, space was devoted to the Townsend $200-a-month old age pension plan. Next to the Townsend plan, probably the hottest potato confronting the administration and congress is the soldiers' bonus. It is on the doorstep and one not to be dodged. Unless all signs fail, congress will pass a bill providing for immediate cash payment of the bonus—and President Roosevelt will sign it.

Bonus Will Pass

At the present time the total number of bonus certificates in force is approximately 3,500,000. They have an aggregate value of about $3,500,000,000. But from time to time congress has enacted legislation permitting the veterans of the World war to borrow money from the government on these certificates and figures supplied by the Veterans bureau here indicate that these loans total about $1,700,000,000. Thus it is made to appear that if congress provides for immediate payment of the bonus and the President approves, there will be a new drain on the treasury of approximately $1,800,000,000. While there is no connection directly between the Townsend plan and the soldiers' bonus, the two programs are linked in one way: each proposes to take money out of the federal treasury.

Withdrawal of further money from the United States treasury for whatever purpose becomes an important question at this time because our nation now shoulders the greatest debt it has ever known. Within the last week, the treasury has borrowed an additional $900,000,000 and at the same time it refunded about $480,000,000 more. Refunding is simply paying off one bond by issuing another so that the financial transaction in the middle of December involved almost $1,400,000,000 and when that job was completed the debt of the United States reached a new peak of $30,500,000,000, or $240 for every man, woman and child of our 130,000,000 population.

Now, $240 may not seem like much of a debt for each person to assume but its payment—and debts have to be paid—devolves not upon 130,000,000 people but upon a considerably less number. The national debt, therefore, must be considered from the standpoint of the burden it places upon a comparably small number of people—those who pay the taxes.

* * *

Payment of the bonus or the Townsend old age pensions necessarily must add to that debt. While there are many authorities who insist that the national debt can go much higher without impairing the value of the bonds the government issues, the fact cannot be disputed that any additions to the present financial burden reduce the possibility of early payment of that debt.

Will Add to Debt

Then, the question of its maintenance becomes important. The debt bears interest which must be paid every year. On the present basis, the interest on the national debt alone approximates $750,000,000 per year and that interest results from probably the lowest rate we will see for many years. Indeed, the chances are that any future borrowings or refundings will have to be accomplished at interest rates higher than the government now is paying and that means, of course, an increase in the annual interest charge.

Whatever the merits are of either the Townsend old age pension plan or the cash payment of the bonus, the fact remains that congressional approval of either one or both necessarily means the piling up of additional debt. I know that the Townsend plan supporters contend that the old age pension can be made self-sustaining but it is a physical impossibility for it to be self-sustaining in the first few years of its life and that obligation necessarily must be assumed by the treasury. There is no provision whatsoever for raising the money with which to pay the soldiers' bonus. It will be simply a cash outlay by the treasury if congress orders it done and the treasury either must have new taxes or must borrow the money. There is no possibility now that either congress or the President will propose seriously the laying of new taxes to meet the bonus payment because, after all, 1936 is an election year and President Roosevelt is seeking re-election.

* * *

The history of the soldier bonus fight is one revealing consistent opposition by Presidents to its payment. From the time it was first proposed in congress in the administration of President Harding, no President thus far has been willing to support it. Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Roosevelt, up to this time, have fought payment of the bonus in a lump sum. Each had his own reasons but each reached the same conclusion, namely, that it placed too much of a drain on the treasury and consequently too much of a burden on the taxpayers of the country. Each President has held it to be class legislation—appropriation of funds of all for the benefit of a few.

Fought by 4 Presidents

With the advent of the Roosevelt administration and its New Deal policies many recommendations were made and acted upon appropriating money from the general treasury for the use of a single class. The public works and relief funds, appropriated to keep people from starving, falls within that category. No one disputes the necessity for feeding the destitute; no one argues against providing food, clothing and fuel for those unable to care for themselves and no one can take issue with the fact that when states and cities were unable to care for their destitute, the federal government was compelled to step in. Nevertheless, general funds were used for a limited number of the population.

That fact is probably the most influential at the present time when the soldiers' bonus and the Townsend old age pension problems are before congress. With few exceptions, I have found representatives and senators saying that it is difficult to reconcile support for the gigantic relief appropriations and at the same time refusal of support for the other two.

The Roosevelt administration likewise finds itself in difficulties in expressing any opposition to the soldiers' bonus because of the admitted waste that has gone on. It has added more than $8,000,000,000 to the national debt since March, 1933, and the most friendly of administration critics admit the wastage has been substantial.

* * *

Speaking of the administration's political efforts to maintain or increase party strength, Washington observers are now convinced that the President will depend upon the South and the West for re-election. If these observers are correct in their analysis of the early campaign methods, Mr. Roosevelt is trying to align agriculture and labor as the foundation stones for a vote victory. It is a most interesting circumstance, politically. It is the first time it has been attempted by the "ins" and it will add something to the knowledge of politicians if it works satisfactorily.

Campaign Plans

Heretofore, attempts have been made many times by the "outs" to align labor and agriculture to defeat the party in power. It has always failed. So that if it can be accomplished by the party in power, there will have been demonstrated how the use of public money combined with favorable legislation of a class character can be employed to maintain control of the government.

There is every reason to believe that "Big Jim" Farley, postmaster general, chairman of the Democratic National committee and chairman of the New York State Democratic committee, is not hopeful of winning the East with the possible exception of his home state of New York. Of course, Mr. Farley will not admit the truth of this statement nor will any of his subordinates make a confession that the East is turning against the President and the New Deal. Such an admission would wreck state organizations of his party, so he glibly insists that Mr. Roosevelt will carry as many states as he did in 1932 but the undercurrent of events and plans of the Democratic national committee indicate otherwise.

* * *

The success of the administration's plan to mold agriculture and labor into a cohesive political framework is going to turn largely on what the Republicans do. Thus far, it can be said that the New Deal plans for aligning labor and agriculture are moving forward quite undisturbed. The reason is the sleepiness and cowardice of Republican leadership. It has done nothing on this score showing either initiative or courage. Of course, the Republican strategy appears to be one of delay in order to avoid an early counter attack from the New Deal but political observers here—men who have studied politics for a quarter of a century and more—fail to understand why the Republican National committee is not active in raising money for the forthcoming battle.

Sleepy Republicans

If the Republicans expect to make an appreciable dent in the New Deal armor, they must go to the country. If they expect to hold the East where business leaders admittedly are anti-New Deal, the argments why they should adhere to Republican policies must be advanced continuously. If they expect to make any gains in the Middle West or in the Pacific coast area, their side of the story must be told to the voters. As I said earlier, little if anything is being done in this direction—so little in fact that an unbiased observer fails to see how Mr. Farley's statement that Mr. Roosevelt will carry as many states as he did in 1932 can be disproved.

It is generally understood that a reorganization of the Republican National committee will take place very soon.

With the Minnesota Lawmakers

Indications that $5,400,000 available for relief would be distributed before winter has unfurled its last blizzard were seen when it was learned that an acute financial situation exists in the Twin Cities and Duluth, which lack enough municipal funds to tide them over until spring.

Only $400,000 remains of the original $5,000,000 appropriated to cover relief for the year ending June 30, 1936. Legislators expressed a willingness to make available the $5,000,000 appropriation for the year ending June 30, 1937 plus the remaining money from the 1936 fund, but it was doubtful if even this sum would take care of the needs. In addition to the three larger Minnesota cities, several communities in the northern part of the state need emergency allotments

Hoping to avoid an additional financial burden on the state, a legislative committee together with city officials sped to the national capital to plead for additional aid. Little hope is being fostered, however, that such a request will be met.

Meanwhile legislators started the wheels turning on tax legislation, a house committee moving out for action the plan to collect $85,000,000 in delinquent taxes The method provides for property owners paying their back levies over a 10 year period, provided the current taxes are kept up.

Possibility of a Seabury investigation of cirme conditions in Minneapolis, an aftermath of the Liggett murder, was seen when the senate rules committee held up action to kill the proposal for such a probe until Sen. M. J. Galvin, Winona, sponsor of the project, has had an opportunity to explain his views. The bill previously had received a severe setback when it was ruled out of order at a special session.

Galvin's resolution proposed that the investigation be put in the hands of a committee of three senators and four members of the house "The Liggett murder is a challenge of the underworld to government."

The house by a vote of 92 to 19, approved under suspension of the rules a concurrent resolution to adjourn Saturday for a recess until Monday, December 30, at 3 p. m. Two amendments offered by Representative Charles Wangensteen of Chisholm, the first asking that the house reconvene the day after New Year's, January 2, and the second that it recess only to the day after Christmas, were voted down.

An attempt at reconsideration of the omnibus tax revision bill, designed to raise $23,000,000 to finance old age pensions and give real estate owners a reduction in their 1936 levies was sponsored before the legislature by Rep. W. R. Youngquist, Minneapolis, but it was indicated that the bill would need considerably more support before it can get to the floor of either house. Senator Charles M. Orr, chairman of the senate rules committee, stated that the governor was certain to veto the measure since it included a sales tax clause, and that support in the legislature would not be enough to override that veto.

With a view to increasing tax rates on chain stores, gifts, inheritances, and incomes, four new tax bills were introduced in the house. Rates on incomes in the higher brackets would be doubled under provisions of a bill introduced by Rep. A. D. Crissey, Morris, while exemptions would be lowered.

Rep. Edward Hage, Milan, introduced a measure to reduce legal interest rates in the state. On sums over $250, the rate would be reduced from six to five per cent, while on sums under that figure, a seven per cent would be permitted. Rates over seven per cent would constitute usury.

In a special message to the senate, Governor Olson asked the body to urge the federal governemnt to go ahead with the proposed purchase of state lands on northern Minnesota, composed of forest territory, the governor's sentiments being seconded in a resolution by Senator Gerald Mullin, Minneapolis.

While speculation centered on possible adjournment, the governor issued a solemn warning to legislators planning to avoid consideration of an unemployment insurance law in keeping with the federal security act. Olson stated that should the members fail to act on the measure or should they adjourn before considering it, he will not call another special session.

All indicatins pointed to the writing of the emergency relief measures, the old age pension measure, and the repeal of the expenditure control and corporate excess taxes

One plan of financing the pension bill was brought forth by Senator Louis E. Berg, St. Paul, who advocated an increase in the state liquor and wine tax. Wine levies could be boosted from 5 to 20 cents a gallon and taxes on hard liquors by 20 cents per gallon, he said, and one half of the revenue could be diverted to the pension fund

Where Does the World Get Its Supply of Oil?

Three Nations Control Output of Industries' Lifeblood.

Discussion of oil embargoes in connection with the Italo-Ethiopian war raises the question: "Where does the world get its oil?" Petroleum deposits have been found in every continent except Antarctica, but well-defined pools are widely scattered. Actually, a very few nations control the supply of this lifeblood of modern industry.

"Three countries produce about 81 per cent of the world's petroleum output," says the National Geographic society. "These are the United States, Soviet Russia and Venezuela. If all three should cut off their oil supplies, many steamships, trucks, automobiles, armored tanks, airplanes and railroads all over the world would be stopped, as well as industries depending on oil for fuel or lubrication. Great Britain, through her control of distribution of oil produced in her dominions and colonies, and in many other countries, also is a powerful factor in the world's oil situation.

Italy Produces Little Oil.

"A general oil embargo would practically threaten Italy's motors with starvation, for Italy, in the entire year of 1934, produced only as much oil as the United States does in about two hours.

"Almost 99 per cent of the world's oil comes from only twelve countries. Italy is but one of the many nations which would have to combine their petroleum resources to make up the other 1 per cent.

"While the three leading nations are making production history by their thundering progress along the oil trail, four others follow them in a group, although many laps behind—Rumania, Iran (Persia), Netherlands Indies, and Mexico. Almost neck and neck, five more follow along: Colombia, Argentina, Peru, India, and Trinidad, which produce less than 1 per cent of the world's annual output each.

Oil Also Found Under Water.

"The distribution of petroleum seems to show a slight preference for the western hemisphere and for the northern side of the equator. Nevertheless, it is found in such extremes as Iraq, where iron-muscled Kurds work in July heat at 128 degrees in the shade, and north of Point Barrow in Alaska, where frozen clods of oil-soaked earth are burned as a substitute for coal.

"Water, as well as earth, may lie above petroleum. Venezuela's Lake Maracaibo, black with oil, is studded with derricks which workmen reach by bridges of narrow planks from the shore, and is supervised from a floating camp on a barge. The Summerland field of Santa Barbara county, California, extends beyond the shoreline of the Pacific, so that derricks wade into the ocean to draw up oil from several hundred feet below sea level.

"The United States leads the world in oil production. Recently a diamond jubilee marked the industry's seventy-fifth anniversary since Col. Edwin Drake sank the country's first oil well 70 feet into the rich Appalachian field at Titusville, Pa. Oil is still produced in Pennsylvania, especially for the manufacture of lubricants.

Texas Fields Date From 1901.

"In 1901 the rich Texas oil fields were brought in, starting a branch of the industry which in 1934 produced $36,000,000 worth of oil, more than the combined production of the two next richest areas, Oklahoma and California. The latest spectacular development is that of the Louisiana Gulf coast, which doubled its production in 1934. One geologist estimates that the United States, already producing 61 per cent of the world's oil from its two million acres of oil fields, actually has more than a billion acres untouched.

"Running second, Soviet Russia's government-controlled oil production rose in 1934 to 166,000,000 barrels, with acres and acres of oil seepages undeveloped or even unprospected.

"Venezuela keeps third place at a gait which is amazing, in view of the fact that commercial production began there less than twenty years ago. Petroleum constitutes 75 per cent of the country's exports. Rumania, taking fourth place from Iran in 1934, still has many undeveloped areas.

Advice of Old Usable for Straight Thinking Today

When we become angry our thinking gets crooked, and when we grow too fond of ways that are not right we cannot properly judge what is the true course to follow. Archbishop Adalberon, when presiding nearly a thousand years ago at an assemblage for the choice of a king for Lower Lorraine, in what is now France, warned his hearers of these obstacles to clear thinking by saying:

"Let us act in such sort that hatred stifle not reason, and affection distort not truth."

Could there be a better expression of what should be the attitude of folks today?

Dog Saved 40 Persons

One of the most intelligent dogs was "Barry," a St. Bernard belonging to the famous St. Bernard Hospice in the Swiss Alps. Before he was shot by a man who mistook him for a wolf, he saved the lives of 40 travelers who were lost and near death in snowstorms, one being a little girl whom he carried to safety.

GUM-DIPPED TIRES

TIRE delays were playing havoc with this man's business. Treads wore down fast — they failed to hold on slippery pavements. The situation was serious — something had to be done to lower costs and maintain on-time deliveries.

So he changed to Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires! And now his troubles are over! For Firestone Tires are built with patented construction features and stand up under most gruelling conditions.

The Gum-Dipped cord body prevents internal friction and heat—chief cause of premature wear, and blowouts. The two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords securely lock the massive non-skid tread and cord body together. These patented features are used in no other tire.

No Need to Suffer "Morning Sickness"

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Chewed thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

Rid Yourself of Kidney Poisons

DO you suffer burning, scanty or too frequent urination, backache, headache, dizziness, loss of energy, leg pains, swellings and puffiness under the eyes? Are you tired, nervous—feel, all unstrung and don't know what is wrong?

Then give some thought to your kidneys. Be sure they function properly for functional kidney disorder permits excess waste to stay in the blood, and to poison and upset the whole system.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They are recommended the world over. You can get the genuine, time-tested Doan's at any drug store.

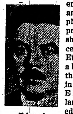
Franco-British Peace Plan Stirs Up a Big Row

PREMIER LAVAL of France and Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary, seem to have made an awful mess of things with their plan to end the Italo-Ethiopian war. As was explained last week, they proposed that Italy should be rewarded for ceasing its invasion of Ethiopia by receiving about two-thirds of that hapless country, in return for which Emperor Haile Selassie was to be granted a seaport. As the callousness of this plan dawned on the world, angry protests were heard everywhere. The English people were so aroused that Prime Minister Baldwin's government was threatened.



Eduard Herriot

Still worse was the plight of Laval's ministry, for Eduard Herriot, leader of the powerful Radical Socialists, attacked the premier's policy as inimical to the League of Nations. His party, Herriot declared, favors settlement of the war by conciliation, but only on the following conditions: First, it must be freely accepted by both parties, and second, the method of conciliation must be compatible with the covenant of the league and the principles of collective security and must be acceptable to the league.

Placed before the league council, the peace plan was assailed by representatives of the smaller European nations which fear they, too, might be similarly sacrificed in the future; and Mexico and other Latin American nations also signified that they disapproved it. Haile Selassie strategically demanded that the league assembly pass upon the proposals. Mussolini took them under consideration, asking that they be "clarified"; but the inspired Italian press said the plan would give Italy less than her armies have conquered in the Tigre, "only sand" in the East and South and a zone of influence where hostile Emperor Haile Selassie would reign.

Throughout the whole matter ran the mysterious threads of secret European diplomacy and one could only guess at the real motives of those concerned. It was supposed Baldwin and his British cabinet were weakening in the matter of sanctions against Italy because they feared Mussolini would resist by force of arms and would do tremendous damage to the British fleet in the Mediterranean with his powerful air force. Laval, of course, was still trying to preserve both his political position and the new Franco-Italian friendship. Mussolini seemed satisfied for the present to keep everyone else terribly worried.

A dispatch from the Italian front reveals the interesting fact that Henry Ford canceled the contract for 800 cars for the Italian army and thereby, according to Gen. Rudolfo Graziani, greatly slowed up the invaders on their march toward Addis Ababa.

Republican Convention Awarded to Cleveland

CLEVELAND is the place and June 9 the date selected for the Republican national convention of 1936. The national committee heard arguments on behalf of Chicago, Kansas City and Cleveland, and then decided on the Ohio city, largely for political reasons. Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas and Col. Frank Knox of Chicago both being potential candidates for the nomination, it was thought wise to hold the convention in neutral territory. Ralph E. Williams of Oregon, vice chairman of the committee, was made chairman of the committee on arrangements. Delegates to the convention will number 997, or 157 fewer than in 1932.

The national committee concluded its session with an invitation to conservative Democrats to join with the Republicans in the effort to oust the Roosevelt administration.

Gov. Talmadge Announces His Candidacy

UNLESS Eugene Talmadge, the fiery governor of Georgia, changes his mind, the Democratic national convention isn't going to be the mere Roosevelt renomination love feast that administration supporters had intended it should be. Talmadge went to Washington and there boldly announced that he would be a candidate for the Presidential nomination. He declared the Democrats would lose the election if they put Roosevelt at the head of their ticket again, and denounced the President as an "usurper" in the party.

The governor also announced that a convention of the "southern Jeffersonian Democracy" would be held in Atlanta the last week in January for the purpose of formulating a program to battle the New Deal and President Roosevelt.

He added: "The southern and border states have 360 votes in the Democratic national convention. It takes but 367 votes to block the nomination of a President. We are going to bring a lot of delegates to that convention."

Asked about his views on the Townsend plan, providing for the payment of $200 monthly to all persons more than sixty years old, the governor said he was opposed to any pension plan except one for incapacitated veterans of the World war. He favors payments of the soldiers' bonus out of the $4,800,000,000 works relief appropriation, he added.

James A. Reed Bolts the Roosevelt Camp

JAMES A. REED, former senator from Missouri and long one of the more prominent Democrats, is another who will not support Franklin D. Roosevelt for re-election. He said in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, that if the President were renominated he was prepared to vote for the Republican nominee provided the latter is pledged to stand by the Constitution and American fundamentals.

"In so acting and voting," said Mr. Reed, "I shall continue to be a real Democrat. My democracy shall not be taken away by any one man or group of men who have attained office by posing as Democrats and who have turned out to be enemies of all the Democratic party has advocated in the past and which the real Democrats of the United States still cherish."

Senator Lewis Is Willing to Be Re-Elected

SENATOR JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS, returned to his Chicago home from a trip to Russia, during which he was critically ill in Moscow, appeared to be entirely recovered, and declared he was willing to serve another term as senator from Illinois if his party wished it. He was emphatic in classifying himself as "an independent Democrat," who had, on occasions, opposed the will of the President and some of the administration's plans.

Senator Lewis disclosed his plans for a personal campaign for reduction of federal expenses by drastic consolidation of governmental agencies. The $30,000,000,000 federal debt is a matter of deep concern to him, he asserted.

Masaryk Wishes Benes to Be His Successor

THOMAS MASARYK, one of the really great figures brought out by the World war, has resigned as president of the republic of Czechoslovakia which he founded. He is eighty-six years old and wearied by a lifetime of work to revive and govern the old Bohemian nation, so in a solemn ceremony in the historical palace on a hill above Prague he abdicated. Masaryk declared he considered it his duty to help in the choice of a new president, and let it be known that he favored for the post Foreign Minister Eduard Benes, his close associate in the campaign for the independence of the country.

Eduard Benes

The chief executive of Czechoslovakia has a difficult task, for he must control the Nazis in the German minority districts, the Fascists among the Slovaks, the Hungarian irridentists among the Hungarian minority and the Communists who are agitating in all the industrial centers of the country. Mazaryk believes Benes could do this better than anyone else.

Calles Returns to Mexico and Trouble Results

PLUTARCO ELIAS CALLES, onetime "iron man" of Mexico, has returned there from his exile in California with the apparent intention of disputing the rule of the country with President Lazaro Cardenas. In order to prevent a military coup against the government, Cardenas dismissed Gen. Medina Veytia as chief of the military zone of the Valley of Mexico and Gen. Joaquin Amaro as director of the national military school. Both were among the supporters of Calles, as were five senators who were previously expelled on charges of rebellious and seditious activities.

The administration's next move was to oust four state governors.

Most leftist labor organizations lined up with the president, more than two score of them petitioning the government to expel Calles as a "Fascist threat."

Japanese Troops Seize Another Chinese City

STILL further tightening their grip on North China, the Japanese sent a big detachment of troops with machine guns to Kalgen, Chahar province, the interior gateway on the great wall. The soldiers seized the vital railway yards and closed all city gates. About the same time armed forces of the east Hopei autonomous state which Japan supports took possession of Tanhku, the strategic seaport of Tientsin. These two movements gave Japanese and Japanese-sponsored forces control of both ends of a 200-mile line extending through Chahar and Hopei provinces, from Kalgan down through Peiping, ancient capital of China, and Tientsin, important commercial city, to Tangku and the sea.

FROM MINUTE TO MINUTE

By MARTHA B. THOMAS

"ONE minute," said Corinne, "it's today. And the next—it's tomorrow!"

"And one minute," replied Bruce, "it's this year—and the next it's tomorrow-year."

She smiled at him, a little dark thing in filmy clouds of white. They circled the ballroom once more.

"And one minute," said Bruce with a deep rumble he tried to keep from sounding tender, lest someone overhear, "you're Miss Corinne Mumford, and the next," he whirled her off into a quieter corner, "you're Mrs. Bruce MacQueen!"

"Indeed . . . as quickly as that?" She smiled again but her cool voice trembled.

"Do I gather," her lashes fell on her cheeks, "that this is in the way of a proposal of marriage?"

"Bright girl! On New Year's eve I demand a new wife . . . a new life . . . and happiness ever afterward."

". . . and We're Old. Minute After Minute . . . Promise!"

"How modest," she murmured, "you are."

"Speak . . . I promise me before the bells ring out! Minutes fly . . . into hours, days . . . months and years! Promise me!" Now he held her closer, his breath fanned her hair. "They pile up and pile up . . . and then life goes on . . . and we're old. Minute after minute . . . promise!"

The violins seemed to beseech her; they cried out at her in lovely golden voices. One minute is today . . . the next is tomorrow! They danced and danced. One minute Miss Corinne Mumford . . . the next Mrs. Bruce MacQueen.

In her clouds of filmy white, whirling and whirling in her partner's arms, she tried to think. Was it the ball . . . the glitter and life and beauty of a big party? The joy of dancing as if her feet were shod with wings? The delight of hearing Bruce's voice begging her . . . talking to her, holding her more and more closely in his strong, gentle grasp? Did she love him? Did he love her? He had not said so. He had never said so. Yet she had seen him day after day. She had taken for granted their friendship, as one loves the sun, yet forgets the sun is shining.

Around and around—whirl, whirl! Perhaps one did not have to decide. Perhaps, as one minute slid silently into the next . . . one knew!

"I'm going away tomorrow," said Bruce, "to South America. A big chance."

"Oh," she gasped, "you did not tell me!"

"I only heard today."

He was going away . . . when today was tomorrow, he would be gone. A little pain climbed from her heart to her throat. She lifted her chin and looked up.

His glance, sober and dark and shining, plunged into her eyes. She quivered.

He began to sing with the music, but words of his own. "The boat sails on . . . and the wind blows south . . . I'll never come home again."

The music stopped. A hush fell on the huge ball room. The first slow peal of a bell sounded high in the air.

"Tell me . . . speak with the bells . . . on New Year's eve, Corinne!"

She turned her face away. She knew.

So, joining her small human voice with the clangor overhead, she said—"One minute Corinne Mumford . . . the next, Mrs. Bruce MacQueen."

And midnight passed into the New Year.

LOOSE THAT ART IMPULSE TO CALM UPHEAVED EMOTION

Should you have a lurking suspicion that part of your child's life is dormant or incomplete, you can find out by encouraging his artistic efforts. This opinion Florence Cane expresses in an article in the Parents' Magazine. Her belief is based on the theory that art functions in the life of the child in three ways, through his physical, his mental and emotional life.

"If art were undertaken with as firm a realization of its importance to children as writing, spelling, geography and language, I believe we should soon see a different world," optimistically declares this lecturer on creative expression in New York University's School of Education. "People would be lifted above continuous commercialism, above the vibration of guns, above boredom or despair to a world of color, light and life."

However, if we are to rise above conditions that disturb or displease us, we must become as little children and satisfy our art impulse; must banish the thought that art is something to while away the hour, something to be smiled at. We will begin to take art reverently as a great reality, a necessity in man's soul by which he takes the constructive road rather than the destructive. The art impulse, whatever form it may take, very definitely is the god-given desire to create. And, in manner of speaking, in creating we pour oil upon our upheaved emotions.

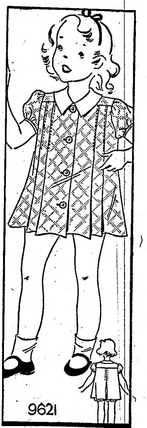
Snug Bloomers to Protect the Tots

PATTERN 9621



Warmth is mother's first thought when winds blow cold. It's then that two-to-ten-year olds need the extra protection of snug bloomers 'neath their brief frocks. This frock buttons down the front so the kiddie may button it as easily as a coat; partly stitched pleats add skirt fullness, and puffed sleeves create little-girl charm. A quick pull, and bloomers are in place. The kiddie that has both frock and bloomers of wool challis will be warm as toast the whole winter long.

Pattern 9621 may be ordered in sizes 2, 4, 6, 8 and 10. Size 6 requires 2½ yards 36 inch fabric and ¼ yard contrasting.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, style number and size. Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

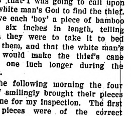
African Planter's Wife Catches Thief by Trick

The wife of an African planter tells how she turned detective—and caught a thieving native:

"While in East Africa a few months ago I employed a staff of four native 'boys.' I missed several small items—tea, sugar, etc.—and when a pound note disappeared from my handbag I decided it was time to do something. All four boys steadfastly declared they had never stolen a thing in their lives. I told the 'boys' that I was going to call upon the white man's God to find the thief. I gave each 'boy' a piece of bamboo cane six inches in length, telling them they were to take it to bed with them, and that the white man's God would make the thief's cane grow one inch longer during the night.

"The following morning the four 'boys' smilingly brought their pieces of cane for my inspection. The first two pieces were of the correct length, but the third 'boy's' cane was one inch shorter than the others. He had neatly cut it off, hoping thus to thwart the white man's God!"

WAS THAT YOU?



He—Don't you remember me from Atlantic City?

She—I tipped so many people while I was there, I can't remember 'em all.

Former Governor Wm. Langer and 2 Others Acquitted in Bismarck

Twenty months of legal conflict ended in victory Thursday for former Governor William Langer of North Dakota and two political associates when a federal court jury in Bismark freed them of charges of conspiring to defraud the United States government.

After nearly 17 hours of deliberation the jury returned verdicts of acquittal for Langer, Frank A. Vogel, former state highway commissioner, and R. A. Kinzer, former executive secretary of the state relief organization.

The jury returned its verdict at 9:50 A. M., after taking the case under instructions from Federal Judge A. Lee Wyman of Sioux Falls, S. D., at 5 P. M. Wednesday. Only three ballots were taken by the jury, it was learned from George C. Ottis, foreman of the jury. Ottis said the first two stood 10-2 for acquittal.

WEIGHING IN 1936

In the Senate

In my letter of last week I promised in this letter a review of the progress made in pension legislation.

The committee bill on old age pensions, which is Senate File No. 143, is very similar to the old age pension bill passed at the last regular session. Senate File 143 vests authority in the State Board of Control to supervise the payment of pensions in the State of Minnesota. County agencies must, however, administer the old age pension system in their respective counties. The county agency is in fact the county board of commissioners which may delegate a duly organized board of public welfare, or some other official investigator, to administer the payment of pensionh within the county. The payment of pensions shall have due regard to the prevailing conditions in each case, and in no case shall the maximum exceed $30 per month

Pensions may be granted to any person otherwise qualified who has reached the age of 65 years, or more, and who has been a resident of the United States not less than twenty-five years and a resident of the state not less than five years. The pensioner may be the owner of property not in excess of a valuation of $5,000. If, however, a person has deprived himself, directly or indirectly, of property for the purpose of thereby qualifying for a pension, such action will automatically prohibit the payment of a pension to such person. Any income in excess of $100 per year must be considered in determining the amount of the pension to be paid. If at any time the state or county agency find that any child or spouse of a pensioner is reasonably able to support such pensioner, the state or county agency shall cause action to be taken against such person or persons for the recovery of the full amount of pension paid in such instance.

With reference to county participation in the payment of pensions, according to Senate File 143, it will be required that the counties pay 25% of the amount. This is my judgment is a very unfavorable feature, as the counties have practically no source of revenue other than real estate taxation. It may, of course, be argued that the counties should have some participation in the cost of pensions in order that they may duly and properly exercise their supervision with due responsibility. However, a smaller amount than 25% will readily load the necessary responsibility upon the counties.

There will be a real fight on the floor of the Senate for a smaller participation by counties and for loading a heavier proportion upon the state which can receive revenue for this purpose from other sources than real estate taxation. I understand that there is no chance of passing a 25% participation by counties in the House, and there is strong objection in the Senate to such large participation. According to opinions expressed by many of my constituency, we all agree that the state should accept the major portion of this burden and not throw a big share of it back on the counties, many of which at this time will find themselves entirely unable to raise additional money for pension funds. We also all agree that the counties should have a reasonable supervision and deciding vote as to who are eligible for pension, as it would be obviously difficult for any state administration to fully acquaint itself with the conditions surrounding each case.

I shall be glad to hear from anyone in my constituency relative to important features of pension legislation.

E. L. TUNGSETH, Senator.

STATE CALLS FOR BIDS ON 2 GRAVEL PROJECTS HERE

Work to be Done Includes 10.2 Miles Gravel Surfacing

Bids on highway construction estimated to cost approximately $425,000 have been called for January 3 by the Minnesota Highway department, including two gravel surfacing jobs in Pennington county. The work includes a large group of county road improvements to be financed with Works Progress federal funds. Altogether, the call for bids lists 47 projects in 26 counties.

There are 25 grading jobs, one grading and gravelling, nine gravelling, two culverts and ten bridges in the call. Counties represented are Pope, Becker, Benton, Carver, Clearwater, Dodge, Douglas, Freeborn, Goodhue, Meeker, Olmsted, Ottertail, Pipestone, Red Lake, Swift, Todd, Itasca, Clay, Cook, Pennington, Nobles, Cass, Grant, Chippewa, Wabasha and Isanti.

Following are the local jobs for which bids are asked:

Gravel Surfacing

County Aid Road No. 11 between State Aid Road No. 3 and County Aid Road No. 1 in Pennington county; length 3.2 miles; 2,600 cubic yards and gravel surfacing.

County Aid Road No. 9 between State Aid Road No. 1 and T. H. No. 1 in Pennington county; length 7 miles; 5,600 cubic yards of gravel surfacing.

State Aid Road No. 11 between 1 mile west of Huot and 5 miles north in Red Lake county; length 5 miles; 2,726 cubic yards of gravel surfacing.

Bridges

T. H. No. 1 located 16 miles west of Redby in Clearwater county; 45-foot concrete deck girder span.

National Debt Reaches $30,000,000,000 Mark First Time in History

The national debt reached $30,555,791,967 last week passing the $30,000,000,000 mark for the first time in history. The new high was caused by midDecember financing operations which added $962,639,937 to the debt.

The debt was near the figure estimated by President Roosevelt for the end of the fiscal year next June 30—$30,723,000,000. The deficiat today stood at $1,606,711,375 compared wtih a year-end estimate of $3,281,000,000. Expenditures were $3,307,848,286 compared with full year estimates of $7,752,832,000.

These figures indicated to some the possibility that the public debt, when the 1936 fiscal year closes next June, may exceed the president's September estimates. But if budget plans are carried out, a half billion dollars remains to be cut off the debt between now and June 30.

New Dollar Bills Made Appearance Last Week

The government's new dollar bill made its appearance in the national capital last week. The bill, a silver certificate, carries the great seal of the United States on one side and a Latin word meaning "a new order of the ages" on the other. Eventually 775,000,000 of the present dollar bills will be replaced by the new certificate, treasury officials said. The new bill does not mark a change in monetary policy. It represents the same money in different dress.

COUNTY STUDENTS AT N. W. SCHOOL HOME FOR HOLIDAY

Winter Term at Crookston Institution Will Open January 6

With the close of the fall term, Northwest School students have returned to their homes throughout Northwestern Minnesota for the two weeks Christmas holiday. Activities of the final week included the annual inter-class song contest which was won by the seniors, with the advanced students ranking second and the juniors, third, and the get-together Christmas dinner which was held the closing evening of the term.
